Little Benny's Note Book

After school one and Shorty Judge and Pete Jenkins took Scratcher around to the firehouse to ask Mr. Riley the hookem ladder driver if we could keep him at the firehouse till we found a home for him, me saying, if he's a swell mouse catcher, Mr. Riley will.

Why, what's the most he's caught in an hour? Mr. Riley said, when he said, I dont know, we dont know him well enough, it was given by his expression I bet he's good at it.

His what? Mr. Riley said. O, you mean that-sort of look on his face. Is that an expression? I thought it was a lack of expression, O well, maybe it's one of those unconscious reasons that are known as poker faces when they occur in cards. Anyway, there's nice mice around here and not likely to be because cats are afraid of firemen. That's been proved scientifically, didn't I ever tell you about that experiment? he said,

No sir, what, when was that? we said, and Mr. Riley said, Well, a certain professor of something somewhere or other took 50 mice and one cat and one fireman in a room with 2 doors, and he placed the cat in front of one open door and one by one he let the mice loose to see who'd door it would try to escape from. Well sir, each mouse made a dash for the first door till it saw the fireman and then turned and made a dash for the 2nd door till it saw the cat, and then without exception each mouse took one look back over its little shoulder at the fireman and then kept right on going into the cat's arms. But just a same I'll ask the captain if I may send me to, I suppose you coms back tomorrow and I'll tell you what he says, but I don't be too hopeful, Mr. Riley said. Wich we're not.

HYDRO MUST BUILD

Dr. Hogg saw a case for the province assuming part of the financial risk resulting from the building of transmission lines to Northern Ontario, pointing out that they have cheap power and he asked if it were not fair for them to bear part of the province that the commission should assume some financial risk in connection with the new lines of supplying it.

Hydro Must Carry Share.

"The mines must carry a proper share of the risk but may there not be sound reason for the initiation of employment of government funds and governing undertakings in Northern Ontario in co-operation with the mining industry to the mutual advantage of both?" he asked.

Dr. Hogg explained how the Northern Ontario Hydro projects, more like the older parts of the system, were financed entirely by the services with Hydro administering them as the business of the Legislature.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, speaking on behalf of the Government, explained that the government attitude toward Hydro in these years.

"So long and to such extent Hydro management is calculated to supply energy at the minimum possible rates consistent with stability and solvency, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be left free to function and to administer the affairs of Hydro in the best interests of all the people."

Free of Politics.

"The Hydro Commission must be left free of politics. Its sole aim is that being administered or controlled for the gratification or benefit of any particular party," said Mr. Conant. "At the same time, such bodies have no legislative function or power and must depend on the government of the day and the legislature for all legislation to enable them to function."

Hydro could not be divorced from provincial responsibility, said Mr. Conant, and the province must at all times maintain some oversight over the commissions and politics.

PREDICT CAPTURE

Japanese said their army and navy air forces were heavy bombing on Nanking and surrounding territory throughout the day to back up the Japanese forces encircling the city. Army fliers were said to have attacked Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was reported in retirement.

Wuhu had been the object of Japanese attacks for 24 hours. Many fires were reported raging there.

Main Japanese forces were said to be about five miles south and east, but small detachments skirmished with outposts in the shadow of Nanking's battlements. Chinese said repulsed battles made the defensive ring around the capital had cost Japanese 2,400 casualties and loss of 13 tanks of Shanghai fame.

Chinese Fight Way Out.

Two Chinese reports remain Chinese said, fought their way out of surrounding Japanese troops at Kyring and joined the Nanking defenders.

Japanese told of the capture of Tsingtao University, Generalissimo's school in the hills outside the city. Independent foreign sources told of seeing a Japanese warship Rear-Admiral Hasegawa for an assault on Chihkiang on the way to Nanking itself.

Speculation over a possible bloodless coup in China's government at Nanking was heard as a step toward peace received a setback. Reports from Shanghai were that the government foreign office spokesman asserted General Chiang Kai-Shek never had been the mainspring of Chinese resistance, did not intend to resign "now or later."

COMMISSION

Elijah Boomhour for reeve, and Reeve Rubbell for deputy reeve, were the only nominees qualifying at the nomination held on Nov. 30th. Nominations were declared not official, three nominees for council to be elected by municipal law.

Nominees Withdraw

Reeve Rubbell, while nominated immediately withdrew his name. Messrs. Mackenzie and Boomhour likewise withdrew from the field. Following the results of the vote taken at the special meeting held on Saturday at which a packed hall voted by an overwhelming majority to request a departmental commission to administer the township affairs.

Reeve Rubbell's Comment

"We expect a reply within a few days," said Reeve Rubbell stated.

"Something had to be done. No one seems to want the job of pulling Faraday out of the $10,000 hole in which it is more or less hopelessly sunk," he said.

Asked if he were going to run for another term, Reeve Rubbell replied emphatically in the negative. "I have given my best during my tenure of office," he said, "but the load is too heavy. The township is in a terrible debt and apparently we cannot make any headway. We cannot collect our taxes and thus cannot meet our running expenses, let alone paying off our outstanding debts. It is too big a load for one man to carry."

Terms Provincial Administration

"The only solution I can see, said the majority of the electors feel the same way, is the administration of the township affairs by the Department."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

6th Tyendinaga

6th Tyendinaga—On Saturday evening Dec. 4th a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arran Conley in honor of their recent marriage. The gathering was called to order by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Bowman who acted as Chairman. After a hymn, a splendid program of readings and songs was enjoyed. Mr. William Best gave several selections on the guitar.

Mr. Walter Trecartin read the following address: Mrs. John Bradden: Mrs. Conley: It gives pleasure in meeting the guest of honor with the gifts.

Dear Frances and Orran:

This is twice within one week that we have invaded your home. The first time we hope we gave you a real reception with decorated cards and fireworks.

This time we come in a more orderly manner to bring our congratulations and best wishes on this occasion of your marriage.

Orran, we have known you for a number of years and we have found you to be a kind and helpful neighbor and we now wish you best voyage on the sea of matrimony.

Frances, you come to us a bride which should be the happiest occasion of your life. We extend to you a very warm welcome and as we get to know you better we hope that you may only add devotion for that of friendship.

As a small token of our good-will and best wishes we present to you this piece of silver and trust it may ever remind you of this circle of friends."

May health and wealth and happiness,
And every joy that cheers,
Be yours today, and with you stay
Through all the coming years.
And may God's richest blessing always rest upon your home.
Signed on behalf of the community,
Mr. and Mrs. John Bradden, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Conley.

Mr. and Mrs. Conley suitably replied. Everyone joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows." Refreshments were served and a social time spent together.

change shifts tomorrow morning and the whole system will be in full operation, stated by City Engineer Chas. Mott, busy through the night directing snow removal operations. The men are asked to report at the city hall in the morning at seven-thirty o'clock.

Flooding of Streets

Incessant ringing of telephones in the office of the City Engineer added to the note to the industry of the office. "Tell all those people who are calling up complaining that the plough has piled up drifts in front of their drive ways that the whole city is in the same fix, and that there isn't much we can do about it till we get it all cleared away by digging out downtown", reported the City Engineer.

Pedestrians braving the morning drifts along Front Street gleaned apprehensively from time to time at hanging spears of icicles from the gables and eaves of tottering buildings above. They fringed the edges of heavy curis of snow which had drifted, pillow-like over the tops of the roofs. Upon many of the buildings men tied with lengths of safety rope took up the task of removing the ice and snow with picks, while in the streets traffic while the sections of walk were being cleared below.

The law providing for snow removal on residential street requires that citizens shall commence work of removing it at least twenty-four hours after the end of the storm, stated by City Engineer Mott. "It was explained at the city hall.

"But it ever going to stop?" questioned the already winter-weary office.

Rural Dividend

Schedules were maintained on the local division of the Canadian National Railways this morning, though the snow plows have been out over the line. It was reported this morning that the fact of the storm has been felt in the eastern and local district.

The morning empty emits in these rooms of the local Collegiate and Vocational Institute was provided the fact that many scholars from rural points had the task of breasting the drifts to school from their homes, many miles away. About 400 scholars have been affected by the storm it was estimated at the school.

Snow Packs in River

Fifteen inches of snow and crust as the result of the heavy downfall of snow and slight thaw was in popular parlance "slowed to a walk" during the latter part of yesterday. The entire river was plugged with heavy half ice and snow, but was covered on the surface from a point just below the Bridge.

The storm which stranded truck drivers and travellers in the city last evening and late also provided the transient with greater opportunities for solidation of coins from citizenry. Along the business section of the city it was a case of a dime for a cup of coffee or a quarter for a meal had strengthened and there was a few opportune appeal.

Already Halted

Motorized vehicular traffic was abruptly halted near Gibson's crossing on Highway No. 2 early today when large trucks and smaller vehicles, found it impossible to negotiate through the mounting snow drifts, many of the larger trucks having to pull off the highway, as far as possible, and tie-up for the night.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine stated to the Ontario Intelligencer that highway snowplows had been ordered out and had been working heavily all night and again this morning, the department is trying to keep the highways open, but the heavy winds blow the drifts back as fast as the motor ploughs take them out. The Department ploughs have been operating in all four directions out of Belleville, but the worst experience has been to the east, in the vicinity of Bell's Creek, added Patrolman Irvine this morning.

Waiting Storm Abatement

Provincial Constable Palmateer, of Bancroft, arrived in Belleville early this morning after driving practically all night.

"In many places north of Madoc we had to shovel our way out of five foot high snow banks, but south from the Tweedsmuir road is at least passable," stated Constable Palmateer, who is in Belleville on official business and police court. "I don't know what time now we'll ever get back to Bancroft," lamented the officer today.

Awaiting the storm to abate a fleet of trucks and large transports and trailers were stationed around the market square this morning, taking up the larger sections of the parking facilities. "We'll be moving out in this storm. We might just as well join here and like it," stated one driver as he warmed up the Diesel engine of his large transport and began settling back to apparently take matters as easily as possible until he's worries.

Belleville milk vendors were on time with their deliveries this morning.

For a large part of today there were many transport drivers assembled in town awaiting to start out on the delayed journeys.

Many travelers who go from place to place by motorcar spent the day in the city, not venturing out.

GALES, BLIZZARDS

cold at Port Stanley a mill was found frozen to death in the snow-drift.

The blizzard raged all yesterday at Port Erie. Buses were unable to enter or leave the town and cars were tied up for several hours. Late in the afternoon the storm hit Welland.

Motorists were forced to abandon their machines and seek shelter in farm houses and gas stations. A garage at Welland collapsed under the weight of snow.

Traffic Tied Up.

Farmers taking milk into the Oshawa were unable to negotiate the snow-drifted highways. No automobiles or buses were able to leave Oshawa. Several cars were forced into ditches in the district as snowploughs were ineffectively to keep highways open.

Elmsdale that for a time became in Western Ontario each blocked highways in many areas. One motorist who reached Exeter was stuck in snowdrifts eight times during a short trip. Only 13 buses out of 13 members of the Grand Junction reached Stratford—the thirteenth was snowbound at Oxford for 18 hours. A bus bound from Montreal to Toronto hailed at Prescott and passengers remained at a hotel. Blocked roads at Kingston forced postponement of a hockey game.

JEAN DE KOVEN'S BODY BURIED

German Emigre in Paris Admits Murder of Her And Also 4 Men

Versailles, France, Dec. 9 (AP)—Body of pretty 23-year-old Jean de Koven, Brooklyn dancer murdered since July, was buried today buried under the porch of a St. Cloud villa to which police were directed by a 33-year-old German emigre.

The emigre, police said, confessed slaying her and four men because he resisted arrest.

Body of Miss de Koven was found under water in two feet of hard clay. Diggers first found a white leather pocket book, half open and from which protruded a fountain-pen and pencil and some letters, all identified as having belonged to the victim.

Fugitive From Military Service.

Police said the confessed slayer was Eugene Weidmann who had come to France last March to escape German military service. He led investigators to the suburban villa outside Paris, saying two of his men victims also were buried there.

Weidmann listed as his men victims a broker named Raymond Lecabre, formerly known as Leo Lyon in the St. Cloud villa; a young man named Roger Lelaidier; a taxi driver named Coutty, and Arthur Fromager, once a friend of the killer.

Weidmann was arrested at the St. Cloud villa yesterday after a gun fight with police.

Jewelry Found in Villa.

St. Cloud police dug up the dancer's body from its shallow grave under the porch of the isolated villa outside the Parisian suburb.

Some of her jewelry and money were found in the house according to police.

Weidmann, breaking down after hours of questioning, was quoted as telling police he kidnapped Miss de Koven July 24 and took her to the villa, strangling her to death.

Following this disappearance of Miss de Koven created a mystery which baffled French investigators for months.

Traffic Regulations

"My impression is that there is a large number of poorer class vehicles operating on the highways," commented Mr. Justice E. R. K. Chevrier, Dominion Commissioner.

"The poorer types are generally on the byways, not on the main highways," Mr. Justice said. Witness said he knew of many municipalities which had not enforced completely, to enforce public commercial vehicle regulations.

"I suppose the police are overworked," suggested Duncan.

"That's the trouble in most cases," agreed Fahlan.

Fahlan also intimated indicate a crying need for police personnel because of the lack of control of transportation against honest operators," asked Duncan.

"Yes," said Fahlan.

Asks Severe Penalties

Severe penalties should be imposed for infringements of labor and tariff regulations, Mr. Fahlan said.

"We should have penalties so severe that the railways and steamship companies cannot afford to take risks," he said.

He said penalties should be particularly severe for infractions of rate regulations and suggested they range from $1,000 for a first offence to license suspension.

"I would recommend that the recommend of public commercial vehicles regulations after the employer has been a second offender there be suspension of his license for six days or so on," he said.

In general, Provincial Police it was wonderful the morale overlooking operators by constant license suspension."

Fahlan said the rate structure between Ontario and Ontario motor transport industry today and Dominion, as suggested by Mr. Justice Duncan, is a matter to be due to business conditions.

The trouble is operators have not sufficient faith in each other when it comes to agreement on rates, Fahlan said.

Suggests Traffic Board

A traffic board to be established in Ontario, Fahlan said. It would be beneficial to the Government by and labor. Railways should be represented on the board.

Duncan and Fahlan regarding labor legislation. Wilson said that if codes were introduced in the industry covering hours and wages, with the Automotive Transport Association and operators both endeavoring to enforce them there be little administration left for the Provincial Government.

If members of the Automotive Transport Association had sufficient confidence in each other there would not be much need for enforcing if in connection with rates or labor codes, witness stated.

He said the Automotive Transport Association could fix a tariff and enforce it without difficulty on the Toronto-Windsor run.

AT THE BELLE

"The Last Gangster"

Entertainment of a gripping nature is offered to Belleville and vicinity audiences in the picture "The Last Gangster," the feature attraction at the Belle today and Friday, matinee daily with Edward G. Robinson back in the type of role which first made him famous as one of the screen's foremost character stars.

In the new story of a notorious gangster whose ruthless criminal career is brought to a close when he is sent to prison for ten years for income tax evasion, Robinson once again portrays his brilliant technique and consummate acting ability.

Also of interest, in connection with the new production, is its introduction to American audiences of the lovely fair Viennese "find" Rose Stradner, who plays Robinson's wife in the dramatic narrative and who promises to repeat in this country the triumphs which have heralded her as one of Europe's most popular actresses.

In "The Last Gangster" Robinson is seen as Joe Krozac, gangster overlord, who marries Thira (Miss Stradner) not because he loves her but because he wants to become the father of a son. It is not until he is sent to prison for income tax evasion that Thira learns the true ruthlessness of her husband's character and divorces him to marry Paul North (James Stewart), a reporter who has befriended her and her infant son. When Krozac finally serves his prison term he seeks out his former wife with revenge in his heart. It is his ultimate understanding of his own ruthless to be a father to his child that brings about a stirring climax to the story.

Robinson has never been greater than in his role of Krozac and both Miss Stradner and Stewart contribute memorable support as his wife and other man respectively. A uniformly fine cast also includes Lionel Stander as Robinson's chief henchman, Douglas Scott as the child, John Carradine, Sidney Blackmer, Grant Mitchell, Edward S. Brophy, Frank Conroy and Louise Beavers.

Stewart Lovejoy has done an expert job, particularly effective being the prison yard scenes and the tragic metamorphosis undergone by Robinson when he enters prison and finds himself robbed of all his former glory and power.

"The Last Gangster" is a picture for all classes and tastes. It leaves its imprint long after the spectator has left the theatre.

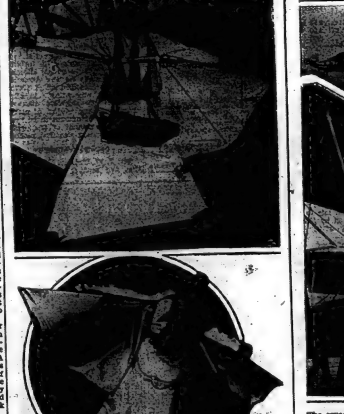
By virtue of a supreme court decision, 46-year-old William Mumchuk, of St. Catharines, Ont., sentenced last March to hang May 31, has gained a new trial by the Ontario court of appeal, will face his third trial for murder. He was found guilty of manslaughter in his first trial for the murder of William Stasiright in a line fence dispute and was convicted of the capital charge in connection with the death of Mrs. Mary Stasiright. The crown sought removal of the new trial allowed by the Ontario court; the application was denied.



Already perturbed by disorders among native residents in conjunction with Arab-Jewish disputes in Palestine, French authorities in Beyrouth, Syria, ran head-on into more trouble when rioting broke out when police sought to break up a demonstration staged by a group of Phalanges, a banned organization. The recent decision of the government to abolish all political societies in Syria was indirect cause of the rioting. The downpour is shown in full swing in front of the government palace.

The lockabum, Australia's oddlooking bird pictured (ABOVE), is called the laughing jackass and is a dread foe of snakes. The bird swoops on them, picks them up flies back into the air and by repeatedly dropping the snake, kills it.

Even the children in Japan dress and play war. Here are a few little tots, dressed as miniature generals and admirals, leading a procession to the Meiji temple in Tokio. Some day soon they will be expected to don the gold braid in real procession or, perhaps, the drab khaki of the troops in China.

Undismayed by the fate that last year claimed Clem Sohn, another famous bat-man, Manus "Mickey" Morgan, 26-year-old Californian, continues his stunt of stepping from the wing of an aeroplane thousands of feet above the ground, soaring downwards on his home-made wings until well on his way to earth and then opening his parachute to complete the drop. He is pictured during and after his 101st successful jump, made at Oakland, Calif., from an aeroplane 10,000 feet in the air. Fifty ninety seconds he glided like a grotesque bird and then descended parachute. His wings, eight and one-half feet cross and attached to his arms, are made of steel tubing and aeroplane fabric; between his legs is a webbing corresponding to the elevators of an aeroplane. The circle of Morgan pictures him from his take-off aeroplane just after he had stepped into space.

The squadron of big Royal Air Force flying boats pictured on a trial flight at the top, will shortly start on a 30,000 mile formation cruise with Sydney, Australia as their destination. They will tour the southern dominion taking part in the 150th anniversary celebration of the founding of New South Wales. The route to be followed will be much the same as that travelled by big mail, passenger and transport machines flying to India and Singapore, but will be the largest squadron flight yet attempted. Wing Commander G. R. Cayford (top RIGHT) will be in charge of one section of the flight. Mechanics are pictured (BELOW) fuelling up one of the craft which will make the trip, at the Mount Batten air harbor near Plymouth.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 8.—(CP)—Buying sentiment was far from robust today on the Toronto market and with the falling off in business prices stepped generally. Base Metals and the Western Oils registered the widest losses while interest centres in the Golds as limited mainly to a few cents each. Industrials displayed the best resistance to weakening influences.

Influenced by the late tone of the New York market and lower London metal prices, the list on Toronto exchange turned somewhat moderately heavy and chalked up net losses particularly all groups in the first three hours. Trading centred mainly in the cheaper golds.

Utilities, Senior Oils and miscellaneous issues were the weak spots in the industrial section. Steels, Foods and Beverages were irregularly higher.

The Base Metals and Western Oils were sold for moderate losses. Smelters, Nickel, Hudson Bay and Noranda dropped 1-3 to a point each in the Oils Calgary-Edmonton, Home, Okalta, Vulcan, and Anglo-Canadian registered loss of 10 to 20 cents.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Leading stocks lifting backward in today's market as the ruling power of yesterday faded appreciably.

REV. S. M. SCOTT'S CALL SUSTAINED

Presbytery of Kingston of Presbyterian Church Meets in Belleville

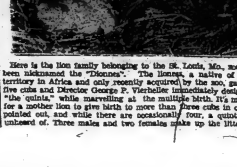
The Presbytery of Kingston, of the Presbyterian Church in Canada met in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville on Tuesday, the 7th. inst. The moderator, Rev. J. A. Koffend of Stirling presided with Rev. S. M. Scott acting as clerk for the meeting.

Kingsville Call Sustained

Presbytery having been opened in due form, a hearty call from Knox Church, Kingsville to Rev. S. M. Scott B.A., of St. Andrew's Church, Picton was presented for consideration of Presbytery. The call was hearty signed and the prayer for Mr. Scott's release from his present charge was duly pressed. A large delegation from St. Andrew's, Picton, of which congregation Mr. Scott was minister for a decade spoke most affectionately of their pastor and congregation to their appreciation of his service and of the efficiency of his ministry. Presbytery, however, decided that while he found it extremely difficult to have the pastoral tie dissolved, the called of duty overruled, and hence the decision to accept the new sphere of service.

Presbytery in turn also expressed their mind of love in his leaving their bounds and a committee was appointed to draft a resolution by way of appreciation of his fellowship service and counsel while a member of the court and minister of St. Andrew's, Picton. Upon going to Kingsville, Mr. Scott is returning to the town of his birth, baptism and youthful training.

Induction at Glendale



The Rev. Peter Jamieson having given a favourable decision with regard to the call to the Wilson, Glendale and Sunbury charge which was formally dealt with at a former meeting, definite arrangements were made for his induction as follows. Service at the Glendale Presbyterian Church on Tuesday the 14th day of December at 8 o'clock afternoon, the Moderator of Presbytery to preside and induct, Rev. J. Lewis Mowbray of Sessions, Rev. A. E. Cameron to relate steps leading to the present stage, Rev. J. C. D. Reynolds to preach, Rev. W. A. Sumler to address the minister and the Interim Moderate to address the people.

Missionary Appointed

A request from the Deaconess Board and Session of Wilson charge for the appointment of Rev. J. E. Douglas of Prince Edward Island to the pastoral missionary for one year was granted and the consent of the Home Mission Committee instructed to make application for the necessary grant to supplement stipendiary givings of the congregations. Rev. C. D. Kidd presented a financial report in which he stated that up to the present date the collections of the current year considerably exceeded those of last year for the same period. He informed the court that the budget allocation for 1938 made by the Assembly's committee exceeds that of 1937 by 20 percent, amounting in all to $500,000. Considerable discussion arose about the wisdom of making an increase of amount to be raised until the amount of the present year's allocation was first reached.

Student Attendance

Rev. J. W. Stephen, D.D. reported that the number of Presbyterian

Here is the lion family belonging to the St. Louis, Mo., zoo which has been nicknamed the "Dionnes." The lioness, a native of Tanganyika territory in Africa and only recently acquired by the zoo, gave birth to five cubs and Director George P. Vierheller immediately designated them "the quints," while marvelling at the multiple birth. It's most unusual for a mother lion to give birth to more than three cubs in one litter, he pointed out, and while there are occasionally four, a quintet is almost unheard of. Three males and two females make up the litter.

GENERAL ATTACK ON NANKING CITY AFTER ULTIMATUM

Japanese Spokesman Says City is "in Process of Falling"

NO FRONTAL ATTACK

Hand-to-Hand Fighting in Progress Within Walls

Shanghai, Dec. 11 (Saturday) (AP)—The Japanese command announced today that Kuomintang headquarters gate in Nanking, principal southern gate to the city, was captured by a detachment of Japan's Ninth Division.

By MORRIS E. HARRIS

Shanghai, Dec. 10 (AP)—Japanese struck from all sides of Nanking in a general attack which the Japanese command announced tonight had put the Chinese capital "in the process of falling."

The attack was launched when the Chinese commander-in-chief, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, refused General Iwane Matsui's Japanese terms for the city and he soon or face a general assault.

Four hours later Japanese asserted a part of the 100,000 troops encircling the city had captured Purple Mountain overlooking Nanking. Chinese positions on the hill previously had been said Japanese.

BRITAIN PASSES ANNIVERSARY

King Edward VIII Abdicated Three Months Ago Today

London, Dec. 10 (CP)—Preoccupied with quickening trade and growing armaments in the midst of a Europe in turmoil, Great Britain today let pass almost unnoticed the anniversary of the abdication of Edward VIII.

If there is any observance in connection with the constitutional crisis it probably will be a memorial service of King George's accession which brought King George to the throne.

The king, who this year will remain the father figure of royal broadcasting a message to the Empire on Christmas Day, enjoyed his first full day after several days of strenuous activity.

Queen Elizabeth and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, prepared to leave Buckingham Palace where the Royal Family will revert to the custom established by King George V, for the purpose of holding a family reunion at the Norfolk House at Sandringham.

In arix the Duke of Windsor spent the anniversary of the last day of his 325-day reign quietly with the Duchess.

Earl Baldwin of Bewdley, who as Prime Minister a year ago received the instrument of abdication signed by the King, spent the day at his Worcestershire estate.

The European dogwood produces fruits as big as pie cherries, which are relished by many species of birds that it is difficult to collect seeds.

$5,100,000 SUIT IS LAUNCHED

Deposed Longshoremen's Official Charges Screen Stars in Plot

San Francisco, Dec. 10 (AP)—Yvan F. Cor, deposed secretary-treasurer of the local Longshoremen's Union, charged in a $5,100,000 damage suit that several screen stars, labor leaders and government officials were engaged in a Communistic plot to dominate the Pacific Coast waterfront.

Filed last March, the suit was scanned in the gulf of leading the alleged plot. Film players named as co-defendants are actors Francis Lederer, Mary Astor, James Cagney, Lionel Stander and Jean Muir and director William Dieterle.

Other named defendants deprived him of the right to earn his living and blackened his character.

He asked that $5,000,000 be awarded "as general fund of the state", with $100,000 going to him for his asserted injuries.

Also attacked Harry Bridges, Pacific coast director of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and other and other labor officials for "fomenting innumerable strikes and acts of violence, murder and sabotage."

Snow Six Feet Deep Holds More Than 100 Cars, Trucks Snowbound at Shannonville

Garages, Hotels, Private Homes Filled—Bridal Couple Stranded

25 LEAVE BY TRAIN

Village Without Mail Service First Time in 25 Years

Shannonville, Dec. 10— (Special)—Over one hundred cars and trucks were snowbound in the village yesterday. Local garages, hotels and private homes were completely filled, affording accommodation to cars and passengers. The snow was at least six feet deep.

A C.N.R. passenger train was stopped about half a mile west of the village. One truck which had left Belleville at four a.m. arrived in Shannonville at eleven a.m. and at four in the afternoon was still there. Bus service was discontinued and there was no mail in the village, this being the first time the mail service was interrupted in over twenty-five years.

A young couple on their honeymoon were stranded in the village and were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Cook.

Blockade Broken at Village

Shannonville, Dec. 10—(Special)—About eleven o'clock Thursday night, the majority of the cars, which were snowbound here, brought the day managed to leave for various destinations. Snow plows of the Department of Highways cut through at nine thirty and although they became stalled at a bank at the top of the hill leading into the village, finally managed to go through after highway employees shovelled them out. All transport drivers and owners of private cars snowbound here bedded down for the night previous to the arrival of the snow plow, making McDonald's hotel a curious sight. Kitchen benches, sitting room chairs and pool room tables were utilize do accommodate the guests. Beds were filled with cars and humanity also, the majority of the guests being school boys who closed throughout the day.

STORM BATTERS AT PENINSULA, ABATES IN EAST

50 Hours' Blizzard Still Pounding at Port Colborne

TOWN SNOWBOUND

Freighter Hovers Before Harbor at Port Colborne

(By The Canadian Press)

Blizzards still struck with renewed intensity at the Niagara Peninsula today, but Colborne bore the brunt of the gale-borne snow that blocked the Lake Erie town in the battle against the elements in other sections subsided as the tide lands settled down to a struggle to maintain communications.

Port Colborne, first victim the storm has battered Port Colborne, piling snow to a depth of four and five feet over roads leading from the town. Residents reported a telephone early today the Blizzard was the worst in the history of the district. They said the force of the wind varied from 36 to 50 miles an hour.

Improving Conditions

In other sections of the province where blizzards have blown since last week-end, the situation was improving. The storms appeared to be bowing Saturday as they left the Lake Erie belt many villages and towns cut off by snowdrifted roads from other points and closed and crippled transportation lines.

The Hamilton and Toronto districts have escaped the storms and only a few inches of snow have fallen over Northern Ontario. There, the weather bureau says more or a help than a hinderance to skiers, as the fall consists largely of snow as an aid to their operations.

Storm Abates in East

Eastern Ontario, from Port Hope to Quebec was hit hit by the blizzards, reported last night as abating, 50 hours all snarl traffic and communications was halted by order of police. MOTHER PLEADS FOR HER SON

Edward Truesdale is Sentenced to Reformatory

"He's been a good boy for three years now. He's my sole support and I need him to help me," pleaded a mother in police court today after Edward Truesdale, 20, had been convicted of a charge of vagrancy and sentenced to serve not less than six months nor more than one year in the Ontario Reformatory at Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C.

Truesdale appeared for sentence after he had admitted last week on a charge of vagrancy. Crown Attorney D. S. Gillmor read to the court a list of previous convictions registered against the accused, which included two convictions of theft some years ago.

"This man was found in a dark alley by a police officer and he ran away when the constable approached him", pointed out Mr. Donnan to the Bench. The court's sentence follows:

"I'm his mother, may I speak a word to the Court?" suddenly cried the boy's mother from a row of seats.

"Certainly", replied His Worship. The elderly woman, showing outward signs of emotion, approached the Court and entered her plea for leniency.

"I suggest you take the matter up with the parole board," added Mr. Donnan. The woman immediately went into a conference with Adjutant Alderman of the Salvation Army, regarding the suggestion the Army officer being present in the court.

Roger Million, French, Sought as Gang Leader Who Hired Girl's Killer

Three Escape Police Net After Mysterious Phone Call

KILLER ARRESTED

Eugene Weidmann Confesses to Strangling American Dancer

Versailles, France, Dec. 10 (CP)—Henri Vidal, 21-year-old Parisian, was an accomplice of Eugene Weidmann in the murders of Jean de Koven and Genevieve Millon, police announced before he was caught.

Paris, Dec. 10 (AP)—The asserted scarfaced chief of an abduction-death syndicate, whose "expert in murder" slew Jean de Koven, American dancer, escaped a police net that was thrown around today by police along the highways of south-eastern France.

With him, police said, were a woman and a third person. Police at first had announced their capture, but later changed this to say they have had "hot" clues to hotel at Nantua last night.

Roger Million-Coti.

The trio fled, police said, after a mysterious telephone call to their hideout.

Leaving all their baggage behind, the three left Nantua in a big automobile.

Authorities identified the alleged leader of the gang that sought to build an efficient, profitable business in kidnapping and death as Roger Million, a Frenchman.

The authorities believed Million to be the man who employed Eugene Weidmann, 28-year-old German ex-convict, as killer for the gang. Weidmann has confessed killing Miss de Koven and four men, one of them a member of the supposed syndicate in crime. Weidmann was an immigrant to Canada, but returned to Europe in 1930.

Five Killings.

The killing of Miss de Koven and Weidmann's former associate, Peter Kuhlmann, but two of the confessed German's confessed victims were unidentified. Police said the two men fell under his gun, bullets in their heads.

Investigators expressed belief Million, the alleged gang leader, could be identified as a man with whom Weidmann talked in the lobby of a Paris hotel last July before he lured the Brooklyn dancing girl to the hotel's "villa in suburban St. Cloud.

The detectives also believed Million and his blond mistress were the man and woman who passed several of the bodies of victims in trunks in cheques which Weidmann took after slaying the dancer.

There was still the possibility, the officers said, of another victim being found the woman with two of Weidmann's other victims—a taxi driver and a tradesman.

King George VI to Broadcast Message on Christmas Day

Announcement is Made Officially of Empire Address

AT 10 A.M. (E.S.T.)

London, Dec. 10 (CP-Havas)—The king will broadcast a Christmas message to the Empire from Sandringham on Christmas Day, it was announced officially today.

This year's message probably will be 10 a.m. (11 a.m. E.S.T.).

The King's message to his peoples relayed round the world by radio, has become a feature of Christmas observance in many Empire homes after the late King George V adopted the practice in 1821.

There was no broadcast last year as King Edward VIII's 11-months reign ended two weeks before Christmas and it was felt a message from his successor would be out of place while the abduction excitement was still fresh.

King George V's last message was on Christmas afternoon of 1935, less than a month before his death.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Tidmarsh

Science Service Meteorologist

Much of the mystery and superstition relegated everywhere in the early centuries of the Christian era to the realm of the weather magician in that far-away kingdom of Congo his Khan who lived in Monguilo in the central Sudan. When the weather was bad, his weathermen, enchanters and astrologers had the job of preventing clouds or storms passing over the monarch's palace. Pride believed that the astrologers did this by the help of the stars but the astrologers tried to make the people think that they performed by reason of their own sanctity and help of God. They operated with a stone of so-called magical virtue hung over the palace by water and aided by appropriate incantations. They also kept their arts in time of war to help their emperor.

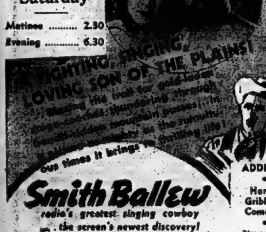
RIVER CHANNEL BLOCKED AT END BY ACCUMULATION OF ICE

Its channels blocked at the lower end by heavy masses of anchor ice which floated downstream yesterday, the Moira River has already experienced a rise of about three feet in its level at the lower mouth and for some distance upstream.

Little apprehension over the raising of the river, however, is felt by the local department of public works.



"If the river freezes over now we think there is sufficient depth of water underneath to carry off in natural flow, there will be little fear of a flood next spring." It was explained by the department. Later when the water volume drops, there will be plenty of space left for the currents, and no fear of a flood overrunning the top of the ice which, would expose the bottom if only a shallow depth was registered.

...A new breed of pheasant thought to have drifted down with the ...storm ...ade its appearance in the northern townships of Hastings County ...recently, it was learned. Reports of ...the first of their kind to be seen around these parts. Other men have reported the presence of the birds in other parts of the county.

"Speaking of pheasants," Reeve Bronson contributed, "if they keep increasing in our township, there will be no scarcity of the birds next year. They are rapidly increasing in numbers and something may have to be done about it."

A lover of hunting in all its phases, the genial reeve of the township has traveled far in his favorite topic.

Abundance of game in the north contributed to one of the best hunting seasons in years, he stated, with deer, rabbits, wild fowl, and other game," he said.

"Every farmer's fireside" when five in the comparative comfort of the southern parts of the county, "will be interested in getting all the facts of deer," he smiled.

How about bears, were they as plentiful as was reported?" he was asked. "Yes, they were, but some of our reporters must have had a few nightmares when you wrote in your paper about the damage done by killed deer by ravenous bears of the north. SNOW COSTS CITY $400 IN REMOVAL IT IS ESTIMATED

Snow Barricades Broken Down by Modern Plows

LOCAL SITUATION

Highway Traffic Opens East And West of City

Converted into terms of cold cash, this week's storm cost the city of Belleville in the neighborhood of $400 in snow removal, it was estimated by the department of public works today. Any further snowfall will increase this amount necessary to be spent, progressively.

Engaged through the day in clearing the streets of snow, the city property, cross-walks on residential streets and through the congested sections, the motor wheels of cars again uselessly during the day in front of the local banks, a shift of fifty men hired by the city for the snow removal work had been changed this morning to the second shift of about forty men and several trucks, making a total of snow to the river banks of the Moira where it will be present being dumped in.

Last Year Recalled

City Hall records reveal that this year's storm came as about the same time as that last year's heavy downfall which disrupted the routine of the city's ordinary methods of living much in the same manner as this year. On the 29th of December 2nd, the year's first snowstorm commenced at eight o'clock in the morning and continued falling throughout the day until eight o'clock in the evening. This fall was comparatively light, and on the following December 11th, the city sweeper again made its rounds of the streets, creating a seasonal record. On December 20th, snow fell again, this time necessitating the use of plows in the city, and a force of 35 men and twelve trucks cleaning the snow from the downtown section.

Today, after having dug itself out of one of the heaviest storms on recent record in this district, the city was again in the throes of trying to normal. Residential streets were rapidly being cleared and shovelled, and cars and trucks were cutting their way through the heavy drifts.

Traffic is Resumed

Traffic was again being opened up on No. 2 Highway east and west of the city, though in the district of Shannonville and east to the village of Brighton, high drifts were still encountered. Department of Highway trucks worked continuously through the night and today the big roads open in spite of the drifting of the powdery snow.

North of the city, No. 37 Stoneboro south the same drifts were still reported, though bus service in and out of the city are being maintained. Side roads in the township immediately surrounding the city were reported in bad shape. Cutters and bob-sleighs were still being used by rural residents hauling milk and cream instead of the less dependable car and truck. Mail on rural routes about the city is also being handled by cutters in cutters and sleighs. Rural school buses record were again being filled with regular attendance of pupils. This in the city the call of the Collegiate was about up to regular numbers.

Snowplows Get Through

Warned off the roads yesterday by officers, huge trucks and transports which had been snowbound on the highs north of the city had completed the trip today and were much in evidence on the Market Square where they were being met by motorists who appeared to be holding an informal convention as they compared road and weather notes.

Bewery trucks and transports predominated, carrying stocks for depleted supplies to the local warehouses. Travelling salesmen were also found in the city during the day yesterday, cheated out of dollars and took the road again in their machines in an effort to reach home offices before the week end.

Conditions in the northern parts has not changed. The area from Foxboro-north which largely caught the blizzard is still enjoying but little snow.

The storm boosted employment figures in the city yesterday and today, according to the local unemployment agency. The city's workless, given temporary jobs at snow shovelling duties, were registered by some of the odd job men that work had been taken from them by school children offering to clear householders' walks for the customary quarter.

THIS WINTER

Lovers of oldtime winters had their hearts cheered as they saw winter setting in in the ancient manner in the past few days, bringing the snow which is so linked up in thought and business with this portion of the world and which is so essential to the fields and the harvests of the year to come. Though the jingle of the sleigh bells has gone, its place taken by a blast of a raucous coarse-throated motor-car horn, winter needs snow to satisfy the inhabitants. To the average Canadian what would winter be without snow? Variety of a pleasant character is the mark of the climate here, perhaps winters a little long and severe, but springs all the more enjoyable, first April with its gurgling waters, then those lovely months of May and June followed by July and August with warm weather and all the associations which are so well known as vacationing, sports and of course agriculture and early harvesting, then by September with the approach of the loveliest autumn in the world. And then to winter again. So runs the year in this favored land. To the average Ontario native or dweller, this land is peculiarly blessed in its seasons and even with winter when it brings the snow which blankets the earth, giving a new color scheme which only a north land can possess.

CHRISTIANITY IN GERMANY

The situation in Germany causes concern to Christians of not only the Reich but also the rest of the world, for the open conflict of the State with Christianity. Nazi paganism and talk of return to Tuesonic dietic but beloud the scues which is a political one for the Nazis feel Christianity stands in the way for Christianity takes definite stands on many points in the social life. Naziism cannot accept the tenor of some Christian teachings naturally enough because Naziism means force and restraint of liberty.

There is an apparent effort to undermine the Christian church and the fear is held for the effects upon the people of Germany. A loyal and patriotic body of Germans, the chaplains of the Reichswehr, has presented to Hitler a "memoir regarding the effect of the church struggle on the moral preparedness of the German people". Here is what it declares:

"The new breach that divides the German nation is the breach between National Socialism and Christianity. The real source of disunity, however, is not religious or ideological differences as such. (It is) the appearance of the State's forces in such differences. A future war will find the German nation in the midst of the bitterness brought about by the conflict between Christianity and National Socialism. The effect of this struggle on moral preparedness is evident."

This statement by the army chaplains is significant. And then last Sunday Catholic Bishops expressed their views clearly. The Bishop of Berlin replied to the attack of the Minister for Church Affairs, Hanns Kerrl, in these words: "One anti-church measure follows another. . . . In increasing measure a spirit hostile to Christianity rules the public, and conflict of conscience increases. By pictures, caricatures and propaganda pamphlets, an attempt is made to work on the minds of the German people which must in the end drive all reverence for the church and Christianity from the minds of the young. It is a fatal mistake to suppose that the nation's welfare can be promoted by the destruction of Christianity."

BRIGHTER PROSPECT IN PALESTINE
(Montreal Gazette)

There is in the news from Jerusalem ground for hope that the Jewish and Arab leaders are making progress in their peace negotiations. All along it has been stated that certain of the Arab heads have been opposed to violence on the part of their followers, but it has been repeatedly made evident that the zealots were not inclined to heed the advice of the moderates. Because of this unfortunate attitude there have been many murders and other crimes of violence. In the chaos to which it referred worst and the police also have been attacked from ambush. High officials have been assassinated and the British authorities have had a most difficult task in trying to maintain peace between the rival factions. In the House of Commons recently Mr. Ormsby-Gore was called upon to answer numerous questions as to the extent of the violence in Palestine and the measures taken to control the unrest.

In Palestine, for obvious reasons, military courts have been set up for the trial of cases of discharging firearms at any person, carrying arms, bombs, etc., sabotage and intimidation. The emergency thus is being met and when a military court imposes the death sentence for murder the finding is studied by the High Commissioner when not taken to the Court of Appeal. By these means the feeling of unrest is being allayed and the strength of authority proved. Meanwhile Arab and Jew leaders are seeking a common ground of understanding through conferences. In this there is justification for the hope that the present troubles will be permanently settled.

PEACE OUT OF CHAOS

This earth is but a place of time and tide,
Where people turn and toss, unsatisfied,
Hardly a moment's calm to think or pray
Today or yesterday.

We pray for Light, but not these earthly beams
That quickly come and go, until earth seems
A desert void of love, both vast and drear,
With not a voice to cheer.

But give us beauty, pleasantness and peace,
And from our anxious cares, O bid us cease,
That life's most precious thing may for us be
Its gracious harmony.

JUST WHAT KIND OF A THRILL would we get if we could close the pages of the past and see a railway train for the first time? Not only a railway train but the many other things which gave such a superb thrill for the first experience. Hence we can imagine the thrill some tiny tots got at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, upon reaching mainland for the first time in their lives on a lonely island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence where the father is a wireless beam operator. Margaret Grace aged six, and Ronald William, aged five, are the children, and among their firsts were a horse, automobiles, trolley, etc. George Laing, wireless beam operator on Cape Whittle, a small rock six miles from the mainland, boasts a lighthouse and a wireless station. Neighbors could not afford to come and visit with unbom there, and there could be no question of caste. Mrs. Laing, a native of England, spent seven years on the "rock" and the children's first trip out was a delight to the parents as well as the children themselves. The wife of the lighthouse keeper, Mrs. Fred Osborne, and two children, accompanied Mrs. Laing to the mainland at Belle Island, on the government steamer Aranmore, to prither with Mr. Thomas, wife of the lighthouse keeper at Belle Isle Southwest, who left for Fort Burwell, Ontario, to spend the winter with her son, a radio operator there. During the winter months, about nine months in the year, the Laing family resided in the village of Harrington Harbor, the children attending school. In the village is a Grenfell Mission, a hospital, an Anglican and United Church. Two steamers call each year at the rock where Mr. Laing is stationed, and once an aeroplane landed there with the mail.

CANADA'S FRONTIER IS BEING THRUST BACK as hardy pioneers uncover the mineral wealth hidden so long beneath the surface of that great stretch of country north of the Canadian Pacific Railway main line, as well as forest, wealth and agricultural promise. Thinking and daydreaming along the lines of Canada's growing greatness—harking back to that day in 1908, or thereabouts, when the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway was officially opened through the land of the "stunted pine", as one doubting politician had described it—to the opening of the branch of the same railway into the Porcupine Gold Camp, the first passenger train arriving in Golden City, the day before Dominion Day, 1911—on to Moosonee on the shores of Hudson Bay, later—and a few days ago the first official train reached (or nearly) into the A.D'Or, Quebec, and its twin town of Bouramaque, upon an extension of the Canadian National Railway, amid waving flags and shouting citizens. Val d'Or lies at the base of a triangle formed by the T. & N. O. Ry and the C.N.R. transcontinental line. Development of mines in this area formed the settlements and led to the railway displacing as a carrier of bulk freight the aeroplane service thus far depended upon. The railway will be extended farther to give service to other new mines and newer towns. This branch line will be continued west to Noranda where it will link up with the T. & N. O. Nipissing Division.

That Body of Yours

IODIZED SALT AND GOITRE

In 1924, 36 per cent of all the Detroit school children showed enlargement of the thyroid gland. In 1932 only 1 per cent had any such enlargement. Thus in 1924 one in every three children had enlarged thyroid gland (simple goitre), in 1932—eight years later—only one child in a hundred had this enlargement.

What had brought about this great reduction in the number of cases of enlarged thyroid gland?

Dr. Roy D. McClure, Detroit, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states that putting iodine—sodium iodide—in the regular table salt not only reduced the number of cases of enlarged thyroid gland from 36 to 1 in a 100 school children, but reduced by more than one-half the number of operations for the removal of the enlarged thyroid gland—goitre—in seven large southern Michigan hospitals. In 1926 there were 1453 such operations and in 1933 only 591.

Dr. McClure also states that during the first two or three years after the iodized salt was introduced there appeared to be an increase in the number of cases in which a simple enlargement of the thyroid gland became even larger and presented serious symptoms, sometimes requiring operation but that since 1936 there was the above mentioned notable drop in the total number of all cases and so a great drop also in the need for operation. Those investigating the results of iodized salt state that they now see no cases which show the slightest ill effects from the use of iodized salt.

The point to remember of course is that this simple type of goitre is found only where the drinking water and the soil of the territory are lacking in iodine, as what is known as the Great Lakes district. In districts where there is plenty of iodine in the water and soil, iodized salt need not be used by the general population to prevent goitre. This does not mean that iodized salt or iodine in other forms should not be used in districts other than those poor in iodine, but those with enlarged thyroid glands in other districts where water and soil contain plenty of iodine should not use iodized salt or other iodine preparations unless they are prescribed by their physician.

Autumn's Wild Geese

In October, wheeling in great circles against the blue, come the wild geese. This is one of the signs that the great tide of autumn migration has begun. High above the inlets and islands, shown on the map of Europe as Denmark, the gray wedge of birds cleaves the wind necks taut and bodies stretched out long and thin. Sometimes they rise and break, but down the wind bear the birds, irresistibly thrusting forward to their destination.

In one of the numbers of the Geographic magazine, called "The Countryman," Richard Perry proposes a theory to account for the prevailing autumn trend from north to south of the migration flights of birds. He suggests that, at the time when the first ice age set in, there was a huge resident bird population in the Arctic countries. With the spreading of the ice-cap, these birds would be compelled to fly south in winter in search of food. Then, when the ice crept downwards, the whole Arctic became uninhabitable and the birds retreated farther and farther south. But always they returned to the Arctic in the spring period, the reason being that in no other part of the world did they find conditions of instances more propitious for the breeding season. With the passing of the ice age, the writer imagines that the migratory birds began to press north again. Then during the passage of millions of years and through three or four distinct ice ages, the migration movement was established until it became an inseparable part of the migrant's life cycle, even when conditions ceased to make it necessary.

Army Lacks Recruits

There is a shortage of 1,000 officers and 30,000 men in the British Army, which is 27,000 under its authorized strength of 226,000, while the territorials, numbering 132,867 on Oct. 1, were only 78.5 per cent of their proper strength.

These figures are cited by Wm. H. Stinemann, in his London cable to the Chicago News, and he explained the situation is caused by three things. First: Britons have been told for 19 years that Britain was not going to have war again and it is hard to convince them they should prepare for one. Second: Officers pay, ranging from $2.75 a day for a second lieutenant to $12.25 for a colonel, is "scarcely enough to pay necessary bills in the mess." Finally, it is stated that "the army is paying for its traditional practice of drawing its officers from the comparatively small public school class," and many such parents can't afford to send their sons to Sandhurst and Woolwich.

Army rations and service conditions have been improved; if they fail to bring recruits, consideration will have to be given to a raise of pay for all ranks; abolish the six-year enlistment for a long-service colonial army and a short-service home force; or "in the last extremity and with great difficulty it could introduce conscription."

Meanwhile the army is being well equipped, and "all units are very carefully and completely mechanized."

Five Cents an Hour Increase For County Road Workers Decided at January Session

Opinion Evenly Divided in County Council After Lengthy Argument

NOW PAY 30 CENTS

Point of Order Called to Get Members Back on Subject

A simple statement at the foot of the report of the chairman of roads and bridges requesting an expression of council regarding a proposed increase in the wage rate of labor in the county next year exploded the argumentative fuse that's set off the stiff and fiery outburst of debate among members this morning when Reeve J. J. Churcher asked opinion of council regarding this matter, during the afternoon session of Hastings County Council in Shire Hall yesterday.

Muddled at first, practically an even split of opinion among members of the council regarding the proposed five cents an hour increase for day laborers with the added argument to fever pitch, Dignified Shire Hall rang with the slambang tones of more or less excited councillors as they strove to express themselves heard. The argument assumed a flamboyant vein as the remarks got directly associated with the question at hand, gradually veered the subject toward things not connected until it looked as if the situation would not be relieved without the aid of a competent dairyman, cheese maker and cattle-raiser. Finally the speaking subsided until the January session.

"Need Not Threatened"

Members expressed their opinions in no uncertain manner and the solemnity of the council chambers was outwardly disturbed. Real action threatened, with various members oblivious to their feet talking and gesticulating at each other in a lively frenzy. Reeve Bristol rose to the occasion. "Your honor, I rise to a point of order," he said. The noise subsided. Members sat down in their seats. Quiet reigned until the chairmen Shire Hall chambers.

Opinion regarding the proposed change in wages was about evenly divided.

Reeve J. L. Churcher felt that 25 cents per hour was not too much for work on the roads. He contended "many men have responsibilities that the farmer does not and 25 cents per hour will not take care of," he said. The Department of Labor pays higher wages than does this county and it is not a nice thing to have men gossip around that they are getting two different scales of wages. It would be to the well-being of all if the present scale could be increased from 20 cents to 25 cents per hour."

Reeve Bristol agreed with the former speaker. "I believe it is possible to get more work out of the men if the wages were increased," he said.

Reeve Hubbell: "In Faraday we are paying $2.25 to $2.50 per day with board. I think that is even better than paying 25 cents per hour and have the men board themselves. I think our wages are high enough."

The teams working on graders are getting 75 cents per hour, while those which are not are getting 35 cents, chairman James Moore, Roads and Bridges Committee stated. If this scale is raised it means that we will have to increase the mill rate by one quarter. "I think we can get as much work out of the men at 30 cents as we can at 25 cents," he said.

Champions the Rates.

At this point Reeve Linn of Marmora jumped to his feet. "It is a shame to ask a man to work for 20 cents an hour with a pick and shovel," he shouted. "You ought to be ashamed of yourselves."

Members leaned in their seats. For a second silence reigned. Then Reeve Martin, Tyendinaga, arose. "This is a free country," he said among silence. "Any man who does not want to work for 20 cents an hour and thinks he can get more elsewhere is at liberty to do so. He is not compelled to do so. We can get men enough to work the entire county system at 20 cents per hour."

Reeve Moore: "We can get more than enough men at 20 cents. They are falling over themselves to get a job at that rate."

Reeve Linn: "What I mean is how can a man support a family and live on 20 cents an hour? They can't do it, and you know it."

Reeve Hubbell: "We increased our wages this year and our foremen fell down. We are getting poorer results."

Deputy Reeve Reeve Heard

Reeve Sayers: "We only paid 20 cents an hour, but we contended that spading out of the work was better. We tried an experiment in Tweed and got a 30 cent hour out of men and no difference in the work. However, if the council raises to 25 cents we are in favor of it."

Reeve Rollins: "I agree with Mr. Sayers in part. I think work should be spread among more men at 20 cents than a few at 25 cents."

Reeve Bristol: "You talk about men not having money to pay taxes. If you pay them more, you will get more labor, and if you get more labor you get achieved furnace, you will find labor costs reduced."

Reeve Dr. Lamb: "It is a case of paying now or living and you can't do anything without money. When the council being decent. Men cannot live on $1.25 a day and maintain a family. It is not a case of supply and demand. The government has been a decent employer and I think this council should do the same."

Reeve Larkin: "I am not against the increase, but where is the money coming from?"

Reeve Bristol: "If a man cannot do more work for the farmer get better prices."

Reeve Rollins: "If you are going to stimulate things by building roads, by giving the farmers more, it will all be on the road."

Reeve Woodley: "It is not the question of more, it is the unemployed who are agitating."

Reeve Linn: "I speak at Rate Deputy Reeve Robson: "We can get men for 20 cents an hour and but if we pay men on roads 25 cents an hour we can get better results. A man in summer can't afford to pay $2.00, which the men will demand. The farmers' income is not sufficient to warrant paying much at 25 cents an hour. It will be a hardship to the farmer if the county pays men 25 cents per hour."

Reeve Jordan: "Prices of foodstuffs are much higher than a year ago. We must take the fact into consideration. I feel the time has come when wages should be raised."

Reeve D. Ketchesen, Frankford: "I suggested this increase at a meeting of the Roads Committee held in Bancroft in June. It was defeated."

"The rates means only 3½ cents more to the county. I am decidedly in favor of the increase."

Pay What They Are Worth.

Reeve Hollist: "I have listened to this argument and discussion with interest and amusement. We pay our laborers 20 cents per hour, and have every sympathy with the farmer but if the farmers' sons want work on the roads, get that what should the man who has to support a family. If wages are not raised, I cannot see how the working man can live."

"I have always advocated that men should be paid what they are worth," said Reeve Rollins, "and I think that 25 cents an hour is not an unreasonable wage. If men won't work for this, then let them take any kind of a job." I personally, am four-square for a 25 cent per hour scale. Men cannot be comfortable nor contented either at the lower scale of wages."

Reeve Larkin: "The majority of these men do not want to be self-sustaining. We pay 15 cents an hour and we have no one starving in Tyendinaga. Our relief amounts are comparatively $150.00. There is two much sympathy wasted at times."

Reeve Thompson: "While it may mean 1-4 mill increase to provide for the raise in wages, I am in favor of the increase."

Reeve Brownson: "This thing has been discussed for the past four years. I don't think it will cause any injury to anyone if we grant the increase in wages, to 25 cents per hour. If an extra five cent per hour is going to negate this country, then the financial condition is not what it has been reported to be."

"I have handled men," continued Mr. Bronson, "and if men cannot live on the wages they receive and then they have no business on the roads."

Reeve Sayers: "How much has the cost of living gone up?"

Reeve Rollins: "Roughly speaking, I would say about 20 percent, the index of the cost of living."

Cost of Living Discussed.

At this point a discussion ensued on the cost of living brought up by Reeve Rollins, and the latter and his efforts to induce better prices.

Deputy Reeve Robson: "What are you talking about, milk is down, eggs are cheaper now than they have been for a long time. But the fact remains that we are getting only half of the wages we got a year ago."

Reeve Rollins of Wellington jumped to his feet. "You are a farmer then why don't you feed more?"

Reeve Rollins: "Then you should be getting more milk."

This remark set fuel to the flames. Reeve Robson immediately jumped to his feet. "Mr. Speaker," Reeve Rollins, said: "We stand corrected if a farmer what or what not to do."

Drifting into things agricultural, members forgot temporarily the dignity of the council chambers. Councillors jumped to their feet as the question of the prices of butter and far remote from the questions of the day are concerned, was quoted. It looked for a minute as if things might get out of hand, but Reeve Bristol saved an awkward situation when he suddenly arose to his feet and called for a point of order. Following the calmness of the council members after a more or less hectic verbal struggle, Reeve Jordan, Thurlow, made a motion that 25 cents per hour for man and teams with the exception of foremen.

Amendment Moved

Reeve Woodley moved in amendment to the motion, that the decision and rate of wages to be paid be left to the Roads Committee, the carried.

At this point Reeve Thompson introduced a motion. "Should not this question be left until the new council takes office? We have been here a lot of us who will not be here."

Reeve Sayers: "I agree with Reeve Thompson. If I can persuade him to withdraw my motion, I will gladly do so."

On motion of Reeve George Jordan, Thurlow, question was laid over until the January session.

The question of keeping roads of the county open during the winter months came in for considerable discussion. The northern Reeves felt that special assistance should be given them to keep the Fort Stewart road open. The limited funds of snowploughs prohibits any action in this respect, Reeve Moore, stated.

Argument both pro and con featured this question with representatives of the various municipalities of the county applying for this service. The outcome of it that a motion was passed to the effect that business of clearing the roads of the county from snow be left to the Roads and Bridges Committee.

Council adjourned to meet this morning.

Chronic Constipation Made Life Miserable—Is Happy Now

"I never considered myself a victim of constipation, but I always felt tired, dull and headachy. I had a bad taste in my mouth, a coated tongue, and my appetite was poor. I felt as though I had all the time, Couldn't eat. Didn't sleep. Worked with difficulty. Was nervous and grouchy. I got no relief until I tried Fruit-a-tives. Since using them I have had no trouble with constipation. I have taken a number of boxes and they have done me a world of good. It's wonderful what they have done for me. I feel glad to say that I am now well and strong. I'm glad you may use my letter as a testimonial."

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, Dec. 11

By CENTENO

A day of conflicting auguries is indicated by the prevailing planetary configurations. There is a good deal of decided gain and prosperity, there are also causes of grief, but there is no excitement, some publicity and a sorrow or two to compensate. The latter especially for the unexpected prosperity, through a sudden distribution of stock. Keep calm and be especially tactful with superiors and employers.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of wonderful very circumstances, with much gain and prosperity, but also a degree of no inconsiderable. The gain may arise from any, a source in a will, inheritance, a gift, a present, or business inheritance. Refrain from rash or offensive conduct with superiors or employers.

A child born on this day may be practical and energetic although stern, studious, aloof and somewhat secluded. It may lean to the occult.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Plenty of work for a tailored wool dress. A beauty is of catawba in melon color, nicely tailored, with four patch pockets and fastening all the way down. It is made on the lines of a tailored coat.

A bright light on the darkest day is a blouse of cocoa in pale pink. It has a round, collarless neck and two breast pockets. Delightful with a brown and dark-green suit.

A charming deception is a long loose jacket of marabou dyed in a warm sable color. Nice for wear at home and grand over an evening frock. The fabric is of course of the finest quality.

Stretch out your hands and place on them the new gloves. For dress wear there are gloves of soft suede with huge dots of cellophane.

Falling leaves is an appropriate design for Autumn accessories. A sable set, consisting of bag and gloves, is of brown leather with leaf-shaped appliques in the reds and yellows of Autumn foliage.

Much better a fine cloth coat with plenty of fur trimming, than all fur coat of poor quality. Nice enough to appear anywhere is a coat of velvety black woollen with notched collar and side panels all of silver fur.

Play Up Good Points If You'd Be Beautiful

Famous Charmers Also Had Defects, 'Tis Said

Screen beauty who lead or need of her charms

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

IT UPSETS me to see a girl moon around the house bewailing the fact that she isn't the most popular girl in the world because her hair isn't the color she prefers, her nose isn't just the shape that suits her, and Dame Nature forgot to endow her with her share of dimples, long lashes, display dress or other desirable qualities.

You girls who are continually harboring such thoughts of yourself should take time out occasionally to thank heavens for the attributes you do have. And you should also take time to develop your good points.

The most beautiful charmers of history and of the present day were not born with beauty. Remember that Cleopatra had a very ugly nose, as well as a shapely body. Marie Antoinette suffered from the rich diet of the French court, and many of our modern beauties have their handicap but they still flaunt their publics.

Play Up Best Feature

If you have a prominent nose, don't try to make cruel remarks about it to cover up your lack of beauty. Take an afternoon off and experiment with your makeup, to see if you can't make it seem shorter or smaller. What's more, nature always provides us with compensations.

If your nose is not exactly perfect, you probably have lovely eyes to play them up. The idea is to concentrate on your best feature, and tone down the clean-cut pointing ones.

As a last resort, if you are hopelessly sure that you will never turn out to be a raving beauty, cultivate charm. It's not too late to start doing, of course, but remember, the most worthwhile things are the hardest to achieve.

Polish up on your grammar and your etiquette. Read up on new developments in the world so that you'll be able to be a stimulating companion. Shop carefully for style, becoming clothes. Make yourself a gracious, lovely home that will be the haven of your friends. Try to be as considerate, sweet-tempered and understanding as you can.

Men, of course, are initially attracted by the beautiful woman. But they are held by charm and personality!

Preventing The Spread Of Plagues

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M. D.

MEDICINE has for only a short time been organized in line with modern ideas of sanitation. And only over a relatively small part of its geographical area. Because of the density of population and the enormous number of carriers of infectious diseases, communities in China always are on the verge of epidemics or pestilence. Both, a sanitary force as we can, trained all the delicate machinery of sanitation anywhere, so it is no surprise to know that with the bombing of Shanghai, cholera and other plagues broke out, even in such a modern metropolis

Whether these plagues will spread to the United States is a matter of concern, but the answer happily is that the probabilities are decidedly against it.

The great worldwide pandemics of disease always have been blessed on the East. When the Black Death, which was in actuality bubonic plague, started to sweep across Europe, Spain and Africa, Constantinople and Venice, both gateways to the East, and the many flare-ups that raged during the Middle Ages, could be traced to their origin in Turkey and Asia Minor. Within our time, we can remember that the last epidemic of influenza was variously known as "Spanish flu" and "Flanders flu".

Cholera is Problem

As for Asiatic cholera, which is the most prevalent sickness in China just now, we have experienced in the past considerable of its 19th century brought in from abroad. In 1854 it was brought to New York by immigrant ships. Again in 1873 and in 1911, when it prevailed widely in Italy, but there was never any difficulty since 1911 in controlling it, because the world had learned that cholera depended on a polluted water supply and that controlling the water supply would control the epidemic.

In the Philippines it has been known for years that nearly 8 per cent of the population were carriers, but efficient sanitary supervision of the water has kept it under control.

Before the outbreak of cholera was reported in Shanghai, the Public Health service of the world had taken steps to anticipate it and prevent its spread. The United States Public Health Service maintains an office in Hong Kong, and the League of Nations has established one at Singapore. The league voted $500,000 to send units to China to fight cholera and prevent its spread.

All ships coming into the United States are carefully inspected these days, and the captains are warned them to pass through quarantine if the ship's medical records show that he has no contagious disease aboard (called radio practique) has been suspended. Read up on new developments in the world so that you'll be able to be a stimulating companion. Shop carefully for style, becoming clothes. Make yourself a gracious, lovely home that will be the haven of your friends. Try to be as considerate, sweet-tempered and understanding as you can.

Wife Can't Forget Her First Love

By VIRGINIA LEE

WORRIED over the mail a boy from the time she was 14 years old until she was 18. Then his aunt, with whom he lived, found out he was planning to get married, so she told the boy he could no longer live with her if he didn't stop going with Worried.

The boy did not have much money or prospects, so he stopped going with Worried and Sis; didn't get apart; he married another girl and finally she married and moved away from the old home town.

But Worried cannot be happy. She thinks all the time of her first lover, and although she doesn't know whether he is free or not, if he is happily married or not, she feels she must see him.

"I do hate to break them up," she writes, "but it seems things can't go on like this forever."

If you tell your former boy friend how you feel you may get a severe shock, my dear Worried. You may find that he no longer cares for you, is entirely happy with his wife and that you are remembered only as "one of the girls he used to go with". How would you feel then?

You would be very unhappy, of course, and probably hurt in your pride as well as your heart. But even more important than that you would be hurt, and he certainly is not to blame because you married him before someone else. And the first boy, friend's wife certainly doesn't deserve to have her peace disturbed, because she had nothing whatever to do with your unhappiness.

I think the very wisest course for you to pursue is to make up your mind that the first young man and your child with him be long to your youth and are over. I am afraid you are imagining yourself a tragic figure in a very pretty romance, whom, as a matter of fact, you are not. You are a young wife who could be very happy with her mate if she "settled down" and made herself contented. Don't you agree with me, down in your innermost heart?

Life IS what you make it, you know. You can bury the old love affair, and break up your home. Or you can live in the present and make a happy home here for hubby and yourself.

HOUSE-WARMING FOR MR. AND MRS. G. FLOWER, MASSASAGA

On Wednesday evening a large crowd gathered and spent a very pleasant time at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. George Flower when their neighbors surprised them with a house warming and presented them with a wool comforter, blankets, canne chuff, china, and cooking utensils.

The following address was read by Mrs. Leslie:—

"Dear Kay and George: We have gathered here this evening to wish you happiness in your new home. We want you to know we sympathize with you in your recent loss and have taken this opportunity to give you a housewarming.

"There is no room for sadness When we are a cheery and crowd. It always has the same good look. It's never out of style.

It carves us on to try again When failures make us blue, The disciples of encouragement Are good for me and you.

It pays a higher interest, For it is merely lent;

It's worth a million dollars And it doesn't cost a cent."

"May God strengthen you to carry on, to a brighter and higher home.

"We wish you to accept these gifts from your friends of Massasaga—Helen and Bill, Lillian and Roy, Annie and Clarence, Sylvia and Alma."

Taken by surprise, Mr. and Mrs. Flower in a few well chosen words thanked their friends for the gifts and invited al lto come to their home.

CANNIFTON W.A.

In spite of a very busy store storm a goodly number of the members of the Women's Association attended the annual Christmas dinner and meeting held in the S. S. rooms of the Methodist Church on Wednesday the eighth. All the arrangements of the very excellent dinner were carried by Mrs. Blake Bedell. Mrs. Robin Huddy assisted at the noon hour. Everyone present expressed themselves as enjoying a very appetizing and plentiful dinner. Following the dinner the president, Mrs. Cole, conducted a worship period. A solo was rendered by Rev. W. C. Merrick followed by Scripture read by Mrs. Watson. Mrs. Cole read the prepared comments of the Scripture. Mrs. Mills then gave the secretary's report stating that the sewing done by the society for the year so far was 60 quilts with several others in preparation. The treasurer's report given by Mrs. Harry Brenton showed a wonderful year's work and gratifying returns, the society having cleared by cleaning and decorating of the S. S. rooms, the sanitarium of the church and outside painting, also donating $150.00 to the building fund towards the new roof.

The president thanked all the ladies for their splendid help and also Mr. Merrick for conduct the election of officers for the year 1938 which resulted as follows:—

Teacher, Pupil Gift Condemned

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department of Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

WHEN I WAS a boy, attending the district school, each of us pupils remembered on the last day of school before Christmas a gift from the teacher. This gift consisted of a bag of candy and an orange. Sometimes just candy. In some localities of that country the teacher who failed to indicate, by noon of that important day, that she had a treat ready was looked out, sometimes smoked out. I have a vague memory of having participated in one of these ceremonies. When, later, I taught in the same district school which I had attended earlier, I accepted and observed the custom of providing the treat, buying the materials out of my meagre salary. And I chopped my own wood for the stove in that school.

I do not know how prevalent this Christmas custom is today, but it still continues in some rural areas. In the cities, especially the larger cities, the teacher does not dispense gifts to the children. They, many of them, bear gifts to her.

While both practices should be outlawed, gifts to the teacher is the more pernicious. It suggests bribery for special favors from the teacher. And since teachers are human like the rest of us, it probably does make a difference to some of them in their attitude toward the young donor. Then those children whose parents can't, or don't choose to, supply money to the child for the gift must feel badly. You see, it is basically undemocratic and immoral.

Afraid to Hurt Child

In some instances the conscientious teacher might hesitate to refuse a gift from the child, not wishing to hurt that child's feelings. For her protection and for the protection of all the children and the welfare of the school, boards of education, with the leadership of the school superintendent, should announce early in the year a rule forbidding gift bearing and receiving by teacher or pupil on the school premises. And to this rule should be given wide publicity. Then if an issue there will be no teacher or parent who would violate the spirit of this order away from the school premises.

But it might be wholesome for the children to contribute anonymously toward a gift or flowers or something else to be sent to a sick or sad child or old person known to some or all of them. At least they might refrain from sending to such a person, especially near the Christmas season.

Research in Vitamins Wins the Nobel Prize

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M. D.

THE NOBEL PRIZE in medicine in 1937 goes to an Hungarian, Szent-Gyorgyi. The work which got him this award has been monotly to do with the vitamins, and according to the news accounts, all the candidates who were considered for Nobel Prize winners were considered on account of their research in vitamins. This is interesting to me, for I have been hammering on that subject, perhaps even tiresomely, for several years.

Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi's research was to show that the adrenal glands secrete a substance, ascorbic acid, which he has found to be identical chemically with Vitamin C. The real vitamin C is the vitamin which prevents scurvy. The technical name for scurvy is "scorbutus". Hence the name—ascorbic acid.

The story goes that for his experiments he needed large quantities of this substance, and found when he was furnished with barrels full of adrenal glands from American stockyards, he could not get enough. Here, by accident, as he was being served in native Hungarian dish heavily spiced with paprika, it occurred to him from its smell that this might have from some ascorbic acid. He found, to his surprise, that it was the best source of Vitamin C that he had ever tried.

Early Sources Vitamins

One of the most significant features of his research is the possibility that the body itself secretes these vitamins that all the physiologists have insisted should be part of a balanced diet and be taken in by the mouth. We have known for a long time that the liver stores Vitamin D, and that probably adults do not need as much of that because their own livers furnish it. Many studies have pointed out that people on quite a limited diet do not suffer from lack of vitamins, and the reason may be that we have good manufacturing plants of these substances inside our bodies. At least, of course, they fail, and it is pretty well demonstrated that at people advance into middle life their stores of Vitamin B get lower, and this may be supplied artificially with benefit by concentrated products.

It will probably not do to neglect the vitamin factor in diet planning, but at any rate, it is very encouraging to think that we will not be entirely without vitamins for some years, even if they are not furnished in diet.

SKIRTS REVEAL STORY OF NEW GOWNS FOR EVENING

By LESBETH GRITTEN TYLER

Skirts that tell the story of the new evening gowns,- says a well known national magazine.

Skirts that flare and swirl in tulle or chiffon. Skirts that swish and purr in taffeta and metal. Skirts that enhance the smallness of a neat little waist and flare out the beauty of a neckline and shoulders.

Typical of the new formal frock is this dress of cerise taffeta, featured by this same magazine. It has a neat, close-fitting bodice which buttons closely down the front, a new shoulder treatment and full skirt. This pleated ruchings in swirl design decorate the skirt which has the popular up-in-front movement. They also outline the decolletage and the shoulder pieces.

Queen Sets Styles

Queen Elizabeth of England has, I am sure, been associated in most of our minds with a rather small, not exactly neck, portion —but at least as one who adapts herself easily to others and accentuates to best with added width. It overjoys me therefore, to see how she is influencing British fashions, swinging them over to her preferences. The queen, a writer tells us, is not wearing clothes that are chosen for her by her English dressmakers and which are then copied. She insists that her clothes be the type she knows she wears well, usually British clothes. She prefers individually to rubber-stamp garments and wears, for example, a wonderful evening coat of white velvet.

At the recent Court Ball held in Buckingham Palace, she wore a silver tissue gown from Hartnell, London dressmaker. It was made, as reported, with "off-the-shoulder neckline bordered with small silver leaves and encrusted with synthetic diamonds. The skirt was very full and fitted over the hips."

ARE YOU BLUE AND FRIENDLESS?

Or do you "get places" because people enjoy the beauty of your happy nature?

NEVER do you see a happy person left friendless and languishing at home. Always they are popular because everyone prizes the society of happy people. They get "places". If you haven't the beauty of a happy nature it is probably because you are not "up to scratch" physically. Your body and nerves are suffering from lack of nourishment because your blood needs vital iron—the builder of red blood corpuscles.

Why not acquire this vital iron as thousands of others have done! You can easily do it by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills so rich in easily assimilated iron and other vital tonics.

Read what Miss Jean B. has to say:

So I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was the turning point for me all right. I have continued the treatment and I am now feeling life is worth living again."

Must Handle Infant Like Sensitive Plant

Miss Grenelle Cautions Parents to Avoid an Overdose of Natural Benefits

By LISA GRENELLE

Of late years we have all been so sold on the effectiveness of natural benefits, such as sunlight and new food products, that in our enthusiasm we have been inclined to overindulge the infant, without consideration our age, type and condition of health.

An excess of sun or roughage can kill you as well as cure you. Raw food is harmful to anyone with stomach ulcers. Too much sun may have the skin perhaps permanently weakened. And sure to give him at least a few very bad days.

As prescribed and moderate doses nature can be extremely beneficial, but like any other effective medicine, while one dose will strengthen, a double dose is not likely to cure, but on the contrary to weaken.

While one period and time of sensuality is undoubtedly extremely beneficial to the infant, two may be seriously injurious.

Sensitive Plants

Infants, like plants, need sun to order to grow straight and strong. Certain plants are sensitive plants and can only take a little at a time. Two or three minutes a day is enough at first. And by that I mean watch minutes, and not guesswork minutes.

The sun is strong, even for a few minutes, in a baby's eyes. You must protect them with the back of his head, to be on the safe side. Advise a sunbonnet.

But though in the beginning one or two minutes is enough, the sunbaths may be safely and beneficially increased, if done gradually, a minute a day by watch, not by guess, until day by day the time has crept up to a full hour.

Apart from sunbaths, when the infant is completely exposed, exempt for eyes and head, to the concentrated rays of the sun, a weekold infant may be wheeled out into the summer sunlight for a full 15 minutes without damage, if properly clothed.

But then it isn't summer any longer, is it? And in winter and late autumn it is better to leave the infant indoors until the weather is particularly mild, so as to wind and strong, clear sun.

Need Exercise

And now to change the subject (which one should never do in an article) to exercise. Sun and exercise are always associated in my mind and they should be for the infant, too. What better time or circumstance could there be for his majesty to take his daily doses than during his sunbath, when no diaper hampers his movements? Let it, however, be a daily dosen of his own choosing. Unless the doctor orders it, don't assist him; let him kick and wriggle as he might move him. Don't bother to show him how better to move. This is entirely a subject he knows more about than you.

Exercise is really important to babies. Give yours another chance before you put him to bed, in a warm room, without confining clothes.

Again there should be no interference and no tickling, positively no tickling. Also, when you put him back in his carriage or crib, change his position, put to the back, but the other side, or perhaps on his stomach for a change. A baby can get just as tired of the same position as you if you were lying in bed all day.

The half-moon shaped cashew nut was rarity in the United States as recently as 1923 when only 100,000 pounds were imported. Today the cashews are second in popularity only to the peanut.

CAN YOUTH REALLY LOVE GIRL WHEN HE HAS ONLY SEEN PHOTO?

By VIRGINIA LEE

"CAN A MAN love a woman he has never seen?" I am asked. He can love what he thinks is the ideal. It has been done many times. It is not the usual custom, of course, but one father has fallen in love with women's pictures, and women have fallen in love with men's portraits.

If you have had the good fortune to see Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" you saw a young woman who fell in love with a man's picture, and when she saw him in person she loved him still more, and they were married and were most devoted lovers until his death.

This is DOLLY'S problem. She has been correspondence pals, a boy for a long time, but they have never seen each other except in pictures. She will meet him some time in the future, however. He tells her he loves her. She wonders whether it is possible, when he has never seen her.

The boy is in love with his idea of you, dear. When you meet he will get to know the girl he has been picturing to himself all this time. He does know you really through your letters, of course, for a letter is a very revealing thing.

The difference to your religion is something serious to consider if you find you like him well after you have met. It is a problem, which, as I have said a good many times in this column, can only be worked out with love, understanding and sympathy each for the other. Good luck to you, Dolly.

SUIT SENT TO OCCASION

M. Dural Dugas is an authority on perfumes and represents a Paris perfumery salon. He believes women should not choose just one scent that is "suited to their style", but rather that they should change perfumes as they would change their dresses.

A perfume that would be suitable for work or shopping, M. Dugas states, would be unsuitable for the afternoon or bridge when one is in a social mood. Evening perfumes, he believes, may be more exotic than those worn during the daytime.

Changing your perfume, he believes, gives a woman as great a fillip as changing a gown, hat or way of doing her hair. It pep her up and refreshes her, he claims.

Perfumes have a romantic history, he says, and the fact that

If you like your dream scented and up to the minute, you'll find it in the dressers of the linen closet.

Poems That Live

THE EVENING CLOUD

A cloud lay cradled near the setting sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braided form,
Long had I watched the glory spreading on
Over the still radiance of the lake below.
Thrangid the spirit seemed, and floated slow!
Even in its motion there was rest;
While every breath—or awe that chained its blow
Waited the traveler to the quietness west.
Emblem, methought, of the departed soul!
To whose white robe the gleam of bliss is given,
And by the breath of mercy made to roll
Right onwards to the golden gates of heaven,
Where to the eye of faith it peaceful lies,
And tells to man his glorious destinies."

Clancy Happy as Maroons Defeat Detroit Red Wings Defencemen Playing Big Part

Steve Evans Scores Two Goals In Third Period of Game

Marty Barry Got 20 Minutes in Misconduct Penalties

Montreal, Dec. 10 (CP) — King Clancy may not have to bat his way out of the cellar after all. His Montreal Maroon defencemen seem to have learned a few Clancy-isms and the stubborn-second King probably will continue as a non-playing coach.

Until last night the old Irish idol was prided defencemen about valuing the horses under which Toronto let him join Maroons. The agreement was that he was not to play, and King has given more cheerful effort every night so he saw his charges drop game after game.

But last night, when the Maroons came to Ile and walloped Detroit Red Wings 5-3 at Montreal, things did change. The defencemen figured in four goals and King suddenly found under the result.

"See! They didn't think you had sat down," he pondered afterward. "Cy Wentworth was fooled on that long shovel shot and he looked like a million after that. And did you see them 'phone?"

None among the meagre 2,000 who attended could have missed seeing Steve Evans behave himself like the faithful position to score the third and final Maroon goal in the first half of the year—in the third period. Wentworth shoved him, both got sore and sashayed in another corridor.

Cheers Signs Croghan

Clancy didn't say what was probably a main reason for the transformation of the veteran grounds was the signing of Maurice Croghan, who played Clancy's smallest knot of last year. Croghan lined up on the defence last night and, young Dit Smith watched him.

Marty Barry, American division scoring leader, also watched him work out, was in position to predict that Croghan would help his championship back by a knockout. It made exciting reading. Thomas' cheering on the other hand, left Jack and everybody else practically for holding.

Barry argued with the officials and was given 20 minutes in the penalty. He started using names and the referee was raised to ban another one. When he got it in, the more were added. He stopped talking back when it looked if it didn't stop flying around, which he was with only six minutes left in the game. Lamoureux had slipped from his grasp. He now leads his section in points, beating Art Jackson by one point.

Hinsco and Ward scored Maroons other goals, Wing and Jack replied for Detroit.

THOMAS' SHOWING NOT IMPRESSIVE NOTES DEMPSEY

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—It begins to appear this Dempsey-Tunney feud will go on forever in one form or another. Two years ago they had it out under the ring lights at Chicago and both long since have become proud parents and gold citizens, but they're still at it.

Tunney started it again the other day when he suddenly went democratic and said a long, homely visit to Franklin Delano Roosevelt's estate at Summit, N.J. Everybody realized all the time it was a deliberate steal of Dempsey's stuff. They predicted Jack wouldn't take it lying down.

Being the proud democratic of all proud Irish champions is Jack's chief stock in trade. Whereas they used to be rare characters who breasted their shock the hand of John L. Sullivan, it is sometimes difficult these days to find a man who hasn't been given a hot-foot by the governor's party.

Dempsey Visits Camps

So Jack started his attack yesterday, swiftly and hard. Appearing in a sweater and cigar amid the training camp of Harry Thomas, who fights Schmeling Monday night at the Yankee Stadium, the old Manassa lad ran rounds of demoralizing that made Thomas' showing look good by comparison.

He started with a fast three rounds in the camp tavern, during which he shook hands with eighteen sport writers, eight sparring partners and six other citizens who just chanced to wander in. Warmed up, he tore through the noon meal and finished off in a red-hot belly-pool game with all the prize-fighters around the camp, of all colors and creeds.

Thomas Is Shocked

Jack got one poor break, however. Tunney, after watching Dempsey work out, was in position to predict that Georgia would win his championship back by a knockout. It made exciting reading. Thomas' cheering on the other hand, left Jack and everybody else practically for holding.

The man from the mid-west who didn't even know Jack's name originally. He started using names and the names was raised to ten minutes. When he got it in, the more were added. He stopped talking when it looked if it didn't stop flying around, which he was with only six minutes left in the game. Lamoureux had slipped from his grasp. He now leads his section in points, beating Art Jackson by one point.

EVEN-MONEY BET AND TAKE CHOICE IN EASTERN FINAL

Winnipeg Bombers Leave Ann Arbor Today For Toronto Game

MANY ANGLES

Expect 15,000 to See Grid Battle Fought on Frozen Field

By ELMER DOLMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—A Sunday bear marked on Winnipeg football hopes stiffened today as the Blue Bombers prepared to invade Toronto for Saturday's Canadian championship battle against the Argonauts. The team leaves their Ann Arbor, Mich., training quarters tonight.

Just why sentiment against the Western champions should have warmed as the weather got cold was obscure. Reports from Ann Arbor have aroused the affection Coach Bob Fritz was having in freezing weather that is unbecoming to the title champions all week.

But the fact is that the Argos are either scarce or non-existent. It's an even-money bet nearly everywhere in town. Those who are in the football market, for the Southern Ontario Rugby championship, will be the slightest bet settled.

Many Angles In Game

Too many considerations have entered the struggle between the west's ragged edge champs and the east's apex for comfort. There's the weather for one thing. The international classic may be played in a foot of snow or merely on a field hard as granite.

There's Fritz Hanson. Since the Golden Bomber brought about the upheaval of 1935, leading Winnipeg to championship literary Toronto Tigers, a singular tendency to avoid wrapping arms around him has been noted across the country.

Then there's Coach Bob Fritz himself. A great line-plunger. Nobody has forgotten how Fritz ripped the Hamilton line to shreds.

Nor has anyone neglected to consider that Fingers Nowosad is in fine fettle weather and that Argos who toss the ball around as though it were a hot potato may fumble as well as Bob Snyder, many Toronto ball-handlers, the Scullers are satisfyingly capable backfielders in winter is too much to expect.

Crowd To Be Large

Barring pre-game snowstorms, the Canadian Rugby Union heads expect a crowd of from 12,000 to 15,000 for the game in Varsity Stadium. It seems to have sorted up the best west to Ontario and the Niagara Peninsula are opened and the weather is fine. 16,000 may be a conservative estimate.

Even if halfback Art Sievegaard is declared eligible to play, the Bombers will be under-strength. Old Mill-garten, Canada, and Mann Gainer, middle, have been in Canada, less than a year and are ineligible. Gainer is regarded as a great roving secondary candidate.

In his place will be Bert Oja, one-time Minnesota All-American, but Oja's injured shoulder may go out of joint with the first heavy tackle. Should the blood hungry league injury he will provide Winnipeg with the defensive powers they need.

Stevenson, attending University of Manitoba, doesn't qualify under the Canadian residence rule. The west could make a big case on eligible. Gainer is regarded as a great roving secondary candidate.

Decision on the claim is expected to be announced by Tuesday by president W. G. Foulds of the C.R.U. who conducted a vote of executive members. Stevenson trained with the Bombers at Ann Arbor.

Annie Status Out.

Argos will be without Annis Stukus, quarterback and place-kicking star whose back was injured in the Hamilton game last Saturday. In his place will be brother Bill, also a capable signal-caller. The younger Stukus can punt and run back kicks.

Probable starters on the Sculler backfield are Ted Morris, Johnny Edwards, Bob Isbister and Red Storey. Coach Lew Hayman may put Art West on the field instead of Edwards or use Doug MacPherson at the start instead of Storey.

Winnipeg's halfline includes Greg Kabat, Ramon Gander or Stevenson and Cliff Roseborough. All except Gander have played before in east-west games. Roseborough when Regina Roughriders were beaten by Hamilton in the 1933 final

CAVE-IN KILLS MINER

Nelson, B.C., Dec. 9 (CP)—Miners last night recovered the body of Edward Swanson, buried by a cave-in at the Kootenay Belle Mine, 15 miles south of here. Swanson, a lumberman, went into the tunnel to investigate timber work. As he entered the roof caved in, crushing him.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

By Ken L. Calling

Who ever penned that present-day phrase — "it isn't one thing, it's the same thing", apparently hit the ball on the nose, as far as Albert College sporting activities are concerned. Coach Pete Beach of Albert, dropped in on us recently and lamented the fact he could not obtain adequate senior interscholastic competition for his charges. "For years Albert College was the under-dog in the district Interscholastic football, hockey and basketball circles, but we always entered a team and tried to provide what opposition we could under the prevailing circumstances. This year, however, we have a standing Albert College, some good hockey players, while our basketball team is stronger than ever we hope. Insofar as hockey is concerned, however, we cannot obtain adequate grouping, all of the other senior clubs having dropped out of the hockey competition, now that we are in a position to provide stiff opposition," lamented Mr. Beach.

Subsequent check-ups proved St. Michaels and the O.B.D. are not in a position to place senior Interscholastic hockey clubs in O.O.S.S.A. competition this year, while the Belleville Collegiate Institute are operating on a new policy and will form sports only. "We had hoped for a hockey confliction on the Quinte district campus this year, but apparently that is out of the question and so is basketball and volleyball will commence after the Christmas holidays, however." If there is no interform hockey played at the B.C.I. V.I., hockey will be the only season why the Collegiate should not jump into the Interscholastic fray and try to pin the Albert boys' ears back at the winter pastime.

In past years the Albert College Collegiate was always a town of strength in the senior hockey series of the O.O.S.S.A., and there should be no reason why this should not continue. Mr. Beach is not persuaded his Albert College puckstars shall not be left out in the whines cold of hockey, however, and is planning to enter the "C" series in the junior O.H.A. "I am in communication with Mr. Hewitt of the O.H.A., and he informed me that our application for a "C" rating junior club would be accepted, providing we used only Albert students," added Mr. Beach. The Albert College mentors, however, desire to play Intercollegiate hockey if at all possible and will make application into the Trent Valley group of the C.O.S.S.A. before finally deciding the matter of entering the junior O.H.A. "Of course we would like to play in the old Bay of Quinte group, if the Collegiates Napanee, Picton or Trenton will accede against us," added Mr. Beach.

If the Albert College hockey team decides to enter the O.H.A., it would give Belleville two clubs playing in that Association, the Collegiate, Belleville Junior Beaver, "Flyers", Belleville Junior Bees and the Alberts in the "C" series, almost too much hockey for a city the size of Belleville. Failing to locate an Interscholastic berth in the Albert College would be grouped with Napanee, Trenton and Picton to form up a fast and compact loop for junior "C" hockey. The Belleville Juniors are grouped with the Peterboro' Colts and Havelock in the "B" series, however.

The "A" team of the Canadian National Railways of Montreal, was announced as the winner of the British Dominion Clubs Rifle competition in a telegram from London early today. The C.N.R. team had 994 points, while a team from Australia was second with a total of 993 points, the Montreal "B" team third with 991 points and a Toronto team fourth. Canada did remarkably well in the Dominions' shoot this year.

Taking full advantage of the sudden change in the weather, the management of the Belleville Arena has been working overtime these last few days and everything is in readiness for the advent of the cold weather. The ice surface is as level as the proverbial billiard table, having been levelled by a civil engineer his last fall. The interior of the Arena has been completely redecorated and painted white, trimmed with a bright scarlet, really quite natty you know. At any rate it only remains to have a few days of freezing weather and we'll be hearing the ring of the blades at the Arena once again. With the levelled ice surface also already spread it should not take long to make it set.

Down in Kingston it's "all quiet on the Eastern hockey front", quoth the Limestone City scribe. Three Kingston squads are definitely behind the rebels, while the Queens entry is straddling the fence, somehow the O.H.A. will look upon matters, especially after making their deciding ruling last Monday night and definitely stating no changes in groupings or classifications would be made, is hard to figure.

The Peterborough scribe sooth-es the suggestion of an inter-locking schedule. "O.K. pal, but don't say your pets were not given a chance for a grouping". Maybe this Eastern entry is stealing some of our Lily-lock City contemporary has any idea of. From now on it's a case of every man for himself and the devil for his own. We expect some startling developments over the week-end, however. Yes, very startling once, we predict. The boys had better climb aboard the leader wagon and pick up some kind of an Interlocking schedule.

Coach-Quarterback Bob Fritz of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, is in for a rough time with his squad in their efforts to get accustomed to the Eastern or O.R.U. rules, Fritz feels that it is too much of a handicap for the Westerners to come east, remove their style of play as the Western Canada Union has playing rules of its own, and then go on and win a Dominion title. Maybe the Winnipeg gridders are a real cry-baby outfit, however, when the Argos gave Sarnia that never to be forgotten trouncing.

ger Lebland, was found police said Million and the blond vanished from their apartment near the central markets of Paris. The woman was known to police as "Pierrette" or "Chérie" Tricot.

She is 27 years old. Million, 26, identified himself as an accountant's assistant. Both he and she are French.

Authorities announced a man identified himself as "Roger Lebland" was arrested with Million and the woman at a villa on the shore of Martini Lake, Nice, 30 miles from the Swiss frontier.

Inspector Maurice Georges Berry said Million was the man whom Weidmann had named as giving him money to rent the suburban villa where Miss De Koven's body was buried, her necklace knotted deep into her neck.

The isolated villa also was a hunt for Fritz Frommer, identified by police and Weidmann as an accomplice of the murder of the Frommer's body was unearthed yesterday, police anti-spoken Weidmann said he had shot Frommer. Once the two were cellmates in a German prison.

Let's Without Money

The killing of Frommer about two weeks ago, Weidmann confessed was the upshot of a discussion of their finances after the flight to Million and his companion.

Weidmann had been left without money, he said, but Frommer told him he had some money saved from the proceeds of earlier robberies.

He went into the kitchen and got a gun and killed him." Weidmann was quoted, "He lied. He had only 300 francs."

The other victims of Weidmann's gun, according to his confession were:

Raymond Lesobre, a real estate rental agent, whose body was found in the cellar of another St. Cloud villa on Nov. 26. (It was that discovery which led Versailles police Tuesday to Weidmann).

Gruesome Confession

Jean Douffy, a taxi driver, found slain near Orleans last September.

Roger Lebland a broker found dead in an abandoned automobile at Neuilly-Sur Seine last summer.

The gruesome confession of the 29 year old Weidmann, a fugitive from German military service permitted French authorities to close the bulging four-month dossier on the disappearance of Miss de Koven.

It also delineated the twist of a killer's mind.

In soft voice—almost regretfully —he related how he had enticed the girl to the lonely villa last July.

"The memory of this crime is more atrocious than that of the others. She was gentle trusting and glad to have someone with whom to talk English which I have known since my sojourn in the United States and Canada...."

Weidmann said he returned from a North American trip in 1930.

Niagara Area Roads Blocked

Two days of snowstorms along the Niagara Parkways left high-ways throughout that section impassable. Hundreds of cars were abandoned in ditches as their drivers sought the nearest shelter. School attendance in many towns dropped sharply and in Niagara Falls the schools were officially closed until Monday.

The situation in that area was reported as improved today, although snow fell intermittently over Niagara Falls, Port Erie, Welland and other points, the velocity of the wind was said to be slowing. Highways were not expected to be opened to traffic until tomorrow at the earliest.

Port Colborne Snowbound

Port Colborne, one of the highest points in the Niagara district and subjected to the full sweep of a chill wind off Lake Erie, was hard hit. Three feet of snow lay in the streets, blocking traffic. Progress outside of the town was impossible. No milk was available and residents said none could be delivered for 48 hours.

The 500-foot freighter Berryton twice tried to enter Port Colborne harbor but was forced to turn about and take shelter behind a nearby point. The vessel has hovered off the Port since early Wednesday, unable to enter harbor because of poor visibility. She was said not to be in danger.

POWER - EXPORT

Minister Leduc, Hon. T. R. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, and Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, will leave for Quebec as soon as a conference is arranged with the Quebec cabinet.

The paper continues:

"While the reported primary purpose of their mission is to reach agreement on the various questions which the two provinces will make to the Rowell Commission, it is definitely known that power-export issue on which Mr. Hepburn failed to make much headway with official Ottawa two weeks ago is, at the present time, of the greatest concern to them.

Expect Ratification.

"This afternoon, it is expected, Queen's Park will give formal ratification by order-in-council to the long-negotiated new Beauharnois contract. Of the surplus power which the Ontario Hydro Commission must take under the contract, between 90,000 and 110,000 horsepower, can, it is understood, be sold in Niagara-Hudson, provided the virtual Ottawa ban on export is lifted.

(Unconfirmed reports have said the Ontario government is negotiating a new power contract with the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company. This would replace one cancelled in 1935 by legislative enactments. Contracts with three other Quebec power companies also were cancelled at that time and new ones since have been completed.)

parent oats all over the place, and you know how a firehouse has to be spick-and-span. And did you ever try to sweep up transparent oats? I thought not. They just won't sweep up, and they make funny little sounds as the broom goes zing through them, he said.

What kind of sounds? I said, and Mr. Riley said, I cant tell you, because I cant discribe an owl laughing. Birtie smiles in the only thing they don't seem to like, and we don't get much birtie sumlite in the firehouse, but Captain Smollen has a sun lamp that he uses for his stiff arm so we turn that on when till they get so transparent that they're gone. I've got a little polishing to do now, he said.

Meaning good bye.

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon me and Sforky Judge and Pete Simkins went around to the firehouse again to see if Mr. Riley the hookan ladder driver had asked the captain about us fellows leaving Scratcher at the firehouse till we can find a home for him, and Mr. Riley said, It's too bad, but the captain agrees with me that we dont need any dog around here to scare mice because we never have any mice for the simple reason that mice are more afraid of firemen than firemen are of them. Now there might be some chance if you thought the dog was any good at scaring away ghosts, he said.

Gi, ghosts, hairy smokee ghosts, have you ot ghosts? us fellows said, and Mr. Riley said, Not ordinery ghosts, we've got the ghosts of old horses that used to work with the company, especialyy the ghost of old Leon, the smartest fire horse of them all. I'd say he was half human, but I don't consider that high enough praise. Anyway he was most unusual so naturelly his ghost is unusual too, Mr. Riley said.

How, why, what does he do? we said, and Mr. Riley said, The last thing he does is to leap tran-

DAWSON IS ACQUITTED

Crown Offers No Evidence Against Wife on Two Charges

James Dawson Desormio, was acquitted on two charges out attempting to defraud by a jury in the Jury Buildings of the County Court held in Belleville before His Honor Judge N. N. McLean and terminating late last evening, while similar charges preferred against Mrs. Minnie Ethel Dawson, his wife, were dismissed after the Crown did not submit evidence in the case.

Dawson was charged that he did wilfully and corruptly make a solemn declaration having the effect of an oath by virtue of the Canadian Evidence Act, in a respect of a proof of loss and claim for compensation against two fire insurance companies resulting from fire of an insured building, asserting the said policy was the only insurance on the said building destroyed by fire, knowing the assertions to be false and misleading, contrary to Section 176 of the Canadian Criminal Code", Dawson pleaded not guilty to the charges through his counsel, Mr. Charles A. Payne K.C. At the conclusion of the presentation of the evidence the jury convened for three hours before arriving at a verdict of not guilty, His Honor dismissing the accused and acquitting him without comment.

Many Witnesses Called

Numerous witnesses were called by Prosecuting Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., representing the Crown, and the case took two full days before all of the evidence was adduced. The charges were preferred by the Fire Marshal's Department of the Ontario Provincial Government, the attempts being made by Mr. Dawson to collect insurance on a building, the fire of which, Mr. Dawson, said he knew nothing of a second policy in force, as he had understood the said original policy had lapsed and was void.

While the jury was considering Mr Dawson's case, Mrs. Dawson was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to two identical charges as read to her husband previously. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan offered no evidence in the trial of the charges and asked for an acquittal.

His Honour Judge McLean commended Mr. Donnan for his decision in the latter matter and for concurring with the Bench in the decision of not pressing the charges against Mrs. Dawson". The women was acquitted without trial, while her husband was found not guilty by the Jury impanelled by Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn. The case was the only one heard on the current docket of the Jury Sittings of the County Court.

FORT ERIE

Some Factories Closed.

Most factories were either closed or operating with reduced staffs. Main streets were cleared, three inches of snow having fallen during the night. Bus service between Buffalo, Port Erie and Niagara Falls was suspended.

A possible bread shortage was averted when bobsleighs came through with a supply. One local food supply house today received by train from Toronto a sleigh to be used for deliveries. Motor trucks are useless even hi town.

A gang worked all night keeping a road to the hospital open and another was busy keeping the entrances to the hall open. Doctors are making all calls by foot.

News Fruitcake Isolated

Owen Sound, Ont., Dec. 10.—(CP) —The 40-mile-long Bruce Peninsula today was isolated by snow-bound roads. It was snowing hard and there was no sign of let-up. No mails have gone north from Wiarton for two days.

No shortages of food or fuel were reported although at Barrow Bay, a few miles south of Lion's Head on the northern tip of the peninsula, supply of bakers' bread ran out Thursday. Teams and sleighs were expected to get through today with supplies.

Unless the storm abates soon, there was no chance of the road from Wiarton to Tobermory being opened for several weeks. A telephone message from the northerly village said there was plenty of food on hand.

No Real Is Seen

Howard Boyle, lighthouse keeper at Cabot's Head, south of Tobermory on the west shore of Georgian Bay, reported he had not seen a boat for three days. With Mrs. Boyle and Emerson McNair he will remain at his post until the last boat is off Georgian Bay and Lake Huron.

In the district about Owen Sound there was more snow than was seen all last winter. Provincial highways are open but heavy. Concession roads are closed to motor traffic.

Rooster Feeding

Cockerels intended for market should be carefully fattened. This statement is based upon two very important considerations, first that cockerels put on weight more rapidly and economically during fattening than when left on range, and second, that fattened cockerels have a great market value because of their improved quality.

Two methods of finishing are commonly used, pen fattening and crate fattening. Provided crate feeding is properly done, better results will be obtained by this method than can be expected with pen feeding. In the latter method the cockerels are placed in limited floor space and trough fed with fattening mash, as done in crate fattening. Birds thus treated should be decidedly superior to those killed from range without fattening. In crate fattening the cockerels are placed in feeding crates, usually four birds to a compartment, and soft fed. As the chief merits of the fattening process comes from zeal space so as to reduce exercise, and the use of soft mixed fattening feed—control of activity and the proper type of fattening ration are considerations of prime importance.

Only lice-free birds should be treated, and they should first be dosed with epsom salts at the rate of one pound per hundred chickens of one pound per 100 birds so as to clean out the digestive tract. After a period of starvation, usually twenty-four ours, they are given their first feed. Under most conditions, two feedings daily spaced as far apart during the day as possible will found be to be satisfactory. The feed should not be left before the birds longer than half an hour, the residue being removed and disposed of otherwise. The feeding period varies usually from two to three weeks. It should be remembered, however that when the birds cease to gain well, or show signs of impaired appetite, fattening should be discontinued regardless of the length of time which has elapsed.

Of various cereals used experimentally at this Division ground yellow corn has been found to be outstanding in efficiency of production of fats. Ground wheat has been proved to produce as much gain as corn but to require appreciably more of the grain per pound of grain than does corn. A mixture of two parts of oats to one of barley was not as satisfactory as either of the grains previously mentioned The use of corn, therefore, is to be highly recommended as the whole or part of the cereal fattening ration. When whole flesh is desired, while corn will probably be equally efficient. If available. Wheat also normally will be an important ingredient of the fattening mixture. Pearless raw or cooked added in equal measure to the cereal ration were found to be only a fair supplementary fattening feed, but they may be used to advantage when culls of very cheap potatoes are available.

Two additional and final duties should be stressed as a climax to successful fattening: at least twelve hours of starvation should elapse before killing so as to avoid unsightly crops which degrade the birds; and the greatest possible care should be taken to keep the birds as cool as porsible (not frozen) until they are marketed so the quality and bloom so painstakingly acquired through the fattening process will not be diminished when they are examined by the buyer.

Duchess of Windsor Last In Rank of British Duchesses

Is Twenty-Ninth in Current Edition of Burke's Peerage

DUKE IS FOURTH

London, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Duchess of Windsor has been placed last of all Britain's Duchesses, the current edition of Burke's Peerage declared today.

Letters patent issued by the College of Arms did not follow custom and raise the Duchess to the same rank as her husband.

The ranking made the Duke fourth in precedence, following his three brothers, the King and the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent.

His wife was listed as the twenty-ninth Duchess.

This was in accord with the decision that the Duke, but not the Duchess, shall have the style of "royal highness".

Ancient custom established the rules and regulations whereby peers and peeresses are ranked in the order of their creation, and specifically placed together.

Edward was created the Duke of Windsor on the day following his abdication. His ranking was recently established when it was learned his Knight of the Garter banner was hung in the fourth position at Windsor Castle—after the Duke of Kent's.

Piling hugs drifts on town and country highways, paralyzing transport and communication and threatening a milk shortage in Niagara Falls, winter's opening blizzard swept across the southwestern Ontario peninsula burying the area under a two-foot blanket of heavy snow, which drifted in exposed sections until dozens of cars were literally buried. Highway and railway employees fought desperately to keep ahead of the clogging drifts which piled up before a southwest gale and threatened to isolate many towns and villages. One stranded automobile caught up on the outskirts of Niagara Falls, Ont., is shown at RIGHT gradually disappearing under the storm's fury and at LEFT is pictured the main street of Welland, Ont., deserted to the blizzard and with traffic completely halted. Workers living only a few miles from Welland factories were unable to reach the city and country residents were, in many cases, snowbound.

CANADIAN HELD IN FRENCH DRIVE

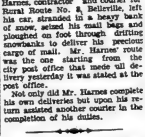
Police Continue Probe of "Hooded Order" in France

Paris, Dec. 10 (CP-Havas)—A man of Canadian birth, Charles Tenaille, was arrested today as police continued their investigation of Les Cagoulards, secret society of hooded men accused of plotting to set up a monarchy and dictatorship in France.

Born at Maple Creek, Sask. in 1905, Tenaille is now a Paris engineer. He is a brother of Andre Tenaille, arrested Dec. 3 as an alleged leader of the armaments section of the conspiracy.

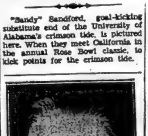
It was alleged that Charles Tenaille sent several loads of arms to a meeting house in the Rue Ribera.

Francois Marie Metenier, 61-year-old industrialist of Clermont-Ferrand, also was arrested today, in a small apartment which he maintained in Paris.



Tenaille and Metenier were ordered by examining Magistrate Betelle to be held in the Sante prison here.

As friend and collaborator of Eugene Deloncle, regarded as the chief of the plotters, Metenier was said to have been fully informed of the activities of the chiefs of the Cagoule (secret committees for revolutionary action.)



Leaves His Car To Carry Mail Through on Foot

"The show must go on" and the mail must get through. Loyalty to the traditions of that great public service, His Majesty's Mail, was exemplified yesterday when O. B. Harnes, contractor and courier for Rural Route No. 3, Bellville, left his car, stranded in a heavy bank of snow, seized his mail bag and ploughed on foot through drifting snowbanks to deliver his precious cargo of mail. Mr. Harnes' route was the one starting from the city post office that made its delivery yesterday it was stated at the post office.

Not only did Mr. Harnes complete his own deliveries but upon his return assisted another courier in the completion of his duties.

"Sandy" Sandford, goal-kicking substitute end of the University of Alabama's crimson tide, is pictured here. When they meet California in the annual Rose Bowl classic, to kick points for the crimson tide.

Leading a fight of long-time residents of Southbury, Conn., against establishment of a Nazi camp of the German-American Bund in the little town, is Miss Jennie Hinman, shown here, a descendant of a revolutionary war veteran, who settled in Southbury many years ago. The real fight against the German-American party opened last Sunday when police invoked an old blue law and arrested two members of the Bund, charging them with working on Sunday. They were allegedly clearing brush for the proposed camp.

IN MEMORIAM

WALLACE—In loving memory of our dear mother Isabella Mina Wallace, who passed away one year ago, Dec. 10th, 1936.
Only a step 'round the turn 'round the bend,
One little happiness, world without end,
That's all.
They go, our beloved, just through the gate
There in the sunlight to smile and wait
To us,
Doing the things that they loved to do,
Seeking new treasures and beauties anew,
Finding old friends and their welcoming smile,
Working and playing and resting awhile.
—Ever remembered by Daughters and Son.

Hurricane House

by BRUCE HENRY

Sandra had been in constant motion since, but she didn't know where she had been. Her one aim had been to get away from the office and stay until she could decide what to do—whether there was anything she could do to delay the seemingly inevitable open break between Hal and Chet, for until Hal and Chet actually separated, a shadow of hope for some miracle.

Had Martha Ancell been true to her husband's vow to Chet and the condition he had imposed, Sandra would have left Chet, and would also stopped this fact would be communicated to Martha's complaint, and result in a divorce suit being publicity.

When Sandra returned to the office at three-thirty she had but one clear idea of what she could or would do. She could not tell Matt Stanley her own mother would be involved in Chet's divorce and that since her assignment was to learn whom Martha Ancell was involved as corespondent, she had no choice but to resign from her job.

She sat at her desk when David called. He asked, "Have you heard from Bonny, Sandy?"

She said she had not heard from Bonny. "Why do you ask, David?"

"Just this noise about Bonny in New Hampshire, Sue. His mother-in-law is nowhere and they send for him."

"I'm awfully sorry," Sandra said, and meant it.

"Oh, I guess she's coming along all right now. But hey has got going back to Florida—he's due in New York tomorrow."

"Don't do that, wait, won't you?"

"Sure, I will. How about you?"

"I'm going to new quarters, living on my own desk. "If Bonny's coming back to New York maybe he'll be happier if he knows that I'll like it, too."

"Sandy, you're a peach. And before he leaves I'll tell Bonny you're with Chet—and the job."

"Please, all round," said David. "And I'm not at the office now. I'm home. The place is a regular hurricane house. I'll call out on it." She did not hear that last. She said, "I'll be in Bonny's office."

"Yes. She's lying down. Wanta say hello?"

"Thanks—and don't listen in."

"What do you take me for—one of your Flash reporters? Wait a minute."

Waiting, Sandra drew a hand across her eyes as it came away wet. She hadn't planned to do this, but having it out, Bonny and she should have done it hours ago. If she couldn't save Enid, she could save Bonny, at least.

Enid's voice seemed to be very far away. "Hello, Sandra," she said. "It's grand to hear your voice again. How are you?"

"I'm all right. There was something in her mother's voice that suggested disaster. "Where's Bonny? Sandra started to speak, hesitated—then said, "I want some one you need not, Enid."

"It is the one I needed. You belong here." After a pause she said, "We have received in good, safe any information from David, but your father heard indirectly that you had flown from Miami to Flash. We were both very much upset."

Sandra bit her lips through the little silence. Then she said, "I'm sorry, Enid. I'm all right."

And not trusting herself to deliberate, to think together she added it: "My boss gave me an assignment and I had to refuse it. He had a big client and I would be planning to file a divorce action and he wanted me to get a line on whom Martha would name as corespondent.... In that breathless moment when she heard Enid's low reply, Sandra saw Bryant Wilson coming across the room. She had remembered the day Bryant had told Enid that Chet had left her brother and it flashed through her mind that he had heard of the David settlement. Bryant was home to help her defense. Then Enid was speaking:

"But why quit your job on such a pretext as that? Anthony's corresponded with Martha. Why can't your run to her...."

Bryant stood by the desk, pretending to read the paper, but listening—not from curiosity but because he took it her guardian. He was making a business call. Sandra said, hastily, "I see.... Well—good-bye...." Not being able to look at Bryant—for a moment for her head was reeling with the memory of Enid's words.

Bryant said, "I just talked to Matt and he says you can take tomorrow off. We're flying to New London in the Corsair. Ortning."

Sandra nodded, vaguely. "That's fine. What time do we start?"

INSTALMENT 14

Not at first, but later when she thought he must have guessed the truth, Sandra blamed her mother. In his mother probably would never walk again without crutches.

"A month's help at her age is no fun." Lucille said, gravely, "and she's really terribly lucky to escape something worse."

Bonny said, "I was afraid of that Lucille." And he thought what a tough break it was for a woman who had been active all her life—the days since she had left a life of comparative luxury to become the wife of a practically penniless newspaperman bent on having a paper of his own. "I suppose that means she must give up The Guardian."

"Dr. Scott says she must be relieved of all responsibility, including housework. Your mother says he's full of fish."

"Did he tell her she would be home?"

"Lucille nodded. "She doesn't believe it, though."

The next afternoon and they were leaving another low wooden shack at the edge of the Ancell Allister pasture. Lucille was gazing off through the clean, naked limbs of a cluster of white birches. Bonny's half-shut eyes considered the perfectly oval face, the pensive curve of Lucille's high, smooth forehead, the straight line of her nose, the delicate chin and the rounded chin. He thought, "She's beautiful. What a pity she's never been able to get away from Maple Village!"

He said at last, "She'll have no difficulty finding a buyer, I imagine. The Guardian was a paying proposition when Dad had it and when he died. Mother has invested she's built it up into something more than a profitable small-town weekly. The Guardian comes as near to being a civic institution as anything in Maple Village. It's really too bad. I suppose there's nothing I can do but sell it."

He heard Lucille's little gasp, found her eyes staring at him. "Sell it?" Sell The Guardian, Bonny?"

"Just what else can she do?"

Lucille's dark head was shaking. "Mother'll never consent. She couldn't let her do that." She suddenly turned to him. "Bonny, you can't run Bonny—The Guardian was your father's. That's why you've been going after it ever since he died. She wasn't a newspaper woman. She didn't know the first thing about a paper. And she could have sold it for enough to keep her comfortable for the next twenty years."

"But The Guardian hasn't been just a place to sell things. It's what you said, an institution, something fine your own mother has built up through—"

Bonny was silent for a moment, then said, "Of course I'll talk to mother right, of course. I've always been more than—a little proud of The Guardian. I'm glad that I've started in and that Mom has not only kept it going but built it up. But—"

"I know it's out of the question your taking over The Guardian," Lucille said when he paused. "But I'm so relieved! If you haven't managed to go on with your own career, but keep in touch with the paper, you'll be able to come back to it some day."

Bonny replied, uneasily. Not very long ago he had told his mother he hoped some day to settle in Maple Village and help her run her paper. He new felt that he had definitely conceded that promise. Leave Radio and New York! Give up that terrific scathing about the country and bury himself in this quiet New England village. He'd go mad in a week.

But Lucille had come a long way these few days he had been home. He had found her in charge of the office, had his problems of accident taking care of the house, keeping up its cheerful appearance. He had tried to send her home that first night to get a decent meal, but she had firmly refused. "I'm not only a trained nurse, Bonny, I'm a Scott." She had told him smiling; "until your mother is well, anyway." And she had been the girl who was his high school sweetheart, had been content to shine for the honor and the cross agent, played by Sealtest Corsage. "Every Tuesday" complete this splendid bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Life Begins in College"

Bigger and better, madder and merrier, wilder and wackier than "Rolling Along" is the new picture and "You Can't Have Everything." Those three zany Ritz Brothers are starred for the first time in "Life Begins in College" Twentieth Century-Fox musical hit featuring Joan Davis, Tony Martin and Gloria Stuart and a noteworthy cast, which opens at the Belle tomorrow (Saturday), matinee daily.

A hilarious, tunesweept jamboree, "Life Begins in College," combines all the essential elements for a gay, entertaining hit—plot, gags, pretty girls, fast-stepping and tuneful fun. The gio-riotous cast also includes Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton, Ed. Thorgersen, Dick Baldwin, Jack March, Dicks Dunbar, Jed Prouty, Maurice Cass, Marjorie Weaver and J. C. Nugent.

The screen play, written by Karl Aubery and Don Ettlinger from stories by Darrell Warr, moves with zest and speed from one ridiculous situation to another, with the three Ritz circus unloading their silliest comedy gags of careers.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Western Gold"

Radio's greatest singing cowboy, Smith Ballew, becomes Sheriff Bill Wright, a fighting hero in the role of a fighting, singing, loving son of the plains who blazes a trail for gold-laden stagecoaches through dangerous and perous mountain passes that bristle with guns of raiding desperadoes in "Western Gold," a thrilling drama of the old west, with plenty of cowboy ballads to the tune of whining bullets in "Western Gold," at the Capitol Saturday only with matinee at 2.30 and evening performance at 6.30.

Replete with action-teeming entertainment, all the romance and color, the sweep and grandeur of the tumultuous period that inspired a great author to write his greatest story, the film enactment of the historic raids upon the supply of gold to the North during the Civil War features Heather Angel opposite the newest and most hard-riding of Western stars.

Ordered by President Lincoln and his Cabinet to thwart the desperadoes whose interception of the Western gold shipments threaten immediate financial disaster, Ballew drew heads as the leader of the trouble centre, Red Bluff, where activities. By the time he arrives even the most hard-bitten veterans of the trail have been terrorized by the desperate acts of the bandits, and the special train is up plenty of excitement by offering to drive the next gold coach through.

Romantic adventure is tempered, however, by the romance between the newcomer and the daughter of the express agent, played by Heather Angel. In a series of daring encounters Ballew at last succeeds in rounding up the outlaws, all by himself, and indeed "Rolling Along" between the citizens and the robbers adds to the excitement.

Added Featurettes

In addition to this thrilling action drama is a complete program of short subjects are shown. The latest news reel, novelty "Did You Know That", "A Strange Than Fiction", a musical comedy "Jam Session" and a Harry Gribbon comedy "Who's Crazy" complete this splendid bill.

With them is Joan Davis, prize red-headed comedienne, who established her knack of hilarity as a love-struck girl on a heart-burning trip to Holland, of all places.

The unassuming Indian with $10,000 a day to spend, is snubbed by all the fraternity brothers the Ritz Brothers take him in and then find him in a riotous frolic of mirth and merriment.

Surrounding the plot are dazzling ensembles with hundreds of girls executing dancing to the swingiest tunes of Pollack and Schwartz, "Let's Swing It" and "Hold That Kiss in College" is jammed with laughs that leave no knockout with joy.

The Pollack and Mitchell hit tunes include "Why Talk About Love?" "The Chief Swing It," "Rhumba Goes to Broadway," "Our Team is on the Warpath" and "Pain Automatic." "Sweet Vanilla Sue," a musical earful composed by Charles Tobias, Al Lewis and Murray Melcher is also featured.

Specialty numbers for the evening's entertainment at the Belle are devised by Sam Pokrass, Sid Kuller and Ben Yost. Mr. Pokrass and Geneva Sawyer combined to stage the Indian dance.

"Modern Inventions" a funny and original Walt Disney Mickey Mouse cartoon, and Pathe and the Belle News of the day, are an-nounced for Saturday in the same program.

"The Last Gangster"

Edward Robinson brings all of his consummate artistry to the role of the last gangster and the last gangster of "The Last Gangster" which opened yesterday at the Belle theatre, and the result is a portrayal which for sheer power and dramatic effectiveness has not been equalled even by the actor's own "Little Caesar" of 1930 vintage back.

Rose Stradner M.G.M.'s new Viennese "find" proves herself now only leader of the book but as sexy-siren of distinguished talent.

Excellent work is also contributed by Barry Stewart in a romantic role, and Lionel Stander.

A story by Robert Riskin, comedy, a thrilling Pete Smith special-ty, and Tuesday, Saturday and "The Hour of Charm" girls precede the feature attraction which will be presented for the last times to-night.

Board Room Gossip

Immediate underlying reasons for firmer prices and a better tone generally can be found in the size of the injured boost in freight rates for United States railroads which tend to increase the bids for rails on Wall Street; and locally, the feeling that a "new deal" was imminent for Quebec private utilities, to be brought about by a new contract for Beauharnois with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario also encouragement; board rooms were also permeated with the belief that revised contracts would be forthcoming for Gatineau and MacLaren-Quebec.

As near as I write, the time for the meeting of the Ontario Cabinet is drawing near, and it is almost a certainty that the new power commissioners for Ontario will be presentiment, possibly some of the officials of public Electric utility executives in Montreal declared that things were now out of their hands and that any announcements must come from Queen's Park. It is almost two years to the day that the act cabinet ratifying the Gatineau contract, in the intervening period, new contracts were made by Ontario with Beauharnois, MacLaren-Quebec Power and a form of settlement was concluded with Ottawa Valley power. Beauharnois alone, the largest contract to be brought, was left out in the cold. Political history has also been written during the period. Former premier Henry, Arthur Roebuck broke with Premier Hepburn and is now a private member of the Legislature.

An insight into the future trend of interests rates, which, in recent years, have been lower than in decades, and which have shown but little tendency to harden despite the recovery of business since 1932, was given the other day by leading officers of New York Life Insurance Co. Executives of this leading fiduciary company in the United States declared that they would recommend to directors the retention of the interest rate on loans 1 policy holders from six to five per cent. If, as and when this recommendation is adopted, it is to be applicable only to new policies. If this development can be taken as a criterion, then "cheap money" will be with us for some time yet.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, Dec. 10—Another shipment of Christmas turkeys left Halifax yesterday for the British market. A further lot will go forward tomorrow. Indications are that the total going this year to the United Kingdom for the Christmas trade will be somewhat less than last year. Locally, the turkey market is quiet, with prices unchanged at anything, declining upward in their tendency. Eggs are in good supply and demand, while the quality is good. Prices are unchanged at 36c for A grade, while buyers have been around the Montreal area offering 38c for selects, and 35c for No. 2's. Receipts yesterday were 314 cases of eggs, 82 cases of butter and 51 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals.

One hundred boxes of Quebec grass regraded butter sold yesterday at the Canadian Commodity Exchange, Inc., at 30c to 30½c. The Quebec price level quoted at 30c to 30½c, while fine fodder is unchanged at 29c, was offered at 30½c.

Butter futures were unchanged at 30¼c to 30½c for December, 30⅝c to 30⅞c for January and 30½c to 30¾c for February. Cash butter in retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 32c to 33c for fine to 31c for prints.

Graded shipments of eggs were 22 to 23½c for A-large. Cold storage eggs were 20c for A-pullets, with grades out of storage at 24½c to 26c for A-large and 24c for A-medium.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Rails generally performed on the upside in today's stock market but many other issues backed away.

The transportation group steamed into a brief but brief rally around noon and numerous leaders reduced their gains several cents. Declines running to two points predominated near the final hour.

Transfers were about 1,100,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—The market drifted aimlessly in the early part of today's session, and accumulated more losses than gained. All exchange indices were showing moderate losses at noon.

Trade in the mines was confined mainly to the junkers and these displayed a softening tendency. Jellicoe, Haydon Red Lake, Paymaster, Preston and Stadacona sold down. With exception of Nickel, the active base metals were down despite strength in the London market.

Utilities, foods and the beverages lost ground while the steels, banks and paper issues were steady.

Preference Benefits Empire and Motherland

Prime Minister Chamberlain Awakens at Empire Unity Meeting In Lon don on Thursday Night

London, Dec. 10 (CP)—The policy of Imperial preference in practice has been twice blessed," Prime Minister Chamberlain told a gathering of 2,000 here last night.

Addressing an Empire Unity Campaign rally the Prime Minister said Imperial preference "has benefited the Dominions, for it has given them expanding markets and increased purchasing power. It has also benefited this country, for it has filled our factories with orders and found employment for many thousands of our workers."

Historic Document

The prime minister described the Ottawa Economic Conference of 1932 as "the historic conference" which established "the principle of Imperial preference among the principal partners of the Empire."

Mr. Chamberlain indicated that Dominion collaboration with the United Kingdom should not be limited to economic questions, but should be developed in the domain of foreign policy and defence of Empire communications.

No Opportunity to Be Lost.

He said there is and never was any opportunity which presents itself for collaboration with other partners in the Commonwealth in the world's affairs, for our attitude and relations with foreign powers in the development of the means of communication between us, and in the improvement of empire resources by the assistance of British science, British enterprise and British finance.

London, Dec. 10 (CP)—"Britain turns to the Empire!" Thus Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express colony organ urges Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech endorsing Imperial preference.

The Express (Independent), however, declares Italy's apparent intention to leave the League of Nations dispels the moral that the time has come to ring down the curtain on Geneva and build up the Empire.

100-PASSENGER OCEAN PLANES SEEN BY 1941

8 Aircraft Manufacturers Asked to Submit Bids Pan-American Airways

Liners Will be Double Size of Present Ships

274 MILES, HOUR

Bids Are Returnable to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Looking at least five years into the future, Pan American Airways has asked eight aircraft manufacturers to submit bids for a fleet of huge transports capable of flying "at least 100 passengers" from New York to almost any capital of Europe.

Requests for the lines of revolutionary ships—likely to be twice the tonnage of the 46,000-pound flying boats now under construction for the trans-Atlantic service — were made in letters sent to the manufacturing concerns.

The bids were returnable to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, consultant of an American's technical committee, who emerged from semi-retirement in England last Sunday to direct final conferences here before the airline's plans were drafted.

$1,000,000 Cost for Each

Under present bidding schedules the machines, expected to cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 each, probably will be in operation over the Atlantic and Pacific by 1941.

Pan American established a dedicated speed of 274 miles an hour for 30,000 feet — at which would replace London within 14 to 15 hours of New York.

Pan American now has six flying boats under construction at the Boeing plant, which are more than half again as large as the Martin transports in use on the Pacific mail and passenger service across the Pacific. These ships are expected to operate between the Pacific and the Atlantic next season.

32 LIVES LOST IN TRAIN WRECK

Edinburgh to Glasgow Express Crashes Into Another Express

Castlecary, Dumbartonshire, Dec. 11 (CP)—Gangs of workmen struggled today to clear traffic on the London and Northeastern Railway main line in Glasgow after a wreck last night which claimed an estimated 32 lives.

They worked under severe handicaps to remove the bodies of at least eight persons still trapped in the wreckage of two express trains. Twenty-four bodies pulled from debris of telescoped cars lay in a temporary morgue at this small station, 13 miles east of Glasgow.

Twenty-five persons were in hospital and seriously injured. Thirty-three received hospital treatment for minor hurts but did not have to remain in the institution over night and thirty-four others were given first aid treatment.

Snowstorm Raging.

As a blinding snowstorm roared over Scotland, the Edinburgh to Glasgow express, stopped for some unknown reason.

A number of persons travelling on the morning and stationary trains bucked under the impact. All cars were derailed.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. R. Thomson

Science Service Correspondent

Dry avalanches! Even avalanches are classified. The "dry" avalanche, also called "snow" avalanche, is the type of depression, but its cause is the most interesting. The dry snow seems to be kept from sliding right after it has fallen and when the temperature is low. In this state it is like a fine powder, the prongs of the snow crystals holding each one to another. After it has lain for several hours the pressure of the individual flakes becomes less sharp by evaporation and the flakes get smooth. In this latter condition, as the flakes do not bind to each other, the snow mass easily slides, and the result is a dry avalanche. Such dry snow will flow all the air as the man rushes down the valley.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—A shallow low area is now centred over northern Quebec with high pressure extending from the west coast of Hudson Bay southward to the Gulf of Mexico. A deep disturbance is centred off the North British Columbia coast and a moderate depression is moving eastward from the Great Lakes.

Showers have occurred in many parts of Ontario and light snow in a few districts of Quebec. It continues cold from Manitoba eastward to New Brunswick but is somewhat milder this morning in Saskatchewan.

Lake Superior—Moderate northwest winds, becoming variable on Sunday; mainly fair and quite cold today and Sunday; probably snowflurries in western districts on Sunday.

Manitoba—Cloudy and not quite so cold tonight and Sunday with snow in many districts.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly cloudy with light snow. Sunday, cloudy and somewhat colder again with snow in some districts.

Hydro Signs New Contracts with Quebec Companies

EASTERN ONTARIO MAIN HIGHWAYS ARE STILL BLOCKED

Central Ontario Shut Off From Rest of Province By Walls of Snow

MORE SNOW FORECAST

Niagara District Hardest Hit by Early Blizzard

Central Ontario was to a large extent shut off by road today from the Niagara Peninsula, Eastern Ontario and the Georgian Bay-Lake Huron areas by walls of snow.

Though it was unavailing against the drifts that choked highways and back concessions. Shortly after one more barrage Hallett Lake and other would farm and more snow was forecast for the first part of the week of Bismarck.

Hit hardest was the Niagara district. At Port Erie ten freight cars on the Canadian National-Wabash main line were last night. They are now injured. Four freight trains on the Canadian Pacific-Toronto Air-Line routes were stalled in deep drifts.

Dairies Stop Deliveries.

Dairies in the peninsula, stopped deliveries of milk. Bus lines, including Toronto-Hamilton-Buffalo, also threatening a shortage in some communities. Hardest hit appeared to be Fort Colborne by rail as the Lake Erie port reported its supply exhausted.

An unabated five-day storm left an all-time record of snow on Port Colborne, a centre of the disturbance. A consignment of automobiles from Detroit was stranded at Niagara Junction.

The Niagara Bridge connecting Port Erie with Buffalo, N.Y., was kept clear by the use of a snowplough running over the hills between the international railway bridge at the south end and a bridge at the snowshovel crew. The crew was strengthened today by service men from Toronto brought by special train.

Eastern Roads Blocked.

In Eastern Ontario Mayor R. K. Stafford, Belleville, has appealed to the Ontario Department of Highways for assistance to open side roads so a milk company could supply its town with milk from farms isolated by the storm.

All roads in the Brockville area were blocked by drifts, remaining closed no danger of a food shortage, however, as the storm caught many motorists. Winds piled high the ever-falling snow that has made it impossible for many to get home in the institution over night and thirty-four others were given first aid treatment.

Paris' Eerie Villa of Death Spaded for New Victims

Mistress of Scarface Million Gives Police Tip

CLOTHING FOUND

Paris, Dec. 11 (AP)—Workmen spaded the grounds of Paris' eerie villa of death today for new victims of a murder-for-profit syndicate as police expressed fear that a second American heiress had been caught in the syndicate's web of robbery and murder.

Possible involvement of a thin faced unidentified American man in the gruesome machinations was attributed to Eugene Weidmann, 38-year-old German ex-convict, who was identified triggerman-strangler of the gang.

Weidmann had confessed putting to death four men and Miss Jean de Koven, lissome, brunette daughter of Judge Brockwayn, N.Y., whom he lured last July to the wooded villa in suburban St. Cloud.

She was strangled with a towel, the men were shot in the head.

Collette Tricot, 25-year-old mistress of Roger (Scarface) Million when Weidmann called the organizer of the gang, was directly responsible for the lip on the possible second American victim.

Police Give Tip.

The French woman, informed investigating Magistrate Pierre Bonnefoy that "Weidmann told Million that the American girl in the villa had contributed 40,000 francs ($1,320) to assist in starting the same theatrical enterprise for which Tricot had agreed to advance 1,000 francs."

Weidmann, who was identified as one of the four men whom Weidmann confessed to killing, was arrested in a abandoned automobile last summer at Neuilly-Sur-Seine.

Within the last month within, 25 year-old Miss de Koven and Fritz Grumbach, another German ex-convict and named by Weidmann as a member of the death gang, were found buried at the St. Cloud villa.

Discovery at the villa of a trunk full of women's clothing—alleged for seven or eight women" and the existence of a blackmailing scheme caused police to redouble their efforts to uncover other possible crimes.

Million and his mistress, who authorities yesterday with a companion, Jean (The Little One) Leblanc, already were charged with complicity in at least one of the five murders confessed by Weidmann. Leblanc was held on an open charge.

Doughty Lad Wades Thru Drifts To Bring Correspondence to Office Of Newspaper in Time for Printing

Donald Hubble, Sidney, Walks Into City From 3rd Concession

BIKE NOT OF MUCH USE

A red-faced youth of tender years walked into the offices of the Ontario Intelligencer last night. Shivering with cold, exhausted, he walked to the operator on duty and proffered him a large envelope. "This is correspondence from your representative on the third concession of Sidney Township," 13-year-old Donald Hubble, son of Mrs. Everett Hubble, Sidney, said through chattering teeth from the healthy fatigue of youth.

"We thought you may want it for tomorrow's paper, so I brought it in," he said.

Questioning of the boy brought forth a story of battle with the election that was not to be denied by anything short of a shame. Living on a concession that was practically cut off from the "outside", with snowbanks piled high in roads preventing the operation of motors and even horse-driven vehicles, the youth pushing daunted by the job ahead bravely struck out on his bicycle to bring the correspondence to this paper on time.

Heavy snowdrifts impeded his progress. Bravely he pedalled his way through snow, at times being forced to dismount and carry the bike through banks of what seemed to be mountainous proportions. Once he struggled through drift and bank. Then the snow became so deep that the wind tore the bicycle the bike. But the "mail must get through". The youth, pushing, dismounted, now cold and wet from damp snow, "parked" his bicycle on a nearby fence and skilfully placed the ahead on foot. Battling wind and drift, he succeeded in reaching the city and got his correspondence at the newspaper office. Plenty of time to spare for the edition for which it was intended.

'Ulster Anthem' to Be Sung By New 'Ulsterland' Party

Hopes to March to Victory in Next Spring's Election

ATTACKS CRAIGAVON

Belfast, Dec. 11 (CP)—Independent Conservatives in Northern Ireland plan to enter the Ulster Assembly general election next spring to the accompaniment of "The Ulster Anthem", adopted as the party's rallying song. The anthem runs:

Ulsterland, may God thee guard,
May kindly fate thee favor,
And make thy seed in Britain's breed
Their obligations meet;
Ulsterland, Ulster homeland,
By Britishers begot;
Our fatherland, our motherland,
Oh happy be thy lot.

New Ulsterland Party.

Thomas Henderson, one of the three Independent Conservatives in the Northern Ireland Parliament, is the mainspring of the new "Ulsterland" party. He announced a list of 12 candidates here today with after the election.

The party has already inaugurated its campaign by a huge meeting in the Ulster Hall. Belfast, where Inflammatory speeches were made against Viscount Craigavon's government.

Councillor Wilson, who was chairman of the meeting, declared the election slogan ought to be "hands off the Union, no more Ulsters". Another speaker declared liberty was at an end in Ulster and burning fiery words were used to teach that it would soon become necessary to have a permit before one Ulsterman or other to go to bed at night.

Speakers declared also that this is no time for discussion in the Conservative ranks when the province is threatened by the policy of the President Eamon de Valera's new constitution to embrace all Ireland.

ALL PASSENGERS LANDED SAFELY

Liner "President Hoover" Runs Aground in Darkness

Manila, Dec. 11 (AP)—All passengers of the reef-bound trans-Pacific liner President Hoover were landed safely on barren, volcanic Hoibola island in Formosa today, several hours after the $4,000,000 luxury vessel went aground. Radio reports said the abandoned automobile last summer at Neuilly-Sur-Seine.

The two U. S. destroyers streaked northward from Manila, approximately 300 miles away, to rescue the ship, and the liner Empress of Asia, changed her course to reach the stranded vessel. The German ship Formosa stood by the Hoover.

On Volcanic Island.

Many hours after the 21,800-ton vessel struck in the darkness this morning, Globe wireless received a message saying the passengers were landed on the volcanic island, some 30 miles northeast of Formosa's southern tip, and 18 miles offshore.

"All passengers safe, landed island," said the dispatch.

Sources conflicted regarding the number of the liner's passengers and her predicament.

The Chinese soldiers were said to have used tear gas as well as machine guns and rifles in repelling the first break through the Japanese lines.

While infantry struggled on the ground, Japanese bombing planes were unopposed as they dropped large amounts of explosives on Chinese troop concentrations inside the walls, said the official here.

Old Tanker Makes Toronto After Stiff Fight With Storm

Battling some of the heaviest gales in recent lake records the British tanker Britannia, Captain Thomas Hodgkinson, commanded by Captain D. Murphy, arrived safely in Toronto harbor after a six day epic run from the Port of Belleville.

Belleville, a regular summer visitor to the local port was one of the last boats on the shipping register.

Heavy snowstorms and a raging gale hit the tanker about the time of arrival of the tanker about 18 hours on her run up the lake. The storm was at its height as it undertook the 18 hours took 36 hours to complete. She was unloading at Belleville light. Though travelling under a full load of fuel oil, the tanker's running speed was at times cut to a time of two and one half knots per hour.

All the time the ship was battling the storm and wearing the sea in the worst that has swept Lake Ontario for years' Captain Murphy maintained his vigil in the pilot house without sleep.

Arriving in Toronto the ship was a mass of ice. Her decks were covered with ice and icicles hung from every section of rigging. Hundreds of tons of frozen water weighted the ship almost to heavy load level.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Canadian Automobile Society, Capt. In 1936 alone, 1,000 lives were thus badly hurt to help themselves.

Two U. S. destroyers streaked northward from Manila, approximately 300 miles away, to rescue the ship, and the liner Empress of Asia, changed her course to reach the stranded vessel. The German ship Formosa stood by the Hoover.

On Volcanic Island.

Many hours after the 21,800-ton vessel struck in the darkness this morning, Globe wireless received a message saying the passengers were landed on the volcanic island, some 30 miles northeast of Formosa's southern tip, and 18 miles offshore.

"All passengers safe, landed island," said the dispatch.

Sources conflicted regarding the number of the liner's passengers and her predicament.

MOTHER BATTLES DRIFTS TO VISIT SON IN THE "PEN"

Snow-drifted roads in this section yesterday failed to daunt the determination of one mother in making her regular weekly visit to a son at present confined in the Kingston Penitentiary. The mother, a four-year-old granddaughter and daughter-in-law made Belleville their stopover yesterday on their way from Toronto to Kingston.

Leaving Toronto earlier in the week, the party managed to hitch hike to Belleville, arriving yesterday. They found shelter at farm homes en route.

In Belleville, told of the heavy condition of the road to Kingston, the news but spurred their determination to press on. They arrived finally by train in Kingston, managed to see the son and husband, and left early after to begin the long trek back.

HEAVY STORMS NO DETERRENT OF CITY MARKET

Good Display Produce in Spite of Inclement Weather

PRICES FIRM

In spite of the fact that heavy snowstorms blocked the majority of the country roads and kept many for a few days a good representation of poultry, dairy farm and garden produce invaded the city market this morning. "You have the farmers themselves to thank for the fact that you buy your butter and eggs today," one vendor stated. "In the outlying districts, teams of horses and big trucks hastily improvised snow ploughs worked all day yesterday digging out the roads for the men of the farms to get clear."

Eggs showed a slight tendency to rise today with "A" selects being quoted at 38 cents a dozen, a small increase over quotations of a week ago. Some vendors however, offered them at 36 cents, a cent lower. Medlums and pullets were offered generally at 32 and 30 cents. Butter showed a general firmness, with 1-lb. pound rolls selling mainly at 46c each.

No Turkeys Offered

Chickens and ducks maintained the same high levels that characterized quotations in the city market Saturday. Good quality birds weighing in the neighborhood of three or four pounds were offered from $1.25 to $1.50. Heavier quality birds were offered at prices commensurate with their weight and quality. On the whole, fowl was fairly plentiful but young chickens noted a scarcity. It was quite evident that the heavy Spring demand of broiler type birds. Ducks were offered at prices holding well. Good sized birds ranged from $1.25 to $1.50 although some were available for 90 cents upward. No turkeys were offered for sale today.

While the coolness of the weather deterred many from the usual Saturday morning shoppers to the comparatively small crowd, inside market many took advantage of the small or than usual display of fruit and vegetables that are offered at the side stands. There was nothing in the way of change noted in the staple fruits and vegetables being the main attractions this morning.

Macintosh Red and Snow apples were offered in bushel baskets at $1.75 with Tolman Sweets quoted at 2c a more per container. Starks were quoted at $1.50.

Potatoes showed slight fluctuation in prices today 90 cent bushel bags offered at 85c and 80c each. Onions maintained their 10c per pound level, with carrots, beets, turnips, parsnips and cabbage showed no change from the price of a week ago.

Fish Plentiful

Whitefish at 32c per pound; red salmon at 15c and kippered herring 10c per pound were offered to lovers of this food with brisk movement being noted at the various stands.

A number of Christmas trees added to the market as vendors offered Christmas trees in varying sizes and of different prices. Some splendid specimens of blue spruce were quoted at from $1.00 to $2.00 per tree and other varieties sold as low as 25c. One vendor brought a truckload of trees from the northern municipalities of the county, booking snow drifts of great proportions to get his wares to the market on time.

TRAFFIC MOVED ON ALL ROADS IN AND OUT OF CITY

Blocked Highways at Napanee Finally Opened For Travel

With mechanical precision motor transportation slowly but surely commenced movement as the various highways of this district, after 24 hours of highway inactivity returned to near normalcy today. Motor vehicles of all descriptions have been operating feverishly in order to alleviate the conditions that resulted from the mid-week snow storms and blizzard that swept throughout the Central and Eastern Ontario zone. Highway Traffic authorities announced today that all main motor arteries leading out of Belleville were open for motorists driving and that motor vehicles had arrived in Belleville today from east of Kingston after a two day lapse. A twelve hour blockage occurred "in Prince Edward after the storm but that community late yesterday, resulting in all roads being blocked and no movement of traffic from late yesterday afternoon until early today, when the snow plows broke through near Crofton.

No Serious Accidents

No serious accidents were reported throughout the entire three day period, revealed Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Krvine, who personally supervised the traffic on the highway, station, labouring night and day. "The highways are in bad condition as yet, but are passable in all directions out of Belleville. The first motor vehicle in two days arrived here from Kingston this morning, but at certain points the snow ploughs have still to complete a single lane for traffic, making progress rather slow, but certain, Traffic Officer Krvine stated to the Ontario Intelligencer today.

The spirit of goodfellowship, that reigned amidst the stranded and marooned motorists, was noted in the smaller communities, where goodfellowship seemed to run for a certain time, was most marked. This was only the spirit of accepting matters as they came and to make the best of it, that kept the morale of those stranded motorists up," explained Constable Krvine after meeting numerous motor vehicles or all sizes and descriptions headed into the ditches along the highways, but no serious accidents were reported nor actual property damage resulted.

Storm 186 Miles Long

According to statisticians the storm raged only in an area ranging from slightly east of Brockville to west of Brighton, a path a little over 100 miles wide and travelling in a north-south direction Reports from east of Kingston as far as Ottawa stated the snow struck that community with much force early yesterday morning and before nightfall over four feet of snow was in evidence at some points. Ottawa little or no snow fall was registered on the 24 hour basis.

Belleville police authorities also revealed today that no serious motor accidents resulted during the height of the storm of the mid-week. Highways are now passable, motorists are advised to proceed with caution over the week end.

Road Grants to North Twps. Ratified by County Council At Closing Session on Friday

Resolution of Appreciation For Warden's Services is Passed

INDIGENT ACCOUNTS

Test Case of Some Account Likely to be Made by Reeves

Eastern Shire Hall, scene of many historic municipal arguments laid aside its atmosphere of county dignity for a few minutes yesterday afternoon when members of the Hastings County Council rose to take part in hearty laudity while their popular Warden, Reeve Wesley Gray of Thurlow Township laid aside the official robes for the last time in his 1937 term of office.

With all the exuberance of school boys dignified reeves from the farflung corners of the county, forgot municipal dignity and reached for the familiar words of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" to enthrone last minutes compliments to the popularity of the retiring Warden. Visibly moved, Warden Gray, expressed his appreciation of the fine tribute paid him, and of the splendid co-operation afforded him by members of the council and county officials during his tenure of office. He again extended a cordial invitation on behalf of himself and Mrs. Gray to council to visit him at his home.

Express Appreciation

Prior to the brief address, Council's appreciation of the services rendered during his term of office was officially made to the Warden, in a motion to the effect that "This Council hereby place on record its sense of high personal character of the Warden and also our testimony to the efficiency and three days now drawing to a close in the position of presiding officer during the year, and hope that many years may have for years to come, his co-operation in municipal matters," received the unanimous endorsation of the members in session.

The usual invitations to a social "At Home" were extended the members of Council by Reeve Neil Welsh, M.P.P., through the courtesy of Reeve J. L. Churchill which was held at the home of the East Hastings member in Roslin last night.

The final sitting of the December session of council although lacking the usual fiery debate that characterizes the particular meeting, nevertheless had its share of argument, that caused as members of the South shire reeves involved in more or less verbal battle array against the united forces of the northern shire reeves, before the motion for road purposes in the northern municipalities was passed.

Reeve J. L. Churcher fired the opening gun in an argument in favor for a grant of one hundred dollars for use in repairing the stretch of road from Shannonville Four Corners to Deltor. Reeve Larkin, of Sidney, immediately instituted with a proposal that matters of grants be left to the jurisdiction of the Ontario Intelligence Committee of the Council.

Motion Defeated

This was defeated as representatives of the northern municipalities rose to the defence of the question of the grants. When the smoke of battle had finally cleared, grants of one hundred dollars each, to three municipalities of the northern section of the county were handed away in figurative vest pockets of the municipal solons.

The South did not give up without a fight, however, opposition was afforded and highly interesting and at times amusing debate occurred before the decision was handed the figurative white flag.

Reeve Ernest Trwell, declared "that we should use the northern municipalities fair, but we should not be unfair to some fairness to the municipalities we represent. Reeve Churcher, spoke for wanting this grant. Several grants were made to these municipalities during the year, why should we be treated with them?"

Reeve Woods, Huntingdon, "There is a motion on the books to the effect that no grant can be made during the December session. You are going to act in face of that?"

Reeve Jas. Lush, Sidney, "I refer to the support of Reeve Churcher. "The road is in bad every Spring," he said, "but it will go far in improving the road that is used by doctors, dentists, ministers and others who have to travel."

Reeve Jason Ferguson told council that some ratepayers paid for improvements on these roads out of their pockets. "They have no other alternative. We have to come here this a Board of Reasons and ask for everything we get. The Road Committee never comes in our district. We have no county roads. We have to get down on our knees and ask for everything we get."

Grant in Lieu

Reeve Sayers—"I thought the northern municipalities got a grant in lieu of county roads. Perhaps the clerk can enlighten us."

Clerk Denyes—"I can't tell you gentlemen anything you don't know about this matter."

Reeve Geo. Jordan, "There is a surplus from roads appropriation left from last year. I move this grant be paid."

The motion carried.

Reeve S. K. McWhirter, likewise appealed for a similar grant for road improvements in the Township of Carlow.

Reeve Sayers—"I opposed the other grant, but if we give one, then we must give the other."

Deputy Reeve Rush caused a ripple of laughter when he jokingly stated that the "honorable gentlemen from the north made a slight mistake. They should have reversed their requests."

Reeve Asks Question

Reeve D. Ketcheson, Frankford, demanded "that percentage do the northern municipalities receive from the government on money expended on roads?"

"We are not getting over 50 per cent" Reeve Davis informed the questioner.

Reeve Churcher supported the motion. "You may thing northern reeves are asking too much, but I will tell you that in the township roads are back in the condition they were 5 years ago. That is the reason these reeves have to, of necessity, ask for more help from County Council."

Reeve Ketcheson, Sidney, interrupted at this point and inquired Whether the cheque for the grant would be left in the County Treasurer's hands to be applied on the Township County rate.

"Every dollar of these grants have been used for the purpose for which they were secured," Reeve Davis told Council.

Payvells Available

"For the benefit of the Reeve of Sidney, I will say that the payrolls of my township for the past three years are available for him any time he cares to look at them." Reeve J. L. Churcher of Dungannon added.

The motion for grant carried by vote.

"How about the grant for the municipalities of Reeve Davis?" asked Chairman Bronson.

Deputy Reeve Rush rose to his feet. "Gentlemen, Davis is a good-looking as Reeve McWhirter and Churcher, why not give him one hundred dollars?" he asked.

The motion carried, when laughter had subsided.

A dash of Christmas spirit was injected in the session at this point, when Mr. A. H. Collins, K.C. who addressed council with regard to fees of the agents of equalization of municipal assessment, presented members with a box of cigars. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Collins, for the able way in which he represented the rights of the municipalities during the hearing of the appeal.

Hospital Accounts

Indigent hospitalization accounts due Belleville General Hospital were then taken up and dealt with in a manner by Clerk Eric Denyes to mean that hospital accounts for non-payment would follow. Mr. Lush, "in last chance," he told members, "and I would like to be assured

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—The noon hour on Wednesday brought a fine crowd in spite of the road and weather conditions to the home of Mrs. Fred Westover, for the December meeting of Alma W.A.

The retiring President, Mrs. Ray Bell, conducted the afternoon meeting, there being a good, varied, this program was opened with the W.A. theme song "Let the Beauty of Jesus be Seen in Me." This was followed by prayer by Mrs. Hubble. Christmas hymns were sung. The Scripture was read by Mrs. S. Westover. There were readings by Mrs. Fred Moore, Mrs. S. Hubble, Mrs. Leon Mahaffey, and Mrs. E. K. Hubble.

Very pleasing music was a piano solo "Christmas Chimes" by Mrs. Lee Grills and a vocal solo by Mrs. Gerald Hubble, "Christmas Bells". After the business had been discussed and disposed of the President called on the contest leaders, Mrs. Cyril McMullen and Mrs. Bell, to give their reports, who took charge. The "patches" had been removed from the aprons, the money counted and the verses were to be read and judged.

It was found the patches covering the largest donations were put on by Mrs. Harry Kells and Mrs. Will Bush, who were presented with the aprons.

Mrs. S. Westover and Mrs. Kells had donated generous prizes for the best poetry and readings which were the "patches" on the aprons. This was the judges' task was not so easy one. There were verses descriptive special mention by Mrs. Ray Bell, Mrs. Leon Mahaffey, Mrs. E. Hubble, Mrs. Fred Westover and several others but the prize was awarded to Mrs. Everett Hobble. Mrs. Bush in her closing remarks thanked Mrs. Bell and donators for co-operation during her term in the Presidential chair, and wished the new President, Mrs. Fred Moore every success in the coming year. The offering was $3.10.

Aikens W.A. Aprons

Along came an apron, one fine day
Twas said it belonged to the W.A.
The funniest apron you did ever beholds
The reason for this, you shall now be told.

It was covered all over with patches so queer.
But then it's no wonder —it had travelled a year
From member to member (and there's a great many)
And under each patch was a dime and a penny.

There had been a contest — competition was keen
Each side had an apron—now it remained to be seen
Which held the most money under patches so bright

For the women were willing and the cause had been right.

There's more to this apron, than you see at a glance
For you know things like this aren't run by a chance
The leaders planned, what they thought was the best
The aprons went round, the W.A. did the rest.

The contest is ended, the year is o'er
We haven't worked hard ,and we've raised lots of fun
What the next will bring forth, no one can tell
But our motto 'in the cause, we love it so well'

For we all know, with never a can pay,
And it sure needs our all through the W.A.

Bills must be paid, for light and for wood,
And the Parson needs money—his sermons are good.
So let us be thankful, as we ponder it o'er,
These aprons did travel from door to door.

Parsonage

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hartt have returned to the parsonage after the past three weeks with friends and relatives in Ulna, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kenny of Belleville, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aikens.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Dracup visited Mrs. Dracup's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cooks and family on Wednesday evening.

The November meeting of Wednesday and Thursday blocked motor traffic on the Kingston Road on Friday afternoon. There was no mail delivery for some hours for a few days, but complete isolation is a thing of the past, as the radios bring the news to the outside world and those who found it necessary to travel the roads could do so with horses and sleigh.

Mr. Groves and daughters, the Misses Ida and Gertrude Groves, who live in this community were unable to get in their work in Belleville on Thursday. They had to abandon their car at Centenary School, and were driven home and taken to Belleville on Friday by sleigh.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, Dec. 12

By Genevieve Kemble

Sunday's Horoscope is a very important one with social, intellectual philanthropic and religious matters under excellent stimuli for growth and expression. Adventure and romance also figure, but in all there is need of discretion and a close curb on tongue and temper, as quarrels might undermine much that is much constructive work and happiness. Be wise with writings and shun possible litigation.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of very important activities, with much growth, expansion and prosperity, also great, ambitious and responsible. It will likewise be gentle, kindly and sentimental, attracting lovable and sentimental, attracting

THIS SEASON

This season is the one in which people think of others. That is the very spirit of Christmas, past, present and to-be. One cannot conceive of it without the question of gifts and thoughtfulness for those less fortunate.

At this season hundreds of people here as in other places are at work on plans of this nature to bring cheer to those who might not otherwise enjoy Yuletide as it should be enjoyed in every Christian land. In the churches, in philanthropic organizations, among the firemen and among the members of the business clubs, inquiries have been made and arrangements matured against the festival less than two weeks away. Many individuals too do their part in making the season bear all the marks of joy and merriment.

Christmas comes but once a year and it brings in its wake much of preparation but the people could not do without it. It is the greatest festival of the year in bringing people together and in furthering the brotherhood spirit among men. The gifts, the cordial little acts of kindness of good love, the decorations of the Christmas trees and city streets, the freer laughter of children, the intensified imagination of the young are all the outcome of the spirit of Christmas.

It is not only in the little village or countryside, the smaller town or city but in the large cities too and across the wide expanse of Christian land that this spirit and these manifestations appear. Is it the quest of the broken father or the worried mother who ekes out a meagre living and brings up a family despite the burdens of sickness, or the cripple, or the aged who are not able to perform duties but treasure memories of the past? Is there the case of a parent who has broken under the strain and has to be taken from the family circle, or hybrid treatment in hospital, while the other parent tries to make a living for the family, members of which are alone all day? Is it the little children who want a home, for all children need a home?

Such questions indicate some of the heart-throbs which beat in the sad breasts of unfortunate or lonely or those sunk into great age with their friends all departed long ago or far away. It is only when the insistent beating of the brain on the misfortunes or the turns of life, good noblehearted women and men and children are good samaritans at this season, they go about with smiling faces and arms laden with what are to the less fortunate worlds of treasure and banquets of good things which recall a better day.

It is the season when even the fortunate, those not ill with fate or destiny, like a little extra cheer and so their friends bring gifts.

TOLERATION VS. FANATICISM

One of the finest exhibitions of the spirit of toleration in democracy is that shown in the United States where relics of British rule in the American Colonies still remain. In one of the public squares of New York City the Royal Coat of Arms of Britain is still to be seen where men and women worship today. And therein they are not only tolerant but wise.

But in some other lands there seems a viciousness at work endeavoring to destroy every vestige of earlier civilization and everything on which people might yet look with respect and pleasure. Many can remember the fury and bitterness which was felt in the Allied World at the seemingly needless bombardment of ancient historical edifices, such as the old Gothic Cathedral at Rheims and other churches, in France. The work of generations in this spirit of spite and destruction of everything that is beautiful and lovely was pounded into dust. In Spain majestic buildings have been vandalized without respect to their past for their social or religious significance. In the Orient one can even anticipate that there will be attempts to wipe out vestiges of ancient civilizations.

Art in all forms, in buildings and in music expresses the spirit of a race and the destroyer likes nothing better than a chance to destroy because he is possessed of an inferior complex or of a desire to remove everything that may inspire the spirit of a people.

One sees the same thing in the political world. Extreme radicals strain for their visionary new fabrications and would wipe out the solid institutions on which civilization has been built. Ordered society does not stand still but it does not destroy all the stepping stones in its progress.

The fanatic today has his chance in many lands and he is living up to his name as a destroyer. And in the end he leaves but ruin of the past and chaos of present and abandons the people without a guide for the future.

AFTER THE SNOWSTORM

The storm that brought December here
Has passed; now cloudless twilight falls,
With whitened vistas reaching clear
Along the silent woodland halls.

The trees are ghosts against the pale
Of Amber, purple shades below,
And far behind my wavering trail
Of footprints wanders through the snow.

CONTROVERSY GOING ON IN NEWSPAPERS as to the correctness or incorrectness of statements made that the north is crying for workmen to work in the mines and bush. North Bay Nugget, Timmins Daily Press, Kirkland Lake News and Port Arthur Chronicle have sounded a warning note to the effect that there is no insistent demand for workmen in the north. Skilled bushmen are always in demand, so also are skilled miners, no doubt, but for this army of unemployed who have no trade, are just laborers or handymen, there does not seem to be any demand anywhere at this time of the year. Laborers constructed the railways and did all the rough and tough work of nation building, but the day of their usefulness en masse, has seemingly passed, and now most of the rough work of construction is done by labor-saving machinery. In the old days the laborer worked in the summer and laid in enough food to last over the winter, salt pork, herring, a side of beef, a whole pig, raised on the place, with potatoes, cabbage and other vegetables all raised on the place. Depression hit the lumberjacks an awful wallop for it introduced them to relief easy money and they became soft—now they are drifting back to their old haunts, the camps and the drive, and hardening up in real labor that brings health and happiness.

"RALPH CONNOR INTRODUCED THE "SKY PILOT" TO THE WORLD, and a fine job he made of it, too, showing the great work for humanity which is being so cheerfully done by consecrated men of the cloth in the out-of-the-way places of the earth, men who are serving their God the hard way, and glorying in it, satisfied with the reward "Well done good and faithful servant enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Ralph Connor and other parsons also have their problems, and the Brampton Conservator has this to say of radio parishioners:

"A lady was visited by the pastor of the church with which she had been associated. Bluntly she gave the information that she had not much use for the church and more that she could hear better sermons over the radio and that she was through, at short time later, the lady's husband died. She didn't ask the CFRB announcer to help her in her sorrow. She sent for the pastor she a short time before felt she could do without, asked to have a funeral service conducted in the church, desired the choir to attend and that a soloist be provided for the event. This is an actual occurrence. It is frequently repeated. Give nothing to the support of the church, let others bear the burden, but when trouble comes call upon its ministers for the consolation of religion refused or neglected in times of health and prosperity. Many are doing just this thing. —It's not fair. But is seldom or never refused."

WILLIAM LYONS MACKENZIE, Rebel or patriot, or both, lived one hundred years ago, and the centennial of his big moment is being graced with reviews of his life and work. Mackenzie is dear to the by the press of Canada—giving him credit for good intentions and for kindling a fire which toppled high-hats from lofty places and sapped the strength and defeated the autocratic power of aggression in the privileged few. Mackenzie's campaign for changes in the government of the province led to turbulent scenes, disorders, deaths and exciting times, and Mackenzie himself escaped to Buffalo and did not return to Canada for years. Looking back upon the incipient rebellion and the battle of Montgomery's Tavern and Yonge Street, it looks like a tempest in a teapot but no doubt was a very serious matter at the time, and any initial success of the plotters would have brought many to their standard, no doubt. Losing the first trick, lost the game for the Mackenzieites.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Dec. 17th, 1917

Sir Mackenzie Bowell died at his residence, Wallbridge Manor, in this city, last evening, Dec. 10th. He had been ill for some months and in many parts of the world the news that this great Canadian has passed to the beyond will bring a feeling of sadness in the hearts of a true friend, and one whose busy life was full of good deeds and national service in the upbuilding of Canada, as one of the brightest gems in the diadem of the empire. Truly a national figure in his many years of public service as a member of Parliament, Cabinet Minister, President of Canada and Senator, and appreciated by his fellow citizens for vision and valued counsel on national matters. He was perhaps in his home city of Belleville and vicinity the most beloved and certainly all that and more to the citizens of Belleville and surrounding district that the late Mackenzie Bowell was appreciated and appreciated for his many qualities and his long years of friendship. Sir Mackenzie Bowell has been termed "A Grand Old Man of Canada", although he has his ninety-four years lightly and well upon his shoulders in full intellect. If he was the "Grand Old Man of Canada" he was certainly all that and more to the citizens of Belleville and surrounding district for he always was proud to call him friend, and he in turn was proud of the fact. This writer has had an outstanding friendship with Sir Mackenzie Bowell because of his deep interest in the welfare of this city and his many friends in this district, because of his kind thoughts and his many kindly deeds, because of his generous gifts during him to a host of friends whose lives were made brighter because of his friendship and friendship with Sir Mackenzie Bowell was a privilege because Sir Mackenzie Bowell was a man of great usefulness and the Bay of Quinte District is better because of his high ideals and his example.

In 1883 and 1884 a railway was run into Coe Hill by the Company to take out the ore and much was expected but later the mines were shut down because of too much sulphur in the ore.

The children of Coe Hill attended school west of the village for a time. Then a school was built in the village and Miss Potter was the first teacher.

Mr. Tyry set up a general store and Mr. MacGregor who supplied the people with groceries, etc. Mr. Boothby set up a drug store, Mr. Thomas Waddington was the first Post Master in the village. Mr. Geo. Hennessy and Mr. Alex. Smith, Sr. kept good boarding houses, where the travelling public were always well entertained.

A town hall was built at the corner for municipal purposes and for a time it was used for Sunday School and other religious services. Then in the 90's a Methodist church was built followed by the Anglican and Presbyterian churches.

Lumbering was carried on by different companies, the first being Messrs. Cox and Co. who cut pine, hemlock, spruce, cedar, oak and maple. The Rathbun Co. and Mr. Kirby as head man carried on extensive lumbering operations. Mr. Kirby also kept a boarding house for the men and a small store of necessary supplies for them.

The farmers kept lots of cows so a cheese factory was built on the corner of Eagle Lake, where Mr. Vincent converted the milk into cheese which was sent to the patrons or shipped out.

A Fair was held each year at the Town Hall grounds and the competition induced the best production from the farmers.

When the railway ran in the people were supplied with daily mail and gradually all modern conveniences were enjoyed by the people of Coe Hill, Ontario.—Contributed. Miss Gertrude Gunter, Coe Hill.

great trees in the tropics.—From "A Naturalist in Brazil" by Konrad Guenther. (Boston: Houghton Mifflin.)

Coe Hill Pioneer Days

The first early pioneers induced by offers of free grants of land came to Wollaston settling west of the present site of the village. The earliest of these settlers were Mr. Halstead, Mr. Wellman, Mr. Edwin Blackburn and Mr. Thomas Nugent who brought in their families, clearing the land and building up a home in the forest.

Others soon followed and such names as Mr. Alex. Wait, Robert Waddington, Mr. Fred. Cox, Hancock's, Gunter's, Wilson's, Tivy's, Bird's, Vandiel's, Jones's, Fisher's, Monaghan's, the Drumm's, Hennesy's and Bachelors' are all closely associated with those early days.

eventful, for they were happy and contented, assisting one another in logging, fencing, ploughing and building bees which were followed by a party at night and all joined in the games to the tune of a jew harp or perchance some one playing on a comb. The women did all their own sewing, knitting, making of soap and in the summer picking the wild fruit and drying it for winter use. Maple sugar was made and used as other sugar was scarce. The chief articles of dress were coarse home spun flannel, wissey and fulled cloth, the latter of home manufacturing. Wild animals roamed the woods such as wolves, bears, deer, foxes, rabbits and fish. The deer supplied the settlers with meat.

A log school was built in their midst and the first teacher was Miss Potter. Mr. John Goodfellow later teacher was lost in the woods while returning one November night from visiting a sick man and in the morning was found dead.

The first council meeting Wollaston was held in January 1860 in Wm. Henry Gunter's house and the composed of Reeve, Hall, MacGregor, Councillors—Thos. Nugent, W. H. Gunter, Peter Cronk and Jas. Chaffey with Robert Wiggins as Clerk and Mr. Wait as tax collector.

Travelling ministers came in on their back to preach to the people from house to house. Some of these early ministers were Rev. Mr. Baker, Rev. Mr. Reed, Rev. Mr. Leech and Mr. Seeborn.

The sick were ably attended by Dr. John Hardings who came from England about this time.

Oxen were used for travelling and for all kinds of farm work. Mr. Nugent owned the first team of horses, grain was threshed out by a flail and then taken to L'Amable to be ground.

Mr. Nugent kept a small P.O.

The Ronan Catholics of the Township of Thurlow have, we are informed, with nothing but the best and always air high. A green loss on the Catholic church and on the magnificent altar, destroyed when the church was burned, blown through the crevices of the building by the wind.

The magic of the Sacred Bundle in an address and powerful magic, Clark Wissler of the American Museum of Natural History traces it to the legends of the Blackfeet, and it occurs in one form or another all the way from the Zuni Grande pueblos to the Great Lakes. Hands Off Anticosti

It is true that the island of Anticosti is in Canada, and it is also true that it was owned for many years by a foreign capitalist. Consequently, Canada has no jurisdiction, however, and the world today is in a critical state, so we must admit the fact that there is a vast difference between having the island in Private hands and in the hands of Britain or other European countries.

The Montreal Herald says in part in a copyrighted article that the Consolidated Paper Company have an option on this valuable property and a Montreal financier early last summer and last the latter is on the point of closing a deal for its sale to a syndicate mainly composed of Dutch and German capitalists who the whole build and operate on Anticosti a sulphite pulp mill that will afford employment to some 1,500 or 2,000 men.

We do not know the exact authenticity of this report nor whether the deal will go through successfully in the end. The Gazette is a responsible newspaper, however, with unusual means of obtaining itself on a matter of this kind and supplies a great amount of interesting detail. The matter, therefore, serious enough to call for the serious thought by the people of Canada and so far as capitalists having construction right in this district or Communist countries are concerned, this paper emphatically demands insistently that the Dominion Government at once take steps to enforce a policy of : "Hands off Anticosti!"

Anticosti is an island with an area of more than 3,000 miles, situated in the Gulf of St. Lawrence off the Gaspe Peninsula, 360 miles northwest of Belle Isle, which is the world is in right at the front door of Canada, in general, and of the Province of Quebec in particular. Many of us have not yet forgotten the report of the discovery of cement foundations in this district in 1914 that although ostensibly for the Panama Canal, nobody has ever served equally well for gun emplacements on the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Today less than ever can Canada afford to make available to a possibly aggressive foreign power any strategic point in the general defence of under peace conditions into an effective military base for attacking this Dominion, in the event of war declared or undeclared. And if Anticosti is sold to a Dutch-German syndicate, there is nothing to prevent it from being that way. But even apart from the threat of Bolshevist Quebec certainly one does not want to see a community of from 8,000 to 9,000 Dutch and German people settled off the coast of Canada as a centre of the propaganda of the entire Province may be poisoned.

The public interest takes precedence over private interest, of course, and it is to be hoped that the Gazette can only be a lodge one for Canada in the matter of Anticosti. Let the economic advantages of which it hints out the window. Canada can certainly, these are not so considerable, after all, afford to remain undeveloped and stop at all costs the sale of Anticosti to interests under Adolph Hitler or Thumbl.—Quebec Chronicle Telegraph.

The Sacred Bundle

The Sacred Bundle of the Water Busters clan of the Gros Ventre Indians of North Dakota is to be returned to them. In exchange, the Museum of the American Indian will receive from Fool'ish Bear and Robert Wolf, eldest of the Water Busters, a sacred Buffalo Medicine Bundle. Ceremonies will be held again to the land of the Gros Ventres, one to be opened by the Mandans and Arikara, the Crows and the Cheyennes, one to be held by the Gros Ventres and Comanche, where once a great confederation of the Plains used to gravel. Even to those lands where the white man's grain has not dried in the ground, where the white man's cattle have bellowed and their hides have not been blown through the crevices of the white man's houses.

The magic of the Sacred Bundle is an ancient and powerful magic, Clark Wissler of the American Museum of Natural History traces it to the legends of the Blackfeet, and it occurs in one form or another all the way from the Zuni Grande pueblos to the Great Lakes. One of the Aztec Emperors inherited a set of fire sticks—maybe a variation of the old Greek legend of Prometheus and the fire brand. A bundle has two human skulls—or rather the bones of two human heads. Birds who took human form. So perhaps now the rain will come. It is about time. The cycle of drought has been long and the dust heavy. The Great Spirit cannot be angry with his people forever.

All this is rank superstition, of course. The very names must seem to be laughter as we pied up and down our cement-paved streets, with our radios and our jazz bands, and struggle in and out of our Fords and our Chevrolets, and sophisticated New Yorker wouldn't crack a smile at them. But we are not sure. We might follow the smile. For in our mundane, workaday world, we have lost the sacred Bundles. Politics is a sacred business—but the legends of the Fathers and radicals alike have their sacred bundles in which they would change a law or disarray a fold; and each, if you believe in the magic of the words of the Wise Draga Wolf who owns it, will bring the rain and keep the grasshoppers away. Washington is full of sacred bundles, so is New York and so is the Mississippi Valley.

Let us not smile too long at the Gros Ventres, for we, too, cherish the faith in the old logic. Next Spring the Gros Ventres may feel certain that the Great Spirit loves a boy look at the green wave coming over the fields and the low sweet song of the wind is not heard again.—New York Times.

J. Snipes, Cabin Boy

Ranking the ship's cat, but well treated by everyone, J. Snipes, who is the urchin whose duty it is to wait on the officers' table and in the forecastle to carry coffee to the bridge on stormy nights or to the crew during perilous times of heaving decks from the galley with a pot of steaming coffee and hot beefsteak, and so be the butt of rough jokes by the crew, but withal he is a favorite largely dependent on the good nature, or otherwise, of the officers, and is small to lay aloft or to stand watch; but young J. Snipes, the sailor's rudder pleasures ashore, he is neither too small nor too young to take a hand in one of the major perils of the sea. And so it is pleasant to note that under date of March from the sinking British freighter Wellington Court, which had struck a submerged object and was forced to become abandoned, J. Snipes, cabin boy. The story is delighted Marryat, Conrad or Stevenson with its strong sense of the manliness and decency who may have shipped out of Grimsby, Hartlepool or London and if ever capable character to command from humble beginnings, will be waited on by other youngsters, who will remind him of his youth. We hope that he will never be nearer irreparable disaster than he was when he went the side of the Nollington Court for the last time, as did the other members of the crew but four final plunge to the coral reefs off Tortuga Island. —New York Herald Tribune.

An Alien in the Tropics

No one can get out of his own skin; even at the Equator the European is still a European; at first often as an alien, in the tropics and unrelated to tropical nature. And when he falls under the spell of the sublimity of the forest, it is his European soul that is thrilled and impressed, and all unknown to himself, the image of the primeval forest that grows within him draws a veil before what he now beholds . . . This explains why it is that if he goes to the tropics as a naturalist he is a poet—has been, for example, in India, the discoverer of the Indian landscape as it really is, but the European landscape which has been familiar to him from childhood, disguised, so to speak, in the tropics and real. Only by strenuous and exhausting effort is one able to see into the alien nature of the tropics and realize its essential character.

Even in early summer a European enters such a little covert as we find, for example, on the Upper Rhine, and passing between the scented billows of the hawthorn, musical with hum of birds, pushes his way through thickets overgrown with honeysuckle and bryony, where which oak and ash and other trees spread their leafy crowns, and at last comes to a clearing where orchids lift their purple spires from the grass and a butterfly rocking on with a gaggling cry, he tells himself that this is a scene of tropical luxuriance! He imagines, at the Equator, a still denser confusion of greener and fuller foliage, a still greater splendor of blossoms, a still more astonishing fragrance. And he who visit the tropics with such ideas will be bitterly disappointed. For reasons already explained, the tropical trees are far less rich in foliage than ours, their leaves are not so lush and green in appearance as those of a European wood. For the leaves of our trees let the sun shine through them, and therefore they appear more gorgeous in the case of the tropical trees. The tropical trees protect themselves by their dense, leathery texture, and by a glossy upper surface, which reflects the burning rays. And the third thing that we imagine in connection with a tropical forest—the fragrance—is more characteristic of our European woods. Of course, there are many trees in equatorial countries which are remarkable for their magnificent fragrance of our pine and fir woods. There are no conifers in the tropics, but in the tropical forest there grows the intoxicating odor of the fallen leaves in the autumn woods . . .

And there is, of course, a tropical luxuriance; but it finds expression otherwise than in Europe; that is, in the production, not of a wealth of individual, but of great masses of timber. . . . Families of plants which in Europe produce only herbaceous growths give rise to

When Winter Comes

When the north wind blows and the snow packs in the crevices, and the smoke from the chimneys curls upward in clear-cut spirals and the frost is on the window panes, then folk in the town and village stores begin to talk of the winter that they can look forward to a heap of snow-shovelling, and stoking of furnaces and all the extra little chores that go with keeping comfortable during the cold weather.

In the country there are other signs that are a sure indication that winter is here. The cattle are hampered by man in given to a clearer manifestation of the change that has taken place, so much so that every country boy can tell by the many signs about him when King Winter has come and when he is on his way.

On the way to the barn to do the morning chores it is apparent that a heavy hoar dropped down like a blanket over night and enforced certain restrictions on the clothings, the birds, huddled in little balls of fluff and feathers, are in the shelter of the eaves and the straw stack. When the stable door is opened a heavy cloud of fog formed as the warmth of the animals inside met the cold air on the outside and forms a heavy border about the opening. The cattle, restless, turn their ties for their trip to the watering trough have their stanchions and the mangers are emptied from the warmth in the stable is soon mussled with frost as the hay clump at the bite and are anxious to keep moving. steam rising from their bodies and bodies and their breaths drawn down into the cold days come on to stay awhile.—Lindsay Post.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

"Six of One And—"

By CORONA REMINGTON
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

Dearest Mona:

"Would you be very disappointed if I brought a friend of mine along when I come on my vacation? I've talked so much about you and did that she's crazy to meet you. You know you'd probably rather have me all to yourself, but—well, don't fall me, Mona. I've already invited her and she has accepted. Her folks live on L. in California and with only a week off she could hardly have time to get there and back.

"We're playing Durban next week, then Williamson the first half of the week after and Carlington the last half. Then—Home!

Love from,
"CHARLES."

When Mrs. Wilson had finished reading the letter she took it out to her husband.

"Read that," she told him. "Charles is the same spoil-hearted boy he always was. I reckon this is some lonesome little actress he's met somewhere."

Mr. Wilson dropped his newspaper and dusted his hands off on his overalls.

"I guess we'll have to let her come, mother. She's probably a pretty nice little girl or Charles wouldn't take up with her."

"Wonder what she does?" Mrs. Wilson mused.

"Actress probably."

"Oh, I hope not. I'd hate to have an actress in the house even for a week."

Once they had decided to let her come Mrs. Wilson put heart and soul into her plans for the visit. She cleaned the shining old house from garret to cellar. She put up fresh frilly curtains in the windows and planned menus that would tempt the jaded appetite of an epicure. When at last the day came for the arrival of her visitors she put on her best dress and went down to the station with her husband to meet them. Almost before she had seen him climb and developed her in an enthusiastic hug, then turned and introduced the girl beside him.

"Mother, this is Hazel Smathers," he said. "And Con's dad! Can't what a welcome!"

Mrs. Wilson looked at the demure little figure standing beside her huge son and she checked the impulse to feel sorry for her. "Probably a dreadful little vamp and that is an actress, too," she thought, so she repressed her natural cordiality and greeted the girl with a cool dignity.

The ride home was rather silent. Hazel was uncomfortable, Charles was wretched, Mr. Wilson wanted to explain to his wife, and Mrs. Wilson was the least miserable of the group. Later Hazel was so appreciative of every little thing and praised the supper so extravagantly that Mrs. Wilson melted a little in spite of herself.

"We actors have such a hard life", the girl said, "and it's always lump from one cheap hotel to another! A good home-cooked meal is like a bit of heaven to us."

After supper Mrs. Wilson sent them all out and started clearing away the dishes. Mr. Wilson went to the front porch to smoke, and Charles and Hazel wandered down to the back yard. Out of the kitchen window Mrs. Wilson watched them eagerly. Charles dropped down on an old tumbledown bench and the girl nestled. Hazel sat beside him, but not romantically close. Mrs. Wilson sighed with relief and went back to her work.

At last it was over, they went away. But a week later Mrs. Wilson nearly collapsed when she received a letter from Charles reading:

"Hazel and I were married this morning. We love you.

CHARLES."

She found Mr. Wilson out in the garden and showed him the message.

"He's married her. He's married an actress! I knew what would happen," she sobbed.

"Well, mother," he soothed, "I know it's hard on you, but she's a sweet little trick."

On the brink of the telegram came a letter postmarked Dalaga, Calif.

"Dear Mrs. Wilson (it ran):

"Hazel has wired me her intention of marrying your son, Charles, next Monday. At first I was dreadfully grieved at the idea of my only girl marrying an actor, and I cried myself sick over it; then my husband said Hazel's an actress herself. I don't see why you're making such a fuss about it. Actors are good men who are actors just like there are good women who are actresses. Then the humor of the situation dawned on me and I couldn't help laughing, and now they'll be happy because they're in the same kind of work.

I want to meet you soon and most especially my new son.

"Very cordially,

"CORA D. SMATHERS."

"Well, anyway (it isn't like Pa—a") laughed Mrs. Wilson to her husband. "Here I was looking down on Hazel for being on the stage and it never once struck me that our Charles was doing the very same work . . . six of one and—"

"Half dozen of the other," Mr. Wilson ended quietly. "Tells me like that."

Mixed Grill is a Change, Easy to Prepare, Tasty

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Moore Mind

Mixed Grill Baked Potatoes
Shredded Cabbage With Dressing
Apple Pie Coffee

A mixed grill is easily prepared, it is a change from the ordinary dishes served to family or guests, and it is delicious. These very good reasons for preparing it.

Today's Recipes

MIXED GRILL: Four lamb chops for hamburg steaks about one-inch thick), four half slices canned pineapple, melted butter, salt, four peeled bananas. Arrange meat and pineapple on preheated rack of broiler. Brush pineapple with melted butter and sprinkle with salt. Place rack about three inches below broiler and broil in very hot oven, 550 degrees (F.). At the end of six minutes turn meat and pineapple, and place the bananas (brushed with melted butter and sprinkled with salt) on rack of broiler. Continue broiling about eight minutes longer. Serves Four.

New Colors

A word as to colors. Brown is beginning to sell, and the stores for dresses as well as coats, suits, hats, shoes and gloves. Brown is being chosen in silks, wools and in linens for the south. A new red is, however, a rival. We have had dubonnet and wine, now we have a new shade of brownish wine red called "burnt wine" or "old port".

As to other colors, blues are tilted—Neon blue," Chinese blue, which has a hint of green. They are used in prints as well as plain colors.

FACTS AND FANCIES
Lime Grapefruit Cocktail

One can grapefruit sections, one-fourth cup green lime candy wafers. Break lime wafers into very small pieces and stir into grapefruit sections and juice. Place in refrigerator over night or for several hours. Stir occasionally before serving. The lime wafers add much to the grapefruit and the green coloring goes into the sections, making a pretty and delicious cocktail.

GOOD LINES distinguish this fitted evening coat from Kalmour. It is an example of the vogue for tailored formal wraps. Black jet and sequin decoration is used at the revers to contrast neatly with the sooty black of the soft wool fabric. Self-covered buttons and huge patch pockets are notable details.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

"I Beg Your Pardon"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When should you use "Pardon me" and "Excuse me"? As I understand it, "Excuse me" should be used only when leaving, while "Pardon me" is at all other times. Is this correct?

2—When so many compliments are given for an attractive coiffeur, a dress or hat, from your fellow-workers or friends, is it proper to say "Thank you" once to all of them, or is it best to say "I'm glad you like it" or "It's different" or "I rather like it and omit the usual "Thank you?"

N.

1—You are quite right about the differentiation between these two phrases. We say, "Will you excuse me, please", or "Excuse me, please" when we are asking to be excused from the room or from the table, or when we must take our attention away from the person with whom we are speaking for instance to answer the telephone.

We say the polite "I beg your pardon" or "I'm so sorry" or "I'm sorry" when we have to pass in front of some one, or when we accidentally push a person, when we are thrown against a person in the street-car, or when we interrupt a person before we realize that the person hadn't finished speaking.

A suggestion: it is more gracious to use the longer phrase ("I beg your pardon" or "I'm so sorry") rather than the short one "Pardon me". I am sure that you will agree that it is easier to get a pleasanter intonation of voice in the longer phrase, and this is important when we are adding a personal remark. Also this avoids that disagreeable accent on "me" that so many people thoughtlessly and brusquely give, saying "Pardon ME".

2—There is no objection to say a gracious "Thank you" when friends say such kind and appreciative things. This immediately registers your appreciation. "Thank you" should come first, and for compliment, and then you are right about adding a pleasant "I'm glad you like it", or "it makes me happy that you like it", or "How nice of you to tell me . . . I'm so proud that you like it." The other phrases you suggest . . . "It's different" and "I rather like it" . . . seem to me rather belittling.

Correspondence

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What would you suggest as the attitude I should take toward a young man who asks me to correspond with him, and as I wish to carry on the correspondence, I write him long, interesting letters and he answers with a short note written on his office . . . always in a hurry? Would you believe that he really wishes to hear from me?

Hopeful

I don't believe that I can be as "hopeful" as your signature about his enthusiasm in continuing the correspondence, however, you and may be very unlike to him, so may be an extremely busy person, and such hearty appreciation of that letter-writing is a pleasure for which he finds little or no time or opportunity. Incredulity . . . I must understand this in this rushing business age. Also to some people, to you, for instance, letter-writing is a delight, never a chore, never something to be postponed. These people as my mother used to say, "write a letter as easily as they drink a glass of water". Perhaps this letter is now one of this fortunate number. At least, however, you must admit that he doesn't slight other demands of your letters . . . and so even his brief notes may give you the "intelligence" by which you would apparently like to cling.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am so discouraged that I just don't know what to do, or to whom to go. Perhaps I'm now paying for hurting others. Now I'm really in love—so very much—and things are hopeless. The young man in the case was interested for about two months, and then without warning, he broke a date, upon which I had planned so much, and fairly sure it was not on account of another girl.

I believed he loved me as much as I did him, and was happier than I have been in my life. I loved this boy as I have never loved another, and I didn't act indifferent either. He's rather good looking and doesn't care much for the general run of girls. I will tell him how things stood, and told him to play fair with me—and I got the gate.

Unhappy

Perhaps you were too rash in telling him you cared so much for him, before he actually proposed to you. Why not let things drift along for a while, and see what happens? If there is no other girl to consider, the chances are that things will come out all right. Wouldn't it be better not to let him see how much you care, if there is a reconciliation?

And Now That He's Free

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Several years ago I met a man, and went out with him for about a year before he told me he was married and had two children. By that time I loved him so much I didn't care, and continued going with him, and for three years I took me to dances, shows and entertainments, and seemed proud to be with me.

Sixteen months ago his wife died, and it seems since then he has changed. When I ask him about it, he says that he must stay home with the children, who are now at home with his mother. He makes dates with me and breaks them. When his wife was living, he always told me if anything ever happened to her, he would marry me the next day; now he says he will never marry again on account of the children. Yet, he knows I would love him and be glad to do good for them.

I am not selfish, and have tried in every way to please him. What should I do Miss Fairfax? I love him so much, and have given up the world, and can't keep on the way I am now. He is 36 years old and I am 26.

R. E. S.

Well, my dear, you have now face to face with the fact that although you may encourage women to be unconventional, they are really quite old-fashioned and conservative about the women they marry. This one seems to be very selfish and self-centered. He isn't really in love with you. You are still young enough to take up new interests. Don't count on the married man to pin your faith to a married man.

Let a Smile Replace Sixbberness

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl and a half ago I met a young man. I learned to like very much. We went together for a year, and then we had a quarrel over a silly thing. Since then he ignores me. I have spoken to him on several occasions. People tell me he still likes me. How, Miss Fairfax, I really am in love with this boy, and can't seem to be satisfied with anyone else. My girl friend thinks we are both stubborn, and that neither of us will give in. Will you please advise me, as I love him so much.

H. M.

Don't you think it's foolish to indulge in this sort of childish pride? when you could both be so happy? The next time you run across the stubborn young man, give him your sweetest smile and say that you think this misunderstanding has gone far enough, and doesn't he? It is always the stronger, better-balanced one who makes the first move toward a reconciliation in a case of this kind, when there is really no reason for being angry.

WE SUGGEST FOR SIS

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

FOR THE high school girl, a suede coat for a Christmas gift hits her "right where she lives".

It may be a short jacket or lumber jacket style coat to wear to school on warmer days of winter, and on hikes or when skating and to all sorts of outdoor affairs. Or it may be the type pictured here. This is a three-quarter length suede coat in chestnut brown with white collar and stitched-down back pleats.

The matching hat is a high-crown affair with overlays of leaf-like suede pieces. It may or may not be a part of the gift. This coat will be as well liked by the college co-ed as by the high school girl.

Plaid skirts and warm sweaters to wear under such a coat make just as nice presents as this coat, and if two or three members of her family share the cost for the gift, they can get matching or harmonizing colors that make a smart outfit.

Other things the girl of this age will like are—jewelry, of course. A pearl necklace to wear with her sweater is a very good fashion for school, and, of course, she can wear it with her party dress too. Gold jewelry is so good this year, too, and necklace and bracelets make a gift any girl will appreciate. They need not be expensive, but these up-to-the-minute aids to smartness are always very much appreciated by young girls.

That Body of Yours

DO ATHLETICS DAMAGE THE HEART?

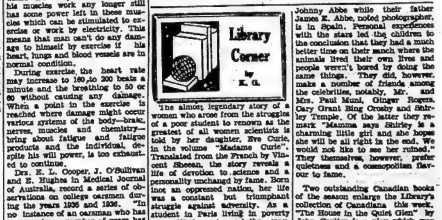
When we see the strained faces of oarsmen or other athletes finishing a race, we may have the feeling that such exercise is a mistake, that nature did not intend that muscles, heart and lungs should be put under such a strain as would greatly dilate the heart and overstretch the lungs.

As a matter of fact Nature intended that man should exert himself, should exercise or work to the point of apparent exhaustion, because after all man's every when he works or exercises to the point where his will power will not make his muscles work any longer still has some power left in these muscles which can be stimulated to exercise or work by electricity. This proves that man can do say damage to himself by exercise if his heart, lungs and blood vessels are in normal condition.

During exercise the heart rate may increase to 180 or 200 beats a minute and the breathing to 50 or 60 without harm to the individual. The point in the exercise is reached where damage might occur is a matter of the body-mind, the nerves, muscles and chemistry—bring about fatigue. Fatigue is a protects and the individual, despite his will power, is too exhausted to continue.

Drs. E. L. Cooper, J. O'Sullivan and E. Hughes in Medical Journal of Australia, record a series of observations on college oarsmen during the years 1936 and 1936. In no instance of an oarsman who has been rowing a number of years has the heart been larger than normal and in the majority the heart is smaller than the average for the height and build of the individual".

To investigators in the field of athletics the records of 109 rowing man for Ormond College between 1895 and 1935 were investigated. Of these men twenty-four are now dead (seventeen of these from natural causes, seven from war injuries) and seventy-six men are alive and well.



The expected death rate of men of an average age of 21 years during the years in question was 12. The men who rowed for Ormond therefore showed a much lower mortality about all things. "Madame Curie' is a book which cannot fail to impress the reader with its sincerity and distinction.

The delightful and at times, alarming frankness of childhood has invaded Hollywood in the latest book by those candid commentators, the Abbe children. "Of all Places" tells of the further adventures of Patience, Richard and Johnny Abbe while their father James E. Abbe, noted photographer, is in Spain. Personal experiences with the stars let the children to the conclusion that they had a much better time on their ranch where the animals lived their own lives and people weren't bored by doing the same things. They did, however, make a number of friends among the celebrities, Mary Pickford, and Mrs. Paul Muni, Ginger Rogers, Cary Grant, Mary Orogh and Shirley Temple. Of the latter they remark "Hollywood says Shirley is a charming little girl and she hopes she will be all right in the end. We would not like to see her ruined." They themselves, however, prefer Patience and a cosmopolitan flavor to fame.

Two outstanding Canadian books of the season enlarge the Library's collection of Canadiana this week. "The House in the Quiet Glen" by John Coulter is a play which won five awards this year. Winner of the Beaubrough Trophy at the Dominion Drama festival, the play is based on stories told the author over the turf fire in a little house in Ireland. Included also in the volume is the three-act play "Family Portrait" which was presented recently in Toronto. Patrick Slater, author of "The Yellow Briar" has turned his talents to biography in his latest book "The Water-Drinker". The collection upholds the beauty of the Canadian landscape and is distinctly limited to 1,000 copies with nine outstanding landscapes by Canadian artists.

A book that will be a valuable asset for the holiday season is "S.S.V.P., a Book of Parties", by Toni Taylor of the staff of McCall's Magazine. Here is a welcome guide for the harried hostess to all that is up-to-date in parties, whether holiday parties, bridge parties, shower or money making affairs for clubs and churches. E. G.

"Its almost legendary story of a woman who arose from the struggles of a poor student to become one of the greatest of all women scientists is told by her daughter, Eve Curie, in the volume "Madame Curie". Translated from the French by Vincent Sheean, the story reveals a life of devotion to science and a personality unchanged by fame. Born in Poland, a nation, her life was a constant but triumphant struggle against adversity. As a student in Paris living in poverty and solitude, she met the man, Pierre Curie, whose genius was akin to hers. She married him and together they discovered the luminous element, radium. At the moment when the fame of the two scientists was spreading throughout the world, Pierre Curie was killed in an accident. The epic of grief and physical illness she continued and developed the genius they created. Eve Curie in the biography of her mother has revealed that she has more rare than her work, a personality which shrank from fame and wealth and which continued to the end in the role of the eternal student, gentle, timid and serious about all things. "Madame Curie' is a book which cannot fail to impress the reader with its sincerity and distinction.

The delightful and at times, alarming frankness of childhood has invaded Hollywood in the latest book by those candid commentators, the Abbe children. "Of all Places" tells of the further adventures of Patience, Richard and Does Girl Need Good Spanking?

Four-Year-Old Very Unruly, Declares Family Friend

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D. Head Department of Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

"DEAR DR. MYERS: I have a friend who has a very naughty little girl four years old. She simply will not mind, and delights to do the things you tell her not to do. She is very bright and normal in every respect. Her mother has never believed in spanking, so, of course, the child doesn't know anything about it. To my way of thinking, a good spanking would be the best thing for her.

"My friend has been quite interested of late in reading your articles and has asked me to write you about her problem.

"Please write full details as to how she can give her child a good old-fashioned spanking that will do her some good. What to use, hand, hairbrush, ruler, or what. How many spanks to administer each time and how often, in case there are no good results from the first spanking. She will greatly appreciate any suggestions you may have to offer.

"Have you yourself ever spanked your own children, and what method did you use?" In one of your articles with regard to a little boy who played with matches you advised the parent to punish him LOW on his bare bottom. Why did you say low? Isn't it more than that, or what?"

Professional Enemies

My reply: If that mother still disbelieves in spanking she should continue not to spank her child. She can she get results unless her child also believes in spanking and unless both of them plan carefully together in agreeing on the specific types of situations in which they would spank and exactly how. This child is already old enough to have outgrown spanking. It is pretty coolly cold to her and her parents now; but not to spank is to be still more coolly by and by.

The parent's bare, fat hand applied to child's bare thighs, with several sloppy slaps would suffice. Spank only for specific acts that are forbidden, as playing in the fire. Then that spanking immediately follows the offense, and that the child ignores the spanking and act without instant pain from spanking. The specific act spanked for should be one which the child knows he always thereafter is absolutely no exceptions until the act permanently ceases. This one matter settled, all else as to specific acts to be forbidden, saying "No" just once as the pain is applied. A ruler or hairbrush is too hard on flesh. Low on the fat thigh, to avoid hurting and to afford striking path. Yes, indeed, I spanked each of our children before he or she was five; so did their mother. Today, at the ages of 31, 31, 31, no one child can remember one spank, the others can remember but one each, the only spankings we take as fire.

Poems That Live

MUTABILITY

The flower that smiles today
Tomorrow dies;
All that we wish to stay
Tempts, and then flies.
What is this world's delight?
Lightning that mocks the night,
Brief even as bright.
Virtue, how frail it is!
Friendship how rare!
Love, how it sells poor bliss
For proud despair!
But we, though soon they fall,
Survive their joy, and all
Which ours we call.
Whilst skies are blue and bright,
Whilst flowers are gay,
Whilst eyes that change ere night
Make glad the day,
Whilst pet the calm hours creep,
Dream thou—and from thy sleep
Then wake to weep.

Treatment To Relieve Heartburn

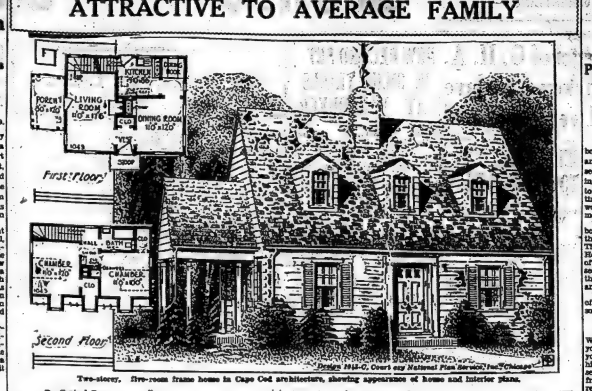
Dr. Clendening Tells Its Causes and What to Do

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE SYMPTOM which usually is called heartburn is a burning sensation at the lower part of the esophagus and the throat, with the regurgitation of acid gastric juice into the back of the mouth. It is a common symptom in many digestive disorders, and is generally thought to be due to an excess amount of gastric juice.

However, it may be present without digestive disease at all, simply as part of a neurotic temperament. In fact, studies made by the Bowen scholar of the New York Academy of Medicine, on a series of patients suffering with this symptom, showed that it was frequently present at times when the gastric juice was deficient in hydrochloric acid, and was normal in less than the normal amount.

Clearly, the explanation is further, it was found that when a dilution of hydrochloric acid was injected into the stomach of the sycagrins it sometimes caused a burning sensation and sometimes it did not.



Need Not Cause Alarm

It is, therefore, not a symptom which need cause alarm. It is only because patients are unusually frightened at the onset of this symptom, so that added to the more uncomfortableness of it, it always makes people unhappy. It does become annoying or uncomfortable, it can usually be relieved in most instances by the use of baking soda in water.

Certain foods are likely to provoke it, among them white bread, tomatoes, spices, pickles and sour things generally.

How the gastric juice gets from the stomach into the esophagus is not known. There are a great deal of work in the last few years. There are some people who are sometimes troubled by it after a heavy esophagus and she first part of the stomach are above the diaphragm in the chest, and in these people it is quite a regular thing to find that a meal does not go into the stomach entirely, but remains in the chest esophagus, and has to be regurgitated into the back of the throat. Heart burn people probably have about the same kind of a mechanism, but their anatomical structure makes it easier for them to bring acid material up.

SMALL HOUSE IN CAPE COD TRADITION ATTRACTIVE TO AVERAGE FAMILY

Two-story, five-room frame home in Cape Cod architecture, showing appearance of home and interior plans.

By Central Press

THE SMALL FRAME HOUSE in Cape Cod architecture always is attractive to the family which wants a modest home of good proportions and comfortable arrangement, but one that is economical to build.

The two-story frame cottage pictured is such a house. It has a large living room, with central hearth, from which opens a pleasant porch on the side of the house. The dining room, the other side of the hearth, has built-in china cases. The kitchen is handily arranged and has a dining nook overlooking the garden.

Upstairs are two bedrooms, with dormer windows, a number of closets, and bathroom. Stairways are all at the back of the house, going up from the back end of the living room and also communicating with the kitchen.

Size of the main building is 26 by 22 feet; size over all, 27 by 36 feet. Total cubage, 13,400 cubic feet.

More planning goes into the preparation of school children's lunches nowadays. Mothers know more about balanced meals than formulas, and food values than they once did. Hot lunches are popular and served at school are better for children than cold lunches brought from home. Or a hot dish to supplement the cold lunch is advisable.

To aid leaders of school lunch projects and to show what space and equipment must be simple, the United States department of agriculture has prepared menus and recipes. Well-planned suggestions by the home economists follow the general pattern:

First, a main hearty hot dish. Once a week eggs in some form; creamed, scrambled or combined with cheese, rice, or vegetables. On the other days a meat or fish and vegetable chowder or stew; or dried beans on peas in appetizing form or a dish of macaroni and cheese.

Twice each week tomatoes come into the menu for their good flavor and color and their high vitamin value.

Milk always is present, as milk to drink and doubling some days as one of the chief ingredients in soup, sauce, or hot beverage.

Fruit likewise appears daily as the dessert, now and then plus a cookie. The emphasis, however, is on fruit, whatever is fresh and seasonal.

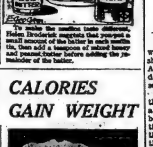
Perfumes That Make You Happy

IF YOU do not know what perfume to choose for yourself, select the one that makes you feel happy and attractive when you put it on, says Ruth Hewitt, beauty editor of Good Housekeeping.



"Don't save your perfumes for special occasions. Use it daily, a great perfumer says that the best way to apply a modern scent is on the skin covered by clothing. In this way it seems a part of you. Or spray it on your hair . . . Most perfumes are not at their best on the hair, and colors are apt to react badly to them. Don't condemn a new odor as too heavy until you have used it in various ways at kinds of weathers. Many alluring scents lose their romantic appeal on sultry days or in a very warm room. Be sure you are not applying it too freely.

"If you can't afford the grandest perfumes, there are plenty of delightful inexpensive ones. There are saucy, spicy, sweet, seductive or what-have-you odors. You may not have the confidence due to costliness, but you can also be original with your perfumes if little price. You might specialize, for example, in the fragrance of white flowers only. Or break the rules and use the trusting skin-plicity of violet to contradict your most sophisticated gown. Use your imagination. Be true to your own taste, and you can make the scented air about you as personal as your signature."

INCREASE THE CALORIES IF YOU'D GAIN WEIGHT

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

"AH I AM quite a bit underweight. I would like to know how I increase my weight by counting calories. I have a scale, but do not know how many calories my daily diet should contain."

"Can you tell me how many calories my diet should contain so that the weight of my body will INCREASE?"

If you are a normally active woman, your normal calories for food should range from 16 to 20 calories a day for each pound of your weight. Thus your normal weight, for instance, is about 120 pounds, your maintenance ration to supply the needs of your body, NOW, would be equal to from 1,920 to 2,400 calories a day.

If you wish to gain weight, you should increase your ration about 1,000 calories each day, until you have gained the weight you desire. Do not make up this extra 1,000 calories in fatty foods that are bulky and take up a lot of room. Make it up with foods that are high in calories but low in bulk. Cream is filling, and you will be able to do it without overloading.

"I've obtained rich excellent results through following your instructions on hair care, but I especially had to write and thank you-My hair is ever so much thicker and healthier looking and I haven't fall out the way it used to.

"However, I intend to give a permanent wave next week, and was wondering whether it would continue using castor oil shampoos? Would these shampoos in any way harm the permanent wave?

Castor oil shampoos should not in any way harm a good permanent wave. As a matter of fact, they should prove beneficial, rather than detrimental to the wave, by helping to bring out the full beauty of the wave.

tends to have a drying effect on the hair and scalp. If the hair becomes dry and brittle the wave will not appear at its best, and may even assume a frizzled, kinky appearance.

Weekly or fortnightly hot castor oil shampoos after the permanent will nourish the hair-roots and the scalp, and will correct any dryness. Moreover, they will keep the hair soft and glossy, and will help to bring out the full beauty of the wave.

Youth, 17, Considers Suicide

Pal Lost Own Life Saving His, and He's Lonely

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a boy 17 years old. I am working and am making good money, but it seems I just can't get interested in life. I pray every night to God to take me off the earth, and sometimes I think of killing myself. I would if it would be fair to my mother.

"I go out with girls and other boys, but then I leave away from them and won't go out any more. The only pal I ever loved is dead. He died trying to save my life. I often think of him and wish I could see him, but I never do. I guess there is only one way to see him, and that is by killing myself.

"The reason I wrote to you is I often read your piece in the paper, so I thought you could help me.

"WEARY."

I am glad you did write to me, Weary. Do it again, and say your best pal died trying to save your life. Of course you mean time him like everything. Life always seems a bit useless after a good friend has died. It is hard to reconcile oneself to it. I know. I, too, have lost a friend whom I loved, but somehow one has to go on and even to love others.

This friend saved your life, you say, and this naturally makes you feel even more unkind to him. But as he DID save your life, why not try to make it worth something to prove to him that his act was not in vain? He was a brave chap, and I am sure he would not want to think that his friend could not face life and be courageous about it.

Would he? He would probably like to think of you living a strong, cheerful man, doing a good job of work, and being a good friend to do this instead of thinking of taking your life?

And it would be a rotten thing to do to your mother—killing yourself. Can you imagine how she says that a person who wants to make him own life really does it to spite someone. He hates someone and wants to get even. You don't hate anyone, do you, my boy? As you are working and earning good money, why don't you take up someone who is more unfortunate than yourself, and do them a good turn? It doesn't matter who it is you think of, but there are always are people who are lonely and hungry and very unhappy. If would seem to you worth living if you could do some good. It is the self-absorbed person who commits suicide. Write me again soon.

Buy Warm Footgear In Winter

By HELEN FOLLETT

The girl who goes skipping over wet, cold pavements wearing thin shoes can expect her nose to redden. And if that is all anything more maddening than a red nose, no beauty maker knows what it is.

Feet should be properly shod in warm, wool socks. Cold feet means a lowering of energy. When the body is exposed to chills, the functions of the skin are retarded, for the skin is not behaving normally, have only to beauty griefs to make, the heart heavy.

Many of the young fry pay little attention to slicker checks. They face cold winds with the coat flying open, and that's silly. The skin doesn't like being chilled. It gets sven. If there is too much chilling it may turn blue.

It's fun to talk about permanents, factory workers, protective eye shadows, but the fact remains that the basis of good looks is health. You have to have it or you'll get shouldered out of the beauty procession.

Footies cold, nose red? Try the old saying: If cold, dress orders to the circulatory system to get into action.

Moisten a cup of ordinary table salt. Stand in the tub, friction the salt into the flesh all over the body.

Turn on the tepid spray. chill gradually. Finish with a grand brisk rub with coarse towel.

O fair and stately maid, whose eyes
Were kindled in the upper skies
At the same torch that lighted mine;
For so I must interpret still
Thy sweet dominion o'er my will,
A sympathy divine!

Ah! let me blameless gaze upon
Features that seem at heart my own;
For fear those watchful sendbelts,
Who charm the more their glances forbids,
Chaste-glowing, underneath their lids,
With fire that draws while it repels.

President Schlegel of O. H. A. To Attend Hockey Conclave In Belleville Over Week-end

Association Prexy Agrees to Try And Settle District Hockey War

BURROWS' SUGGESTION

By K. J. C.

With the various district hockey associations at a check-mate regarding groupings in Eastern Ontario, Alvin M. Schlegel, president of the Ontario Hockey Association has agreed to come to Belleville over the week-end in an endeavor to settle amicably the turbulent situation that is confronting the hockey interests of the district.

President Schlegel is coming to Belleville as the central point in the troubled area at the request of S. R. "Stanley" Burrows, Eastern Ontario O.H.A. executive member. "I notified all clubs concerned in the matter and on receipt of a report for me boys in the city, the "I" officials have agreed to appear a joint conference with this end in view. To qualify for the junior classification, however, a player must be under the age of 20 years on January 1st of the playing season," explained Burrows Tuesday.

A meeting of all interested junior basketball players will be held in the Y.M.C.A. building on Monday next, from which the nucleus of a Belleville junior basketball squad will be formed. The meeting will be held between 7 and 8 p.m. on Monday night at the "Y." All players desirous of trying for a position are asked to report at the meeting which is to be followed by initial practice of the season on the "Y" gymnasium floor.

Gananoque Disbands.

As there are seven clubs concerned, it being understood the Gananoque club has disbanded, the matter of an adequate grouping for the greatest number concerned is the chief matter to be presented on the agenda of the proposed meeting at which Mr. Schlegel will be officially present, along with Mr. Burrows. The O.H.A. sub-committee definitely outlined the wishes of the association and refused more recently to allow the classification of Queen's and Garrison entries, upon their request for an intermediate rating. The question of the classification of the individual clubs and district groupings will be definitely settled at this meeting.

C.A. would sponsor a junior basketball squad in this city for O.A.B.A. competition during the coming season.

"I understand there is a wealth of junior basketball material in Belleville and with an idea in mind to create more interest in sport for our boys in the city, the "Y" officials have agreed to sponsor a junior basketball this season. To qualify for the junior classification, however, a player must be under the age of 20 years on January 1st of the playing season," explained Instructor Hicken today.

Lynda Adams, Vancouver Diver, a New Champion

Vancouver, Dec. 11 (CP) — One Canadian record was cracked and another equalled here last night at eastern stars carried off first places in junior and women's events at the British Empire Games swimming and diving trials. The meeting continues today.

The new record, first of the trials to choose Canada's team to the games at Sydney, Australia, in February, came in the mile, 220-yard breast stroke final when young Johnny Prentice of Toronto made the distance in 2:34.4. It was 6 4/10 seconds faster than the old mark of 2:36 6/10, set by Jack Arbuthnot Toronto three years ago.

Lynda Adams, diminutive Vancouver diver, was declared the new Canadian three-metre diving champion. She dethroned Thelma Bough, ner of Toronto who finished fourth. The Vancouver girl won the diving with 102.2 points.

Gordon Kerr of Windsor, Ont., equalled the Canadian record of 1:08 8/10 in the 100-yard backstroke. Jean Mann Duncan of Montreal was second with Ed Kliss of Vancouver third. Kerr and his previous record mark Dec. 11, 1934.

Bob Price, Toronto, took the men's 440- and 440-yard free style events but failed to threaten the records he holds in those distances. Price did the 220-yard free style in 2:17 and the 440-yard in 5:08 2/5. He was followed closely by Bobby Thompson of Vancouver in both events.

Dorothy Lyon of Toronto led a field of five in the women's 100-yard free style final. Her time was 1:20 1/5. Phyllis Dewar of Vancouver nosed out Florence Rumble of Montreal for second place.

DROUILLARD MAY MEET ARMSTRONG

Earns Chance by Winning Over Kid Sila of Detroit

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 11 (CP)— Jackson was more than an outside chance today that Orville Drouillard, 135 pounder of fighting dynamite from Windsor, Ont., would get a chance to mix blows with Henry Armstrong, the dusky featherweight champion before long.

Drouillard combined fine ring generalship with ton-rate slugging here to gain an eight-round victory over Kid Sila of Detroit last night. He did it in such impressive fashion that Manager Roy Limerhood announced the Windsor scrapper had signed a two with the featherweight king on his exhibition tour.

But another Canadian, Jackie Peralta, Kitchener, Ont., ballet not do so well here. Battaglia, who lost in New York two weeks ago to Sooty Krieger of Brooklyn, dropped a 10-round decision to George Black, Milwaukee middleweight.

Lily a boy at the Max Baer's and the Lovelace lacrupes and former ring of the heavyweight fighters were highly pleased with the washing he has done for his new eight-pound heir. "I'm really got something to fight for now, and you just watch. I may be champion of the heavyweight fighters again." Baer's wife is the former Mary Ellen Galligan of Washington, D.C.

Taking the recent snow blockages as a basis of their arguments, the Kingston hockey interests now use yesterday's blockage of the highways to substantiate their objections to a hockey grouping that might include Peterboro or the Airport. "What would happen if similar weather prevailed during the playoff season and we were forced to postpone many games?" asks Charlie Hicks of Queen's. A rather flimsy excuse, we'd suggest. The recent storms are the worst experienced in nearly a decade and it is safe in assuming the highways will never be blocked again this winter. The main reason for the recent blockages was the fact the highway crews simply weren't ready for emergency their equipment's condition not being effective until December 15, we believe. If the Kingston hockey fans would come out and flatly tell the truth, mainly that they won't travel to Peterboro and Belleville to see a compact group at little or no expense. This is true enough, but at all-Kingston group will not appeal to the patrons of the game, so they would definitely suffer through the turnstiles.

Yesterday the Peterboro scribe was quoted as saying Manager Art Littlech City members would not tolerate an interlocking that might necessitate a trip to Kingston and an interlocking schedule was suggested whereby the Kingston clubs on the east will look after their own interests, which would be more favorable for the Peterboro in the long run. The Peterboro people want to co-operate, then we will have to look after our own interests and try to locate with the Kingston group. Apparently the agreement of Kingston are not exactly adverse to their optimism of playing in Belleville and Peterboro, but regards a larger grouping that would include Kingston, Belleville "themselves," was the opinion of the R.C.A.F. officials given us this morning.

Developments pertaining to district groupings seems to be at a standstill. The O.H.A. in their rulings of not changing club classifications, although they are not averse to the wishes of the district convening and amicably settling the matter of groupings among themselves, if at all possible, however. In the meantime the various groups are unable to convene and draft schedules; this goes for the senior "B" clubs, intermediate "A" teams and of course the junior clubs, who have to await the fate reached by the clubs of a higher category before they can convene.

R. S. "Sandy" Barrow, local executive member of the O.H.A. informed us this morning that Mr. H. Schlegel, president of the O.H.A., will be in Belleville over the week-end in an endeavor to get clarified in the present grouping controversy have been officially notified to have your club represented and ready to "talk business". The "eastern hockey executive" will meet the O.H.A. and more particularly Mr. Burrows, on Saturday and Sunday already. "We intend to settle this matter once and for all when President Schlegel arrives. The clubs must come prepared to talk business and decide some of the clubs will be glad to give a little in order that an amicable solution may result," stated Mr. Burrows.

The R.C.A.F. "Flyers" got as far as Napanee yesterday, but were unable to get through for their scheduled Van Horne series game with the Kingston Garrison, the latter being down of a snow plow working east of Napanee, was the reason for the abandonment of the trip. The Flyers' bus was halted and ordered to return home by Highway Traffic Police. The Belleville Redmen meet the Kingston City team next Wednesday, weather permitting.

The proposed European tour of Maple Silverman's Sudbury Wolves has been cancelled owing to Maple's spurn of packsters took a 7-3 trampling at the hands of a mining town the other night. The Wolves are not considered strong enough to compete in the world championship tournament in the Prague next February. The Wolves were to have represented Canada, but the executive of the N.O.H.A. stated they could not recommend the Sudbury outfit as it's all off and Canada will not be represented in the world tournament next year.

After concluding the main reason for the hockey controversy in Eastern Ontario was caused by the inaction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in not calling together the intermediate "A" winners and the senior "B" winners at the termination of the regular schedule, the Peterboro sport scribe goes on to say:

"Why not an eight-leaund group, as someone suggested at the local Hockey Club meeting last evening. Why not bring Kingston, Gananoque, Ellera, Belleville and Point? With top three at the end playing off, the winner to step into senior "B" playdowns; next three then declaring a winner for the intermediate "A" playdowns. May not be perfect but it's not a bad idea. The Kingston squads would only have one trip here each, whereas the poor Peterboro would have to travel four times to Kingston and once to Gananoque! If the O.H.A. insists on a senior "B" series down this way, this might work out okay to the satisfaction of everyone."

There is much more truth than poetry in the following paragraph, penned by Brother Bill Walshe, the Kingston scribe, who hits the ball on the nose with the following:

"Strange as it seems when Napanee was declared in Belleville territory it helped Gananoque, as two place about sixty miles apart. With Kingston deprived of the services of Napanee players the Kingston club will probably disband, while seven Gananoque players will go to Gananoque. Hockey fell in an unhealthy state when places the size of Belleville, Kingston and Gananoque have to depend on a Bliss Hess like Napanee for players, and not one municipality in Eastern Ontario can form a team composed of local boys."

For years and years Jack Doyle's quoted betting odds on sports events have been as orderly as the listing of a stock in Wall Street. Now the veteran Broadway commissioner announces hes retiring from his "billiard academy" at 7456 Broadway. Jack is 50 years old and says he wants a rest.

CRITICAL EYES AT THE STADIUM TO WATCH GAME

Football Experts And Writers From All Points to Attend

RULING HELD UP

Stevenson Will Know Fate Just Before Game Time

By ELMER DUIMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Critical eyes of the east's football experts were trained today on the gridiron spectacle of the year — Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Prite Hanson against Toronto Argonauts and Bob Isbister.

From every part of snow-clogged Ontario came newspaper writers, coaches of senior and lower teams, officials who turned in jack Canning weather keep them from the intermittent struggle to decide the football championship supremacy. A highly-critical audience was on hand.

Behind the scenes in play leading roles in the drama were Hanson, the gunner; and Isbister, the kicker. The big question revolved around Winnipeg's hope that Hanson would carry the ball as far as Isbister kicked it, meaning 80, 90 or 70 yards.

Referee Jack Cannon

Sports writers were on hand from more or more or cities, the West-ern Ontario Sports Writers' Association getting a mass contingent on Varsity Stadium for purposes of reviewing the game. Coach Art Mesmerof and his Senia Imperials, champs of Argos in the eastern final, also assisted in a body.

While fandom impatiently awaited the Canadian Rugby Union's 11th hour decision on the eligibility of Art Stevenson, Bomber backfield star, interest in the engagement reached fever height. It was estimated in some quarters that Stevenson might swing the tide to Winnipeg with his presence.

Ralph Day, president of the C. R. U. planned to interview the former Nebraska player this morning, concerning his eligibility under the residence rule, and then decide whether he should join Hanson, Greg Kabat and Steve Olander on the Bomber back division.

Grid Field Fast.

Frozen hard, the field was fast for running backs. It was considered ideal for Argos and their ground-gaining plays with Art West, Isbister and Morris handling the ball. Hanson would have every chance to flash his tremendous speed.

Even should Stevenson be declared eligible, Bombers planned to have Olander do their punting. The 190-pound former junior star, kicks a high ball but gets many yards back on the run than Isbister.

Value of Ontario's 1937 tobacco crop was estimated at $15,000,000, about $7,000,000 more than last year and about $5,000,000 greater than the previous high obtained in 1933.

New York Americans, of the National Hockey League, have greatly surprised the hockey experts this season with the brilliant showing to date. It was thought that the average age of the club was too old to be very much in the way of a Stanley Cup threat, but the Amerks have been knocking over the best clubs in the league. At this stage of the schedule, they are lying in second position in the International section of the N.H.L. with every possibility of overtaking both Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens, who are tied for first. Such veterans as Ching Johnson, "Shp" Day, Neil Stewart and others have been signed by Manager Merrin "Red" Dutton and molded into a competitively dangerous hockey aggregation. Their star centreman, Dave "Sweeney" Schriner (CENTRE) has finally hit his stride and is at present the top goal-getter on the team, nicking the twine on seven occasions. Along with Schriner, are Eddie Wiseman (RIGHT), and Tommy Anderson, (LEFT), both dangerous threats around the opposition's nets.

After supper Lucille went home for fresh clothes and Ronny sat by Bobbie's bed and lost no time in getting to the question he was scrubbed to have answered before he went away again.

"A long time ago you said something in one of your letters about Lucille's unfortunate experience. You never mentioned it again. I've been a little curious to know who the man was—and what became of him."

Mrs. MacAlister looked at him steadily, then said, "You know him, son. I think he was the only passenger in Maple Village you really ever disliked.... Tom Burton."

"Lucille was engaged to Tom Burton?" Ronny said, slowly. He remembered Tom Burton in high school, a profane rowdy and a bully who had openly boasted his failure was one of the most notorious bootleggers in the country. He said, "He must have changed, a great deal."

"For the worst, maybe," his mother replied. "He grew up to be the village tough if we ever had one. Drank most of the time and always getting into scrapes.... Nobody could understand it. Some said Lucille set out to save his soul. Maybe so. She's a mighty earnest church worker. But all I know is that Lucille's mother came over here crying and said Lucille was going to marry him."

Ronny shook his head. "I don't blame to get it.... What broke it up?"

"I don't know that anything did," Mrs. MacAlister said. "Tom just disappeared one night and wasn't around these parts for over a year. He popped up about the time you were here last winter. Then he went off again. She said after a pause, "I told you once before, Ronny, Lucille would make some man a good wife, Ronny; I still think so. And—I mean, if you're interested in Lucille, you ought to ask her about Tom. You don't want a thing like that hanging over you."

When Lucille came back Ronny had relived; and when she slipped past the closed door of his room a little after seven next morning Ronny was sitting in the smoker of a Boston-bound train, talking himself, "I won't ask her about Tom Burton. When I come back, I'll simply ask her to come over and let her tell me about Burton of her own free will."

Bryant Wilson was a confident weather forecaster. He had told the young pilot of the plane that flew from New London, and they was now telling the lean, grizzled fisherman who stood on the dock's seaward end, with ordinate apprehension as Bryant came aft to cast off.

"Last night's storm," said Bryant discreetly, "spoiled most of the sport. She may be a little choppy out there, but it won't last." He went forward into the glass-enclosed pilot shelter and a moment later the Manatee Bug slid away from the dock. Bryant reappeared, lifted a hand: "If we aren't tied up here by midnight you can call out the marines!"

The man standing on the dock, starting toward the car, Bryant at the slim figure of a girl and his astonished ears his breath. "Dandies! She's got no right taking that girl out there."

The girl was in a small canvas bottom chair well within the protecting walls of the shelter. Smiling up at the pudgy face of the young man at the wheel, she said, "I hope you're right about the weather, Bryant. If the water's as cold as the air, I shouldn't like to be swimming in it." She was not really cold, for she was wearing a heavy sweater next to her frock and a leather coat over that, but when the wind whipped in it stung ed at her silken legs and left her face feeling slightly damp.

"Right?" he said. "I'm wrong, it's the first time in forty year o'sailin' I've been next, mate, by." He hooked an arm over the wheel and swung around to look at her. "It's growing calmer by the minute. Comfortable?"

"Fine, thanks." She thought, I'll be able to handle him if he doesn't get fresh."

"Know where we're headed?"

"Block Island?"

"Roughly," he said. "I have a beautiful chart, an expensive compass and a perfectly crumby sense of direction. We may make it."

"Could I borrow the binoculars?" she asked, reaching up." I want to see if Matty's on the job yet."

He took the glasses from the wall of the shelter and handed them to her. "She's not pitching as much as she was. Notice? I tell you Block Island's don't mean a thing."

She nodded to his question. He was right. The Water Bug was riding with less effort now.

Sandra put the glasses to her eyes and adjusted the lenses, not to distant Block Island shore, but preferring this to simply sitting there holding her hands. "I want to see if Matty's on the job yet!" she had said to Bryant. She had been thinking of Matt Stanley then, was suddenly thinking of him again, of what he had said to her when she was leaving the office last night. Bryant hadn't given her an opportunity to see Matt alone and it was only when they passed him in the hall that he told him, "It's no soap on that divorce case, Matt."

Matt's face screwed up. "Shoot back. 'Don't think you're crawling out. It probably won't be final for at least a month, so there's time to do a good job."

The Manatee sank to her lee, she didn't want to think about that now. She had been thinking of Matt and that incredible telephone conversation half the night—Enid saying her daddy was the finest lawyer Bryant at the slim figure of a girl and his astonished ears his breath. of his incompetence as a navigator, she supposed he had been relying very largely on his ability to see and identify markers and on the fact that they would be out but a short time before the island itself would loom up on the horizon or shining blur to steer a straight-away course without referring to either chart or compass. But since that heavy wall of rain had closed in upon them there had been practically no visibility at all.

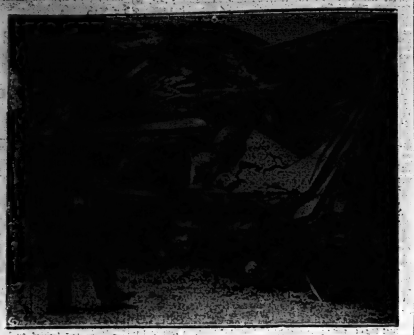
Hours and hours ago, it seemed now, Bryant had said, "I could jump overboard and take a bite out of the first shark that came along. I'm that hungry. Watch me below and prepare the feast, Sandra! Or take the wheel and I'll bring the food up."



But she had insisted on bringing the food up herself. Bryant had crept down the narrow hatch, clinging to the shiny brass rails to keep from falling as she had found herself standing in the unbelievably small galley, staring beyond at two really made bunks crowded under the forward deck. The Water Bug was an admirably compact craft, built for speed and short cruises, with a total absence of space that provided in limited form all the conveniences of a much larger boat. Taking up the big box prepared for Bryant by a famous delicatessen she made her way to the ladder-like steps thinking what a honeymoon couple could be spent on the Water Bug.

Even then Bryant must have known a storm was in the making, but with the quiet, mufflied hum of the engine in his ears and their destination not too far away, he had not been concerned; and a delicious picnic luncheon finally disposed of and the last remnants thrown over the side, he pulled Sandra into the circle of his arms and put her hands on the wheel and said, "Steer."

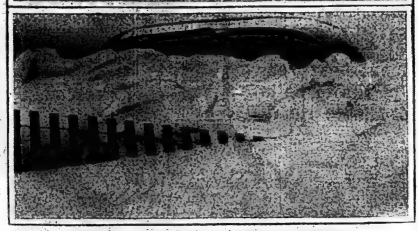
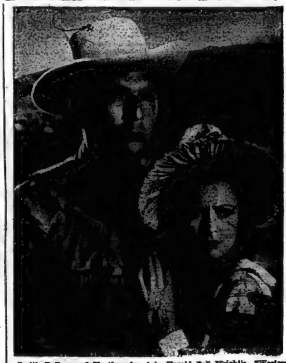
Take it From Me, Folks,
SHOP EARLY!
I found out Last Year what it means to be in the Last-Minute rush!

Out of control, this army aeroplane, which has been reduced to wreckage in its landing, crashed through the roof of the house in the background and killed two-year-old Leonard Albright as he lay asleep in an upstairs room. The aeroplane's pilot, Capt. P. A. Avellno, also died in the crash. Although the little child was sleeping only a few feet from his brother, a year older, the machine missed the elder lad and he was uninjured.



Under steady clipping of pneumatic chisels, plain blocks of stone which have marked the main entrance to Canada's parliament building in Ottawa for the past 18 years are being steadily transformed into intricate sculptured design. The six men working at it—and most have worked abroad as well as here—are convinced the result will be comparable to the most beautiful doorways of Europe. Main feature of the archway design is a band bearing the provincial coats-of-arms on a background of Canadian tree leaves and farm fruits. A smaller band embodies the Tudor rose, maple, shamrock, thistle, lily and Canadian birds. A life-size lion on one side and a unicorn on the other bear the coats of arms of Great Britain and Canada. The lion is shown closeup at LEFT, and unicorn at the RIGHT. Work on the archway, shown in the CENTER, has been proceeding all summer and is expected to be completed early next year. C. Souoy and C. de L. McCarthy, both noted sculptors are in charge of the work.

Barbed wire at his back, a ballle flag of Nippon floating overhead and the wreckage of a chair for a desk, this Japanese soldier laboriously pens a letter to those he left behind in flowery Nippon. The photo was made outside Shanghai after the recent drive had placed the Japanese in undisputed possession of the great Chinese metropolis.



DRIFTS BURY STALLED CARS ON HIGHWAY NEAR BELLEVILLE

This is what happened to cars trying to get through from Belleville to Stranorville and Point Anne Thursday. Scores of cars were ditched and a gale soon covered them with snowdrifts like the car in (3) which failed to receive protection from the snowfence in the foreground. The automobile in (1) is being pulled back to the road after a snowplow had cleared a path.

Worn out from her five-hour battle with the sea, Miss Eleanor Offut, of Los Angeles, is pictured stretched out on the life boat seat alongside a blue clad officer from the S. S. Lillian Luckenbach, who commanded the rescue craft. Miss Offut disappeared from the Lillian Luckenbach somewhere north of Cuba. Her cabin-mate, a Canadian, reported her missing. Captain Bowen, in command of the freighter, ordered the ship yet about and retraced his course. Recovery of the young woman after a needle-in-the-haystack search is barely short of miraculous. Miss Offut was removed from the ship by private ambulance when it docked at New York and all details of the incident were shrouded in secrecy.

Appointee to the vitally import ant diplomatic post of United States ambassador to Britain is Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the U.S. maritime commission and ace trouble shooter for the New Deal. Mr. Kennedy will succeed Ambassador Robert Worth Bingham, whose retirement has been caused by ill-health in January.

High Herbert, goofier, spoofier than ever before in "That Man's Here Again" at the Capitol commencing Sunday midnight.

One of the most important, and yet, perhaps, least-known persons occupying the spotlight in the Sino-Japanese conflict is Shigeru Kawagoe, Japanese ambassador to China. Kawagoe is considered one of the most astute students of political conditions in the eastern hemisphere.

All across the southern fringe of Ontario, throughout the northern United States, and even down into the winter "tropics" of the southland, they were doing this yesterday, digging out stranded automobiles, fighting to reopen blocked roads and striving to reach isolated villages and towns after King winter swept across the eastern half of the continent with a terrific early season blizzard as his accompaniment. Mrs. Charles Lockwood, of Buffalo, is the deft broomhandler here and she is looking pleased because she has just located her car, buried in a snow drift outside her home. Thousands of autoists, less fortunate than Mrs. Lockwood, were caught on country roads and highways in the Buffalo area by the storm and were forced to seek refuge in farm homes. It was the worst December blizzard in Buffalo's history.

WALL STREET CLOSE

(Supplied by Bisgar and Crawford)

New York, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Short covering and a call for bids on a new fleet of huge trans-Atlantic passenger planes stimulated rails. A renewal of the buying attention in today's brief market.

Rexall, Douglas, Consolidated, United and Chem Martin stepped up as much as 2 points or so on the seller several million dollars would be spent in building the ocean liners. Transfers approximated 400,000 shares.

Small demand had Canadian issues to a narrow course. Hiram Walker lost around a point and Dome a smaller amount. Mixed minor fractions were Distillers and International Nickel. Canada de lost a little ground, Canadian funds continued at par.

Allegheny and Chesapeake Corp. issues exhibited strength on the latest terminal reorganization commission's provisional approval of the merging of the Nickel Plate and Erie with the Chesapeake & Ohio. Allegheny controls the Chesapeake Corp., Chesapeake in turn has working control which in turn has working control of the C. & O. Nickel Plate moved up but Erie was off a trifle.

Improved were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, Martin Pe, N.Y. Central, Pittsburgh and West Va. and Texas Corp.

TEN DOLLARS TO PURCHASE BOOKS

King George Home And School Club Makes Donation

The regular meeting of the King George Home and School Club was held December 1st in the Teachers' Room, with the president, Mrs. Hazen, in the chair. Interesting reports of the Christmas presents for the children of the school this year takes the form of a donation of $10 for books to be selected by the teachers with Miss Boyle in convener.

A special meeting will be held early in January for welcoming mothers of new pupils. An invitation from Queen Alexandra Home and School Club to join with them in their February meeting was accepted.

Describes New Course

Mr. H. J. Clarke, special speaker of the evening, then gave a talk on the new course of study. He explained how the previous course was compiled in the days of the old settlement organization. The children had been made to learn facts and problems that might be useful to them as adults. The new course is to be taught with the subjects. The new program being tested out in elementary schools of Ontario and reports made by the teachers before Easter. Then the revised and final claims will be considered and a new course devised starting in September.

Children of Elementary School ages are active and interested and delight in movements and are anxious to perform little stunts that result in accomplishment. They are interested in the character and purpose of material objects around them.

Fellow Methods of Nature

The method of teaching them must be in harmony with those of nature and meet the demand of the child's needs. The child must learn to develop physically and mentally to take his place as an adult. Habits should be taught appreciation of good and evil, right and wrong. An attitude should be encouraged both for the purpose of forming work as a habit and as a means of expression. Religion should not be regarded as approaching adult's religion but as in or school but by daily lessons learn to be willing to be taught and be humbly.

Mr. Clarke discussed the seven topics or categories of study, and pointed out that on account of the flexibility of the course, and its dependence on the teacher's discretion, no definite written examinations can be held.

Refreshments Forbidden

Promotions will be based on the child's efforts. Homework is practically forbidden and the speaker said it should be, and thus more time left for play and recreation.

The appreciation of the club to Mr. Clarke was voiced by the president. Miss Boyle's room won the attendance prize with 100 per cent. Closed by singing the National Anthem. Refreshments were served and a social time spent.

Police Blotter

Toronto police made no arrests in 48 hours, during Thursday and Friday, which they believe indicates believe they have set an outstanding record in such circumstances.

Since midnight last Saturday night, October 30, there have been one arrest necessary inside the Corporation of Toronto. The conviction was subsequently registered in this case; standard police efficiency to the Ontario Intelligencer today.

NANKING OCCUPIED, JAPANESE ANNOUNCE

Chinese Battle Enemy Foot by Foot of Way As They Yield Capital

Capital Retreat Begun, Say Japanese, But Chinese Deny

100,000 MAROONED

Japanese Casualties Very Heavy, According to Chinese

Shanghai, Dec. 13 (AP)—The Japanese military command tonight officially announced the capture of Nanking, China's capital.

The troops completed the occupation at noon, the announcement said.

Street fighting, with Chinese contesting every foot of the Japanese advance, preceded the holding for the city, Japanese said. Slowly, however, they reported they took over government buildings which had housed Chinese machine-gun nests and artillery.

Earlier reports received in Tokyo said Chinese troops in Nanking began a general retreat from the city and declared that Nanking's "fate is sealed."

Japanese warships steamed up the Yangtze River, entering the heart of Chinese battles at Wuhugchen, several miles below Nanking.

A Japanese military spokesman announced that a Japanese column advancing on Nanking from Tangshan captured Pukow, opposite Nanking, cutting off China's last railway line to the south.

Japanese also announced the bombardment of Sian, in Shensi Province, and Wanhsing in Kiangsi Province.

100,000 Marooned

Chinese reported said 100,000 Chinese refugees marooned on Tsungming Island in Lake Tai, near Soochow, will rather cut off on all sides.

International Events in East

Sinking of the United States gunboat Panay was the latest in a series of international incidents arising from the Chinese-Japanese conflict.

Japanese shells and bullets have brought diplomatic protests, apologies and investigations. The previous incidents of violence included:

July 29—U.S. cruiser Augusta hit by shell; one sailor killed, 17 injured. Chinese and Japanese both disclaimed responsibility.

Aug. 15—British Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen wounded by machine-gun fire from Japanese planes. Japan expressed "deep regret."

Aug. 20—Dollar Liner President Hoover bombed by Chinese planes at Shanghai; one sailor fatally injured. China apologized.

Oct. 15—Sailor on board Augusta injured by Japanese shrapnel. Japan apologized.

Oct. 24—British soldier killed by Japanese machine-gun bullets. Japan apologized.

Two Injured Seriously at Brockville, The Result of Storm

By The Canadian Press

Storm-swept Ontario, slowly but surely, today was winning its battle to restore communications crippled by one of the worst series of December blizzards on record. In the east, the west and along the Niagara peninsula conditions were reassuring in normal.

Snow-blocked highways in all storm areas were fast being cleared. Supplies of milk, butter and other foods were being rushed to the isolated districts during last week's successive blizzards. Buses and trains and trucks again were running on schedule in most sections. Motor traffic in the Niagara district, at a standstill for days, was resumed.

The cost of the storms that left thousands without light, heat and power in Eastern and Western Ontario was estimated in the tens of thousands of dollars. Extensive property damage was reported in all storm areas while the cost of the provincial and municipal governments for road-clearing equipment and labor was heavy.

The lighter side of the storm was seen at Penhill near Welland Sunday, Clear, cold and sunny the weather was perfect for golf and Penhill golfers during more than 500 sports enthusiasts from all parts of the Niagara

SOVIET RUSSIA HOLDS ELECTION

Stalin Parliament Elected by Turnout of 90 Million Voters

Moscow, Dec. 13 (AP)—Soviet Russia held its second parliamentary voting, clocked by a turnout, approximately 90,000,000 voters in the first direct election in the 30 years of the Communist regime.

Few candidates for the 1,143 seats in the two-chamber parliament were opposed. There was an air of holiday in the streets as the announcement of results, even in what few districts might have had opposition candidates, was hardly equal to the regime of Joseph Stalin.

As far as foreigners could learn from reports in the districts closed, which was in the Caucus, Bands and parades with banners flittered during yesterday's election.

The electors in each district voted for two candidates—one the Soviet of the Union and the other for the Soviet of Nationalities, the two new governing bodies.

POPE EXPRESSES GRAVE CONCERN

Five New Cardinals Elevated To The Purple

Vatican City, Dec. 13 (AP)—Pope Pius expressed grave concern today over Far Eastern and other world problems at a secret consistory in which he elevated five new Cardinals to the Purple.

An official abstract of his 1,500-word address said he saw what great damages had been inflicted in the Far East on heralds of Gospel and flourishing Christian communities and what even greater damages might be feared for the future.

"Looking towards Europe, we see with no less sadness the impious and atrocious things which are being perpetuated in Russia and which are being prepared to the danger of Christian life in Germany," the Holy Father said.

"The people of Christ in Spain, who are most dear to us, are still agitated by sad and harrowing events although one begins to see hope of better times."

Thirty-one Cardinals were present at the elevation of the five—Most Rev. Arthur Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster; Archbishop Giuseppe Pizzardo, Vatican Under-Secretary of State; Archbishop Giovanni Battista Pellegrinetti, Papal Nuncio to Yugoslavia; Archbishop Giovanni Mercati, Patriarch of Venice; and Archbishop Pierre Gerlier of Lyon, France.

The purple, dittled crest, was carried to the Consistory Hall on a portable throne, escorted by Papal Guardsmen in their mediaeval uniforms.

Janine Keller Feared Victim Of Syndicate

Paris, Dec. 13—(AP)—Mystery of missing Janine Keller, feared to be the sixth victim of a murder-for-profit syndicate, convinced police today the list might reach 31.

They made new efforts in search for bodies in the St. Cloud villa where Baron Weidmann killed six and two of his five admitted victims, including 23-year-old Jean De Keven, Brooklyn, N.Y. dancer.

Investigators said four pieces of evidence found at the murder-death villa—clothing, a trunk, a picture and a passport—definitely connected Mrs. Keller, 30-year-old Alsatian, to the ring.

Mrs. Keller's estranged husband identified the passport as his own, the clothing and trunk as his wife's and the photograph as a picture of her.

Mrs. Keller had not been seen since Oct. 2 when she came to Paris from Strasbourg, presently to become a companion to an invalid American girl known only as "Miss Wonder."

The arrangements, made by mail, were with an unidentified man in Paris. They were said to have included a prospective voyage to Brazil with the girl.

20 Dig Graves

After a day examining documents, police declared a crew of diggers had been put to work in the "back of every inch" of the villa's grounds. "Some of them were trying new possibilities" that the list of Weidmann's victims was even lengthier than had been suspected. They had previously expressed fear that 10 or more may have been slain.

Weidmann, who was deported from Canada seven years ago, Thursday, refused to help throw any light on the disappearance of Mrs. Keller. As before he confessed killing Mlle De Koven and the others, the German repeated he would take "whom he will" to come —not before.

He was identified, by police as head of the murder ring, was said to have been into fits of hysterical weeping in his cell, moaning, "I have done nothing—nothing." Weidmann, Jean Lehmann and Colette Tricot, the brunette fiancee, are being held.

Japanese Declare Orders Issued to Fire on Every Ship on River

Shanghai, Dec. 13 (AP)—The Japanese navy tonight accepted blame for the bombardment and sinking of the United States gunboat Panay and two Standard Oil (Company) ships, and avowed "profoundest regret" for the "terrible mistake".

One United States seaman died of injuries from the bombardment by Japanese planes, Rear-Admiral Yarnell reported.

Japanese also admitted machine-gun strafing all craft in the Yangtze about 25 miles above Nanking.

Official reports to Washington and London declared Oil ships were sunk. Apparently, however, a boom general cargo carrier was struck by bombs and machine-gun fire, but two, the 1,000-ton steel tankers Meiping and Meiping, survived and sank.

Fifteen of 54 survivors aboard the Panay were injured. Seventeen Italians, Germans and Britishers were advices by the British gunboat Bee and the Yangtze Patrol, which had been sighted on the Yangtze River about 25 miles, possibly were survivors of the Panay but definite confirmation was not at once forthcoming.

FIGHTING OPENS ON THREE FRONTS

General Offensive is Launched by Insurgent Army

Hendaye, France-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 13 (AP)—Fighting protracted on three Spanish fronts today as the insurgent General Franco's long-vailed general offensive rumbled into action.

Government reports said there was a strong offensive movement of insurgent troops from their concentration points toward the fighting fronts at Teruel, Brunete and Teruel.

Insurgent censorship prevented information on the progress of Franco's offensive, but stiff fighting crossing the closed Spanish frontier into France. Madrid and Valencia, former capitals, were the objectives.

After the general offensive had been launched an Insurgent communique from Irun reported that the Franco forces had struck "like a bolt of lightning" and that "the Reds (Government) were unable to resist the attacks."

An intensive shelling of Madrid, in which more than 500 projectiles fell into the city, was reported to have killed 12 persons and to have wounded more than 50.

Vessel Ploughs Half Length On Shoals Near Formosa

Passengers Safely Removed From Luxury Liner President Hoover

PROBABLY BREAK UP

Manila, Dec. 13—(AP)—The liner President McKinley picked up 453 passengers from the stranded liner President Hoover off two rocky islets today and steamed toward Manila.

A message from the McKinley's master said 194 cabin passengers and 318 third class passengers were taken from Balabac and Bayalan Islands, east of Formosa, where the Dollar Line Hoover piled on a reef Saturday.

The brief message did not say whether all refugees were aboard the McKinley, also a Dollar liner. An unconfirmed report here said that a third Dollar ship, the President Pierce, was speeding towards the Hoover, and it was assumed her mission was to make additional rescues. Early reports placed the total passenger list at about 900. Two U. S. destroyers stood by near Hoover's stricken.

Manila, Dec. 13—(AP)—While rescuers removed stranded passengers of the wrecked liner President Hoover, the master of a German steamship told here how the big vessel ploughed half her length upon jagged shoals near Formosa in murky, rough weather last Saturday night.

Captain E. Stepback of the German freighter Anhalt reported that yesterday's rescue of the 56,000,000 luxury liner and the Hoover's condition was precarious because heavy seas rush in with great force where she is grounded.

"She will be ashore a long time," he said, refusing to hazard whether the Dollar Line vessel could be salvaged. "She was taking water fast early Saturday morning."

Not in Danger

The U. S. destroyer Barker, in a message intercepted at Shanghai said the Hoover was not in immediate danger.

Captain Stepback, advised by Captain George Yardley of the Hoover that he needed no further immediate aid, left the stranded vessel Saturday.

Captain Stepback said his ship was fast overtaken in murky weather by another vessel between 11 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday (8 a.m. and 10 a.m., Friday, EST.)

JAPAN APOLOGIZES FOR SINKING BOAT

U. S. Gunboat Panay is Sunk by Japanese Shell Fire

Tokyo, Dec. 13 (AP)— Foreign Minister Koki Hirota expressed "profound apologies" today for the sinking of the United States gunboat Panay.

The foreign minister called on United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew to convey the Japanese government's regrets.

Grew said he had visited the Foreign Office before he had received news of the sinking of the Panay, and told Hirota that shells were falling near American ships.

The Ambassador had expressly asked the Japanese vessels and aircraft use caution.

News of the Panay incident was suppressed in Japan.

Action of United States In the Far-Eastern Crisis Is Not Yet Disclosed

Further Information is Awaited by Officials of Government

REFUGEES ABOARD

One Message Says U. S. Vessel Fired at Attacking Planes

Washington, Dec. 13 (AP)—High officials of the United States Navy and State Department, withholding public comment, assembled information today about the bombing of the American gunboat Panay for immediate submission to President Roosevelt.

Steps to be taken by the government were not disclosed pending receipt of a Japanese communique and additional messages from United States authorities in China.

Details here were meagre concerning the sinking of the gunboat and two small Standard Oil vessels in the Yangtze river.

One message to the navy said the Panay's anti-aircraft guns were fired at the attacking Airplane. Apparently, however, the shots did not find their mark.

Identity of Refugees

Officials expressed the hope that further information would be forthcoming after the Panay's sister ship, the gunboat Oneida, and H.M.S. Bee arrive at the scene.

The State Department was trying to check the identity of the refugees aboard the vessels when they were sunk by Japanese bombs. Reports on cabled that three Italians and one British subject, in addition to a small group of Americans, were on the Panay.

On one of the Italians, he said, was among fifteen persons wounded. Some of them were severely injured. Johnson reported he did not know the nut the name of the sailor who was killed.

Johnson's information was received indirectly from George Atcheson, Jr., second secretary at the American Embassy in Nanking, who was aboard the Panay.

Atcheson had been in charge of the Nanking Embassy after the Ambassador went to Hankow. He and Johnson both had boarded the gunboat, however, when the fall of Nanking became imminent.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Storm tides! The usual ocean tides are caused, as is well known, by the gravitational attraction of the moon and to a lesser extent by the sun. But the greatest tides are storm tides. These tides are formed by the strong winds actually pushing the waters of the sea before them and heaping them up. These are most characteristic of the storm at the time of the usual high water. Storm tides cause unusually high water and thus inundate vast areas of inhabited lands and agricultural districts. Besides the damage by flooding, an additional loss and destruction is caused by the violent surf.

True Minister of Gospel And Steward of Mysteries of God

"He was not forgetful of that great power, that made him attain the heights. When he was complete and in full possession of the five faculties given him by God, in his last will and testament he made provision for this place, not so much as a thanksgiving but as a lesson to you and me, that we are ministers of the gospel and stewards of the mysteries of God," the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of St. Thomas' Church told members of the congregation yesterday morning at an impressive dedicatory service honoring a beautiful bronze plaque placed on the north wall of the church to the memory of the late Sir Gilbert Parker.

The plaque, a magnificent bronze memorial, reminds as a background of dark expansive wood bears the following inscription "A.M.D.G." (Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam—"To the greater glory of God")

Right Honourable
Sir Gilbert Parker,
Bart., P.C., D.C.L., LIt. D., LL.D., Born Nov. 23rd, 1862—Died Sept. 18th, 1932
"Peace And Rest"

Reminds Us Well

The tablet is fixed beneath the Parker Memorial window in the church and reminds us well that there is the memory of the wife of the late Sir Gilbert Parker, again Lady.

In his dedicatory address, impressive in its simplicity and beauty of thought, the Rev. Mr. Payne paid splendid tribute to the memory of the late Sir Gilbert Parker in a splendid dissertation, taking his text from the words of the stewards of the mysteries of God.

"If we had the time and perspective to visualize the centuries and ages, he makes to life, we would be better enabled to measure by the capacity of the life and stature of the elements in an effort to mention, but a few, Luther, Ivor with a reactionary pervis at his home between Carrying the Word and Sacrament into his home. Luther took a turn for the worse, the last sacrament was administered.

Neighbors called by telephone relayed to his assistance and with a shovel and broom battled heavy snowdrifts for hours before a roadway could be cleared.

A few miles away, Mrs. Percy Lamb, nursing a sick man suffered a similar heart attack. Unable to get a doctor through the heavy drifts, Mrs. Lamb was forced to wait for hours before medical assistance was available. Physicians say she carried on her work of making the sick man as comfortable as possible.

Mail Service Cut Off

Mail service was cut off. Picton, Wellington and other communities were completely shut off from outside. Only on Saturday morning farmers with horses and sleighs, equipped with Saturday morning provised snowploughs fought their way through huge drifts and country and township roads leading to the main highways.

"It is one of the worst storms we have had in years," Provincial Constable Edward Farmer stated, "not only in its effect on traffic on highways, but wood-cutting operations will be seriously hampered during the winter months and in the future. Water in the swamps where a great number of county farmers derive their timber will be frozen solid and impossible to get out. Many swamps will be weat-deep in wet slush. There is no telling when the heavy snowfall will be replaced by a fairly heavy frost arrives, the woodcutting problem will likely be a serious one."

"There has never been anything to compare with the preparations for war by nations still ostensibly at peace."—David Lloyd George.

"Picture yourself vividly as winning, and that alone will contribute immeasurably to success."—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Trenton

Trenton, Dec. 13 (Special)—Fifty years after his ordination, Rev. Canon T. Austin Smith was ordained as a priest of the Anglican Church in Ontario. He is the father of Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton. Yesterday in observance of the Rev. Canon Smith's anniversary the Rev. R. J. Dumfrith of Napanee conducted a special service in the Trenton Memorial Church.

The Colonsay Band Here.

The Colonsay Salvation Army band presented a concert and open air concert in Trenton yesterday and in the evening after the divine service was closed the visiting band presented a second musical concert. The local Salvation Army hall was packed to capacity for the evening concert.

Moonlight Stealing.

The beautiful moonlight nights of the past few weeks have been just what the cotton tail rabbit hunters of this district have been waiting for, according to reports the hunters have been very successful. The snow covered fields are ideal for spotting the brown rabbit scurrying hurriedly across the white background making an excellent target for a shooter.

Officers Elected.

The Trenton Golf Club selected officers for the ensuing year. They are: H. D. Graham, W. R. McClung, R. Wilgar, Dr. J. N. Reddon, Dr. F. L. Reid, Rev. F. A. Smith, O. J. Asts, R. T. Wemyss, E. Ashley and the early meeting of the directors the club's officers will be elected. It is expected that the organization will sponsor a membership drive.

Religious Writer Here.

Stopping off in Trenton for a few hours on Saturday before continuing to Montreal Dr. Cecil Northcott, a native of Ghent, Belgium, who has been connected with the British and American sports news eleven years for a Belgian paper, the Gazette de Liege and Algemeen News called with The Canada Intelligencer and talked about sports, local, national and international sports. Mr. Van Northcott speaks four languages, Flemish (his native tongue), French, German and English. He specializes in writing jibs and boxing and carrier pigeon racing articles. He conducts Trenky Peden the best pedestrian in the "merry-go-round" business today. Peden is a product of British Columbia. Mr. Van Denhoncha is deeply interested in Canadian hockey but regrets the fact that his country did not develop hockey players to compete with the Canadian puck-chasers.

POLICE COURT

When the front tire of a motor car driven by the wife of Donald D. Howie, Montreal, skidded sideways and collided with one of the concrete posts at the intersection of Front and Dundas Streets in Belleville last night, Belleville, sustained face lacerations when struck by flying glass and suffered minor scrapes and bruises.

Mrs. George Kellar, Trenton, was proceeding southerly on Front St., and approaching the Dundas Street intersection when Mr. Howie's car skidded across the street, striking the former driver's car broadside.

Another minor accident occurred on Front Street, Saturday night when a motor car driven by James Moore, R.R. 2, Norval, collided with a second automobile, being driven in the opposite direction by Miss Vida Kerr 76 1-3 Alexander St.,

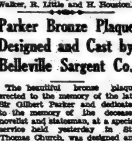
P. E. County Recovers from Worst Snow Storm in Years

Roads Slowly Being Cleared of Deep Drifts—Farms Isolated

WOMAN BREAKS ARM

Mrs. P. Lamb Tends Ill Man Dies—Broken Arm Until Doctor Arrives



Sweeping in from the southwest in a white wave, snow following closely in the wake of the heaviest fall of the season, Belleville and district last week beneath the heaviest fall experienced in a number of years, engulfed Prince Edward County in a white pall on Wednesday night and reached the depth of three feet. Heavy drifts accompanied by a high wind piled the snow high in sidecuts and township byways completely isolating the rural population. Highways were blocked with an undulating tier of drifts that in places reached huge dimensions.

Points to the south of Picton were practically buried beneath the white covering. Cyrille Richardson, superintendent West Lake Transit, enroute to Kingston where his wife is dangerously ill, was forced to spend the night at Picton after being held up for hours before arriving in Belleville. Travellers unable to proceed were forced to stay in the comfort of hotels. John Conway, Belleville C.N.R. engineer left his car in the city of a friend's garage and walked to the city hall where after a hard struggle in the Picton-Belleville bus.

Four trains yesterday, one of them loaded with meat were forced into the ditch by the huge drifts on the highway. Farmers and residents of Picton and were practically isolated. Snow in the roads leading across the marshes to the highways in parts of the island lay in depths of three and four feet. Vehicular traffic was impossible. Even horses failed to sleighs, the only possible method of egress from the island, plunged through huge drifts to their bellies" as one resident put it.

The incident followed bombardment of the British gunboat Ladybird off Wuhu, 69 miles up river from Nanking. T. N. Lonergan, sick berth attendant, was killed. Commander O. K. M. O'Donnell and a seaman were injured.

Believed Craft Chinese.

The Japanese fliers who bombed the Panay, said Rear Admiral Tadao Honda, Japanese Naval Attache in China, were unable to see the ensign flag and believed the craft to be Chinese.

This resulted in the "terrible mistake for which the Japanese navy feels profoundest regret," the Admiral said.

Three naval aircraft participated in the attack, Admiral Honda said. "The fliers returned, proudly reporting achievement of the bombing of this concentration of ships," he continued. "But the feeling of accomplishment turned to regret and sadness when they learned their mistake."

The Japanese navy, he said, was preparing to punish those responsible for attacking the craft. "Identity of the fliers naturally being known."

Admiral Honda explained the fliers were aware foreign craft were "somewhere in the vicinity above Nanking", but were not aware of the specific location of the Panay and the others.

"The Japanese navy with the utmost sincerity is willing and prepared to bring about solution of this unfortunate incident, and hopes no extravagant reports of it will be circulated," the Admiral told newspapermen.

Official Statement

In an official statement on behalf of the naval command, Admiral Honda said:

"It is my painful duty to make the following announcement that on receipt of information Dec. 11 that Chinese troops in Nanking were fleeing by boat up river, the naval air force unit was ordered to proceed to bomb these craft.

"In the course of these operations, yesterday, they mistook three Standard Oil ships for Chinese vessels. It is most unfortunate that in the course of these operations 4 United States vessels nearby was bombed and sunk."

Reports from H.M.S. Bee that the 13 Europeans and others, presumably officers and the remainder of the Panay crew, were seen on the left bank of the Yangtze above Nanking, alleviated fear that any extravagant reports of it will be circulated," the Admiral told newspapermen.

"It is my painful duty to make the following announcement that on receipt of information Dec. 11 that Chinese troops in Nanking were fleeing by boat up river, the naval air force unit was ordered to proceed to bomb these craft.

"In the course of these operations, yesterday, they mistook three Standard Oil ships for Chinese vessels. It is most unfortunate that in the course of these operations 4 United States vessels nearby was bombed and sunk."

Reports from H.M.S. Bee that the 13 Europeans and others, presumably officers and the remainder of the Panay crew, were seen on the left bank of the Yangtze above Nanking, alleviated fear that only 12 lives might have been lost.

Takes Absent Offense

The Bee, apparently the first rescue ship to reach the scene, said she had taken aboard Vernon P. Pickett, chief petty officer on one of three planes which the vessels attacked; J. V. Pickering of Omaha, acting manager of the Standard Oil's Nanking branch, and dozen William T. Doyle.

The men, coming up near Hukden, where 54 survivors of the Panay disaster were taken, said they had seen the European on the river bank.

The Bee thus far had been unable to locate the survivors but continued the search throughout the night, remaining in the vicinity of the Kahyan wharf at Hukden.

15 Wounded at Hukden

The other Panay survivors at Hukden, a small Chinese river town in the centre of fighting between Japanese and Chinese, included 15 wounded, several seriously.

They were taken ashore there amid great danger from artillery and gun-fire but a Japanese spokesman said urgent messages to Japanese forces had halted the attack to enable the rescuers to bring the survivors without the peril of bursting shells.

It had been feared that 17 still missing from the Panay were killed in the bombing or were drowned when the gunboat was sunk. One seaman aboard the ship died of injuries suffered in the attack.

A British seaman also was killed and two other Britons wounded at Wuhu when Japanese batteries shelled the British gunboat Ladybird there.

Orders to Fire on Every Ship

British naval reports said Colonel Hashimito, senior Japanese officer, declared he had orders to "fire on every ship on the river" and the statement was made in response to their protests.

Japanese diplomatic and naval authorities immediately assumed full responsibility for the attack both on the Panay and the Standard Oil vessels.

(A brief report of the tragedy to Washington said the fliers fired several rounds from her anti-aircraft guns at an attacking Japanese plane, but apparently did no damage.

(The message said the names of those "lost" from the Panay were not known.

Acknowledge Responsibility

Two of the gunboat's officers, Lieutenant Commander J. Hughes and Executive Officer A. F. Anders were wounded. Hughes suffered a broken leg.

The Japanese navy, meanwhile, issued a separate acknowledgement of responsibility for the disaster to the Panay and the Standard Oil ships.

A Reuters dispatch received in Shanghai from Hankow, temporary seat of the Chinese government, said British authorities had been warned by Japanese that all Yangtze river traffic must come to a complete standstill for three days.

If shipping disobeys "it will be fired on," the message quoted the Japanese commander in the Wuhu area. It said he had declared no ship would be permitted to move anywhere on the river because he was out of touch with his headquarters and his gunners were unable to identify the British flag.

Share Japan's Sorrow

British, felt sharp apprehension over reports of a Japanese attack on the British gunboat Ladybird, which apparently occurred about the same time as the attack on the American ships.

It expressed "most deep" regret for the tragedy and pledged immediate steps to place the blame on the Japanese military unit directly responsible.

Shigeru Kawagoe, Japanese Ambassador to China, telegraphed regret for the sinking of the Panay to the United States Ambassador Nelson Trusler Johnson.

Admiral Kocyuhi Hasegawa, commander-in-chief of the Japanese fleet in China, called at once on the American commander, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, to express regrets.

Admiral Yarnell, who was to have left for Manila tomorrow aboard the Augusta, his flagship, deferred sailing indefinitely.

Haven For Refugees

The Panay, a 450-ton vessel built in Shanghai especially for China river service had been dispatched to the Yangtze as a haven for United States Embassy officials and refugees. She belonged Nanking until she was ordered up the river to safety from Japanese shells which previously had crashed perilously close to her.

The Standard Oil tankers reported bombed were the Meian, a 800-ton vessel commanded by an American, and the Mei Ping, a 650-ton Meiping, and an Estonian.

The Meian was a general cargo carrier and the other two were steel tankers. Which two were those reported sunk was not known here. Each carried a crew of 37 Chinese.

Standard Oil officers here were apprehensive also for the fate of six canal barkers and eight lighters the vicinity of the Panay above Nanking. The company had notified the United States Consulate General Dec. 10 of the river concentration.

Aboard Standard oil craft, it was believed, were J. V. Pickering, J. Standard and D. K. Golds of the company's Nanking and Wuhu offices. The smaller vessels carried a total crew of 60 Chinese.

district to the Lookout Point Golf and Country Club, Stiling and snow-plough was the program.

Traffic Moving Normally

Highway traffic was reported as moving normally in all districts. Ottawa said roads there, blocked for days, were now cleared, with sub-zero temperatures prevailing. Roads in Northern Ontario were fast being reopened. The Meaford district on Georgian Bay was the only trouble spot on the Ontario west highway map.

Heavy wind storms at that port were reported last night. Roads cleared only a few hours previously were filled in by new drifts. But the storm at Meaford apparently was local. Owen Sound 30 miles distant, reported clear weather and open roads at a threatened flood shortage relieved.

Snowdrifts several feet high were cleared from the streets of Brockville, where the eastern storm centred, Mrs. Frank Darling and her nine-year-old daughter, Jean, almost lost their lives in the deep snow there. They were caught Sunday night in a snowdrift on railway embankment were struck by an engine and snowplough. Both were injured seriously.

Tells of Rescue

The Captain sat a course to pass westward of Hoskoto after the other vessel, presumably the Hoover, disappeared ahead.

"We saw lights inside a little bay of Hoshoto Island," he said, "and thought it was a Japanese warship signaling the shore. Then my second officer spotted a rocket and saw two red signals, meaning a ship was ashore. The sea was rough and the wind high."

Captain Stapbeck said he went in as close as he could and offered to take all the Hoover's passengers aboard, but Captain Yardley declined the offer.

At daylight, Captain Stopback said, Capt. Yardley told him it was impossible to pull the liner off, adding "I don't like to detain you longer."

Slapback estimated the 21,900-ton ship, which is 653 feet long, had driven up on the rocks as far as her second funnel, or more than half her length. The stern is floating, the German said.

ITALY WITHDRAWS

assembled in the vast square in front of the palace, despite a heavy rain, roared approval.

"We withdraw without regret," he shouted, "from the shaking temple where they are not working for peace but are preparing for war."

Italy thus followed in the footsteps of Germany and Japan, with whom she is joined in an anti-Communist pact, among the leading nations to depart from the League.

Membership in the League will not end until two years after formal notice of withdrawal, given by Germany yesterday, but Italy no more than a year has pursued a policy of non-cooperation" with Geneva.

Retirement Started in '36

This estrangement dated to May 11, 1936, when the Italian delegation walked out of a meeting of the League Council, after it had voted sanctions against Italy because of the Ethiopian War.

Assailing the League as "prepared for war" rather than working in the interests of peace, he said Italy would adhere to her policy of "collaboration and peace".

"It is simply grotesque to believe or to have it believed, that pressure determined our attitude," he said. "That is none, and there has been none. There could have been none. Our comrades of the Berlin-Pekin axis were—and this is the plain truth—absolutely discreet."

Immediately after the Grand Council session, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo notified Joseph Avenol, secretary general of the League of Nations, of Italy's resignation "as of Dec. 11, 1937."

W. R. MORTON, PUBLISHER

GERT AND EF.

Sinclair Lewis, one of the co-founders of Babbittry, writes in the current News Week about Gertrude Stein, called an American poetess. That makes Gertrude with roughly the same coherence as a religious fanatic giving testimony in a police court, and to us she is much less interesting. But she has managed to get a following for herself; a following of people who gape open-eyed at the latest atrocities of free verse, futuristic art and such, and decide that it must be the real thing because it is wholly unintelligible.

The major mystery centres on whether Miss Stein is sincere or just having a good (and profitable) joke.

Here are some of her samples: "Rose is a rose is a rose is a rose."

Again: "Before the flowers of friendship faded friendship faded."

Now Mr. Lewis cites it this sort of thing can possibly be considered as anything but bosh—even if the idea that is bosh is becoming almost too common to be regarded as intellectual. Nevertheless a coterie of otherwise normal people still pretend to be fascinated by it.

His explanation is along this line. He recalls a certain bartender in Chicago for whom two crack reporters built up a reputation as a remarkable wit. They built it up so well that when the intrigued, some newcomer went to him the bartender would only have to mutter "Begorrah" under his whiskers and the newcomer would nearly knock over the tables laughing. And there are a good many of that ilk in art and poetry as well.

It might be a bit facetious to suggest that people like Miss Stein escape the necessity of that technical efficiency which can be the only way to genuine creative work, by writing drivel which nobody can figure out. For a time, it has even created a cult, and all sorts of artistic frauds profited by it. For curiosity has a deadly effect, and novelty an even stronger one.

And somehow we are reminded of that classic bromide which is the retort to the impossible question "Do you like music?" The retort, statistically almost perfect is: "I do not know much about it, but I know what I like." At least it is an honest reply, and if carried out might save a lot of controversy over things that do not matter.

For it was an honest man who wrote:

There's a notable family called Stein:
There's Gertrude, there's Ep, and there's Ein.
Gert's writings are junk,
Ep's statues are junk,
And nobody understands Ein.

—Hamilton Spectator.

MODERN LIFE DELICATELY ORGANIZED

Portions of Ontario which missed the recent blizzard and suffered little privation as a result sympathize with those districts where the milk supply and food supply are interrupted as reported in the Niagara Peninsula.

In this day of modern transportation it is essential that food supply be maintained and kept flowing without interruption for with modern transportation means, nearly all centres, except only the countryside, live in a way which strikes a stranger as "from hand to mouth." With fast moving trains, and transports and with motorized milk deliveries and with modern appliances for cleaning, away the roads most centres do not carry such amount of supplies as they used to do in other days because they depend upon the rapid modern freight movement by the various means which have been developed. Trains fortunately are very rarely delayed. Transports sometimes are held up by drifts and blockades.

With a sudden tie-up such as a storm causes, the intricate and delicate machinery is often easily disrupted. Where however traffic in earlier days would have been held up for many days with the drifts melting very slowly and painfully dug out, today the drifts on the roads are cut through with every speed possible and traffic is permitted to move. On rear roads of course the situation is not quite the same for the reason that the use of these is not so imperative and more time is taken for the restoration of these ways to traffic.

Modern life is very accurately adjusted and a storm can throw its mechanism out of order in a short time. But machinery can also restore the use of the service more rapidly than was possible in other days.

To be snowbound today in this country, at least, is not as long an experience as it used to be in older days. But in those times isolated houses were able to stand the blockade for days because the individual house or community was more independent than today. Now all are but parts of one large system, delicately adjusted and with lack of interruptions moving with a regularity which has affected the lives of all the people, to such an extent that large quantities of stores are not necessarily carried. Besides the spirit of co-operation is so extensive that in time of distress an entire province or state rallies to the need and aid is forthcoming.

Of sequin gown or restless silver shoe
Highlights my eyelids shadowed blue by bitter
Remembrance of unworthiness gone due.

TO ASCERTAIN THE EXTENT OF UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE UNITED STATES the government has sent out 85,000,000 return postcards. Government wants to know how many men and women are without employment, how many want jobs, how many work sections, how many want just anything that will bring in enough money to fool the wolf —and all that kind of thing. United States Government has a swell time of it, what with many work projects under way, even actors being conscripted into the Federal Theatre and put to work acting plays written by unemployed playwrights, there is a working line of unemployed many miles long.

NATIONAL OUTDOOR SPORT OF LYNCHING HAPLESS NEGROES in the South seems destined to go on forever. Attempts to get an anti-lynching bill through Congress have thus far failed. Recently a determined effort was made to get a strong anti-lynching law on the Federal books, but the congressmen and senators from south of the Mason-Dixon, the land known as Dixie just put their weight against it, and even President Roosevelt himself might wish for a cyclone to use it for fear of angering the South, to push the bill through. Needs on Abraham Lincoln to tell them just what should be done—the man who said that if ever the time come when he should call forth his slow to enforce it he would do it, regardless of consequences to himself. The time come—secession, war, and emancipation, followed by the murder of President Abraham Lincoln.

DETECTIVE STORIES IN REAL LIFE ARE STILL BEING ENACTED the world over. Secret Service agents, G-Men, Narcotic Division operatives and other special investigators are working day and night unravelling mysteries. Recently in the United States a big illicit drug ring was uncovered with branches in all parts of the world. Even the Chinese Tongs have been implicated—Tongs hitherto inscrutable and shrouded in the shadow of white man's law could attach with anything that looked like evidence, of law breaking, are mixed up in this. The Hip Sing Tong, a business, social and fraternal organization of American Chinese, known to front page readers for its connection with sudden deaths of members of a rival Tong, On Leongs. It is charged that using the Tong as a framework, a business in narcotics of over one million dollars a year was being operated, with headquarters in principal centres between Barbary Coast and the Bowery brought the matter out into the open, and the story is coming out of how the law agents worked for two years and spent ten thousand dollars to get the inside track, acting as dope dealers and buying the contraband. Big Tong men like Ching Joe Hip In Butte, Montana, Jimmy Wong, Hip Sing Tong men, Yet Haim, and others of the Hip Sings, are under arrest and the chain of evidence is now complete that it looks like that particular dope selling gang were retired from circulation for some time to come.

SOCIAL NEWS FROM LONDON UNDERLINES THE FACT THAT THE KING AND QUEEN for the first time danced at the same time as the 1200 guests on the occasion of the visit of King Leopold III of the Belgians. Previously it is said royalty danced by themselves on a cleared floor, then seated themselves and watched their guests dance. At the state banquet, responding to the toast in his honour proposed by King George the Belgian King said:

"It is sad to recall, that I should in 1935 have paid to His Majesty, King George V, and to your dear mother, the visit which I pay to Your Majesty today."

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"The torture I go through to satisfy your foolish pride!"

The Deadly .22

Almost 90 per cent of the rifles offered to the public at the recent sale of confiscated guns were .22's. It was evident from their general appearance that many of the guns had been used by boys, and it is safe to assume that these lads, besides being unacquainted with the gun laws, or careless as to their observance, knew little of the real power of a modern .22. This little rifle is really one of the most deadly firearms on the market. Its price range and cost of ammunition make it within the reach of the most prospective sportsmen and this fact identifies the danger from it as indiscriminate use. In the hands of a careful and experienced hunter the danger is negligible, but where the gun is used without due regard to its range and killing power it becomes a menace to human life. Of course, all firearms carelessly handled constitute a source of danger, but the .22 is the one most available to the novice is used for a variety of purposes for which it never was intended, with consequent reduction in the safety factor.

It never was intended, for example, that the .22 should be used for wing shooting. The chance of hitting a flying bird is very remote, and the bullet, travelling with a muzzle velocity of over 1,000 feet per second, and a carrying capacity of close to a mile with an elevated barrel, is liable to carry its deadly flight by doing physical or material damage. A recent test with a .22 to one hour far it would easily shoot showed that with the barrel elevated 17 degrees above the horizontal the bullets were dropping two-thirds of a mile away. The ammunition was the ordinary Long Rifle and not of the ill-speed variety. A similar reflection will show that at an angle of 45 degrees is half-way between horizontal and vertical, and that 17 degrees is considerably less than half of that distance. In case words 17 degrees is a comparatively small angle. When, therefore, the rifle is elevated to shoot at a bird on the wing, or perched on the limb of a distant tree, and the shot let misses its mark, the danger to anyone in the line of fire during the next half a mile away is real. If you are addicted to this practice you may be wise to give it a second reflect on the serious consequences that sometimes attend its indulgence. In this cause, Reports frequently appear in the newspapers of fatalities or gun shootings with .22's, and when these are traced to their source it is frequently found that the careless use of the rifle in the manner just mentioned was the cause of the accident. It is a wise rule, therefore, never to shoot in any direction or the at any object until you have noted where your bullet may take effect. It will help us to a better appreciation of that advice if we consider for a moment the career of the .22.

The following information has been gathered from the article by the late Robert Page Lincoln, a well-known authority. A .22 Long Rifle, rim fire ammunition, with the modern gun less powder will drive a 40-grain bullet through the gun barrel and out with a muzzle velocity of 1,050 feet per second over a 65-foot range. When the barrel is elevated the final resting place of the bullet is a matter of conjecture, but it is not suggested, of course, that the gun is accurate over this distance, but the very uncertainty of the bullet's flight is the danger in it. The dependable range of this bullet is approximately 200 yards, but there is such that is a distance of between fifteen and twenty feet it will penetrate through five one-inch boards. The lesson to be learned from this is that even when using the rifle for target practice the back stop should be sufficient to take care of the bullet's penetration, or of such a nature as to absorb the bullet.

The .22 short, rim fire cartridge, loaded with the same powder but carrying a 30-grain bullet has a muzzle velocity of well over 900 feet per second, with proportionate elevation has a range of approximately half of that of the Long Rifle. A duration at the same distance is but slightly less than that of the Long Rifle, and the ordinary classes of ammunition. We have been speaking, of course, of the .22 calibre rifle, but the situation. Modern science has produced new high-speed and super powered .22 calibre shells, some of which have a 50 per cent increase in power, a 35 per cent increase in velocity, and with a much flatter trajectory than that of the bullet. This is a highly effective shell when properly used, but its very effectiveness only serves to add to the danger of its careless or inexperienced handling.

The .22 is an excellent rifle for both the hunting of small game animals, or vermin. Used as such with due discretion, consistent with the handling of firearms of any description, it is not a particularly dangerous hazard than other rifles of a higher calibre, but because of its popularity with the young and old as a utility gun its status is not satisfactory. Its general use by boys should be discouraged, unless knowledge and experience are combined with the natural enthusiasm of the boy for marksmanship and the handling of firearms of any description. They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

First Belleville Election Was Held June 1st., 1836

Bills Flint First President of First Council

OPEN VOTING DAYS

W. G. Miles, K. C., supplies the information that the members of the first Municipal Council for Belleville were elected on Monday, June 1st, 1836 pursuant to a statute of the Legislature of Upper Canada passed in April of that year. The first Councillors were William Bell, Asa Fuller, Thomas Jones Dafoe and William Conner.

The first session of the Council disagreed upon the selection or a president and under the provisions of the statute another election had to be held. It was asked a president when Bills Flint, afterwards a Senator, was chosen as president of the first Council of Belleville. Voting at that time was not by ballot but by open voting.

The following officials were appointed by the first Council:—Clerk — George Benjamin; Treasurer — Zenas Dafoe; Assessor and Collector — D. B. Dafoe; Collectors — William Dafoe; Constables—Henry Averill and Asa Fuller. The Village of Belleville had been incorporated by a statute passed on the 6th of March, 1834, but owing to a defect in the description of the boundaries the village no election could be held. The statute of 1834 was repealed by a statute of 1836 and the boundaries corrected.

Mr. Miles contends that June could be the best month for the municipal election. The weather would be more pleasant, more voters could get to polls and wilful mess discomfort. The date of the election could have no reference to the annual reports or closing of the books.

He also suggests that if members of the Council and the School Board were elected for two years it would save the city at least $1000.00 the year the election was conducted and would give members of the Council a chance to better opportunity to plan returns and improvements.

From what is known of the ancient history of Africa, the Phoenicians and Greeks were first to build ships of special type for war.

HELPED THEM TO BUILD

A few years ago this young couple were just "mother's little girl" and "daddy's little boy". They started housekeeping "on a shoestring", as most young couples do. But Tom had a steady job in an automobile plant and Jean was a good manager. So now they have a little family and they're building a little home of their own.

That car you bought helped them to build. A large part of the price paid was passed on as wages to Tom and his thousands of fellow workers in the automotive industry. Another large part went as wages to thousands of other Canadian allied industries — the men who make tires, batteries, electrical equipment, steel, paint, textiles and the scores of other Canadian products that enter into the building of Canadian-made cars.

And all these thousands of industrial employees in turn spend their wages in buying food, clothing and furniture, and the lumber, brick, cement and other items used in building their homes. Each man's work helps to give work to others. When each spends money he provides others with money to spend.

Canada's future greatness and the security of each individual Canadian depends upon the continued growth of Canadian industry.

For Instance, Take Our Own Industry

There are 18,000 workers in Canada's automobile plants, and 150,000 employed in the 202 parts manufacturers' plants. An average of four to a family means over 130,000 people whose livelihood depends in whole or in part on the activities of the motor car builders. Add as well, the employees of railways who live by traffic and you have a huge cross section of Eastern Canada — a group of people who contributed much of the $40,000,000 spent last year for Western farm products. Therefore, all Canada — West as well as East — is vitally interested in a sound and well-supported Canadian Automobile Industry.

For statistical and further information about this industry, write to Automotive Industries, 1006 Lumsden Building, Toronto.

Feed the Birds

When you gaze from your windows and see the little birds huddled together upon the branches of trees, upon evestroughs and generally upon your windowsills, does the thought ever occur to you that they needs nourishment and that with the heavy blanket of snow upon the ground it is impossible for them to find many pickings? Every day in this city large quantities of bread crumbs, delicate bread and other articles of food, which would not be offensive if scattered upon the snow, are put into garbage cans, where the birds cannot get at it.

Commence now to feed the birds; doing a kind act will bring a feeling of pleasure to you and the birds will be thankful for you and welcome you daily.

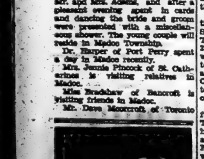
"Every anarchist is a dictator who missed."—Benito Mussolini.

TOO MANY APPLICANTS FOR WORK IN MINES OF NORTHERN ONTARIO

No jobs are available for men of this or other districts who might be tempted by journey to the northern section of the Province, and Hillis work is likely to be offered by any of the mines or other companies during the winter, it is stated by Geo. Taylor, Picton, for some time past resident of Kirkland Lake.



The statement of Mr. Taylor was prompted by the fact that news items had announced that 500 men had been sent to Kirkland Lake section where he now resides.

"We would be very much interested and so would the people of Kirkland Lake in knowing which mine was meant, because there would be no trouble getting that many men, or more, right in Kirk-land Lake."

The larger mining have hundreds of men on the waiting list, and there have been as many laid off as there have been taken on during the past two or three months," it was added.

"12 Hours By Air"

Drama in the sky is the theme of "12 Hours By Air" now playing as a grand revival hit on the mezzanine program.

"Thirteen Hours by Air" starts off as a terrific pace, and like the New York-to-San Francisco plane on which most of the action takes place, roars on at high speed up to the very finish.

Director Mitchell Leisen, furnished with a grand cast and an equally grand script, has made the most of every opportunity. His cast includes Fred MacMurray, that casual young man who has risen spectacularly to stardom in a little over one year; Joan Bennett and Brian Benedict; Sidney Zaiko Pitts; and Zasu Pitts, Hugh Herbert and Allison a few.

"Thirteen Hours by Air" is the story of romance and intrigue aboard a transcontinental passenger plane. It's a colly-saucy cast of passengers the ship is carrying, a gay girl who says she's a socialite; a nine-year-old heir to a fortune of millions; a "Mr. Big" who reveals a surprising lack of information about medicine; and a pilot who is considering looking for love over; Brian Benedict; Sidney Zaiko Pitts; and Zasu Pitts, Hugh Herbert and Allison a few.

That Body of Yours

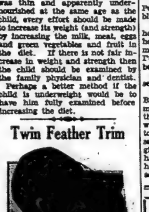
By Joseph H. Barton, M.D.

WHY SOME CHILDREN DO NOT INCREASE IN WEIGHT DESPITE AN INCREASED DIET

Some parents cannot understand why their child does not put on weight as do other youngsters. The child brings home a report that, as he is underweight for his age and height, he should be given more food or more nourishing food such as milk, eggs, fruits and green vegetables.

After a few weeks or months of this increased diet the parents find that their child has gained little or no weight and seems listless and tired as if the increased amount of food was making more "waste" in the blood instead of increasing his weight and strength.

Now what is often the cause of this failure of some children to increase their strength and weight despite an increased diet of body building foods, when other children of same age and height increase in weight and strength on the diet? Is there something wrong with the child or with the diet?



Dr. James G. McLeod, Birmingham, Alabama, one of America's outstanding nutrition experts, has this to say in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association:

"To what extent does the state of the child's body interfere with his ability to utilize or profit by food properly? Experience shows that in the presence of infection, certain food factors are poorly utilized. In the presence of diseased tonsils, the ingestion of an abscessed tooth, for example, the child cannot properly assimilate to correct the child's anaemia (thin blood); the iron administered is poorly utilized at all. There is definite evidence, too, that vitamin A is utilized poorly when there is infection in the system. Remove the offending infection and the difficulty disappears.

"The thought then is that even if one of the parents or grandparents was thin and apparently underfed at the same time as the child, every effort should be made to increase his weight (and strength) by increasing the milk, meat, eggs and green vegetables and fruit in the diet; there is not the fair increase in weight and strength then the child should be examined by the family physician and dentist.

Perhaps a better method if the child is underweight would be to have him fully examined before increasing the diet.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

"What say we keep going, Sandra....like this, just you and I and the Water Rat?" We could drift down the coast until we hit Palm Beach, or some place where they were having fun, and stick around until it began to grow warm, then away up the coast again....Nice?"

Sandra thought, "So, at last-What say we keep going, just you and I and the Water Rat?" Not a word about getting married." She gazed straight across the bow, watched the wind whip off the lacy tops of oncoming whitecaps. She said, "Go on with the story. We money up the coast again—and what?"

"Anything you say. Get an apartment or build a place on the North Shore, or—name it and you can have it. He left her hands on the wheel and drew her head back against him and kissed the lobe of a small ear. "What would you like, sweet?"

"If I could be sold on the idea at all," Sandra said, "I'd like to be married as a starter."

Suddenly he pulled her around. One arm braced against the wheel, the free hand held her wrist in a firm grip. She saw the color rising in his face, was momentarily alarmed by the fixity of his gaze.

"What did you mean by that, Sandra?" He released her, abruptly, faced the wheel.

Sandra returned to the canvas-bottom chair and barely eased herself from a fall as the boat rose in a sudden lurch. She got up and folded the chair and slid it into the metal rack.

Bryant said, without warning, "Not so long ago I asked you to marry me, Sandra. Did you think that part of some devilish plan or scheme?"

"No."

There was a long silence before she answered that. She was leaning against the starboard side of the shelter, hearing the rain beating at the glass behind her head, hearing the wail of the wind and the hollow rumble of the propeller shaft. She felt sharp drops of water against the side of the little cruiser. She said at last:

"I could be sure about that, Bryant—but I won't. I haven't time to think. You seem to want to be saying to our crowd that you were not a marrying man."

"Yes," he said, "I know about that. And there is talk that I've been this and that since the shooting. Well, a man's reputation is usually founded on a certain amount of fact and I suppose there's no exception. But when I asked you to marry me—"

There was no mistaking the hurried toss of his voice, the very real hurt behind it. She said, "Please stop forward."

"All right, Bryant—I'm sorry. Perhaps I shouldn't have been so blunt about it."

"Better to say it than think it," he replied. He turned and looked at her briefly. "I'm sorry I hurt you, Sandra—I've never said that to any girl before."

She didn't say anything. There seemed nothing to say.

The moment passed. Presently Bryant said, in his calm, matter-of-fact sense of genial host. Once when the Water Rat was shouldered up with rain, he would have her ready to leave the water altogether, she saw his hands firm on the wheel. He give a quick spin and hold it hard. But while she stood there, holding to the side, there was no action to be determined by his, she heard him humming, softly. She relaxed. Surely, she told herself, they could not be far from Block Island now.

From somewhere there came a shrill, weird cry. She heard Bryant say, "Gulls...headed for the Sound. Wish we could go on and get a look."

She sensed the uneasiness in his voice and went to him. "We're in a squall, near Block Island, yet, Bryant?"

"Not to be outdone in the matter of honesty," he said, smiling, "I haven't any idea where we are. We should have hit the Island long ago." He put an arm about her shoulders and dipped down quickly and kissed her. "Don't worry, sweet. We'll come out somewhere—some time."

Sandra could not understand her own calm. They were somewhere on the broad Atlantic in a little craft that had taken and shook under the buffetings of the storm—lashed seas—off their course if they had ever had one, and walled in by a driving rain that shut off all sight. Any one of several things would tell them where they were. And one could know all that and continue to stand there with Bryant Wilson's arm about her shoulders and not be conscious of anything akin to fear.

"We'll pick up a marker—or something before long," Bryant said.

She looked up at him to assure him she was not in the least anxious and was about to speak and then at the half smile frozen on his lips.

Bryant—what's it?"

And that was fear, the reflected fear she saw in his intently staring eyes.

Then his smile came to life again. "Sorry...I must be getting jittery." He was his lips and mopped his forehead with a handkerchief. "I thought that good old motor missed a couple—of strokes, that's all." He broke off, staring toward the stern once more, and this time Sandra heard sharp and irregular tearing in the vibration under her feet. "Here—hold this wheel. Keep her into seas—I'll be back in a jiffy as long as you can. Don't let her broach to, though. Don't turn over your do...."

Thoroughly frightened now, Sandra clung to the wheel, countering the long-running swells. In the little interval above the wheel she saw Bryant disappear down the companionway, a mountainous wave came charging out of the impenetrable pall of rain. Bryant had said, "Don't let her broach to, though, whatever you do!" She recovered from the sudden fear that had—suddenly seized the wheel.

The Water Bug gave a lurch, seemed to right herself—for a moment, then raced down the steep slope.

Sandra drew a deep breath. She wouldn't do that again. If the motor had failed, as Bryant seemed later, it would have foundered the cruiser.... If only Bryant would hurry....!

She saw him in the mirror, then. He had paused in the companionway section of cork plugged into the floor and was looking down, shoving a long stick into the hole. He pulled the stick up, studied its lower length and then put it back in place of the performance.

Sandra's concentrated wave came out of the mist. Sandra brought the bow around, sharply, waited—counted ten, counted twelve and breathed easily once more.

And then Bryant's head appeared behind her and glanced back.

"Get it fixed, Bryant?"

He shook his head firmly. "Can you hold on a little longer?"

"I'm all right. I could go on for hours....What is it?"

"I've got to get out a sea-anchor —if I can rig one up."

That told Sandra exactly nothing but Bryant's tone told her plenty.

Minutes passed. Then she saw him in the stern, saw him in the stern pulling a heavy line from a locker there—and at almost the exact moment that her eyes found his bent figure he lifted the glass, the vision of the cruiser's machinery ceased altogether.

The bow was slowly swinging to the starboard, dangerously but inevitably into the trough of the seas. She called to him, heard—but the cruiser failed to respond to her rudder.

"Get that on—quick!"

She hadn't seen Bryant come up. He had pulled the line forward and down from the overhead rack and was trying to get her into it. She noticed he was bare-headed down for himself.

"What's this rail for all you're worth. She may turn turtle any moment. He was shouting. "I'll get out a sea-anchor if I can work fast enough. That's our only chance—it's Water Bug....!"

INSTALMENT 16

David hadn't listened in on the conversation between Sandra and his mother. He was in the room to Enid's room to tell her Sandra was on the phone, he had unintentionally neglected to close the door and the words of resentment in Sandra's voice had been too marked to mistake. And though Enid's bewildering silence those past week had hurt him plainly enough, his mother was nursing a deep hurt and supposed Sandra's absence from home was partially responsible for it. He could not shake off a feeling amounting to conviction that Enid was at fault.

Enid, he told himself, was being childishly obstinate. If she had really wanted Sandra to come home, assumed a more sympathetic attitude toward her daughter.... he, as the one unaffected member of the family, was not the logical person to at least try to set the procession in readjustment in motion.

It had been this new and not yet fully developed sense of personal responsibility that inspired his casual suggestion to Sandra that she run up and see their mother. And it had been this same feeling that caused his heart to jump when he answered knock when Sandra asked him to put Enid on the line.

Is Health Indicated By Tongue?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN THE OLD DAYS, nearly the first thing the doctor did after hearing a patient's story was to say, "Let me see your tongue." Of late years, less and less stress is put on this. Suppose there is better ways of finding out the functional state of the stomach and bowels and emotional disease in which the tongue is changed. Perhaps, however, there will be a revival in the practice of tongue examination because we are urged by several paradoxical men to pay more attention to it.

Often a physician will simply look at his tongue and immediately forget what he has seen, or also make no mental notation of its significance. The Chinese have two words that mean "look"; one is simply "to look at" and the other is "to look at and see" both.

That red tongue, raw red gut" was an old saying. The white tongue was looked on as a sure sign that the stomach was out of order and that a dose of calomel was needed. This, however, is not believed any more, and it is known that many persons have a coated tongue in health, especially smokers.

Why Furred Tongue

The furred tongue is simply due to thickened epithelium covering the papillae of the tongue, plus some bacteria. The condition has been described as occurring in several stages: first the furred tongue; second, the coated or loaded tongue; third, the white strawberry tongue; fourth, the fiery or shaggy tongue, and, last, the dry, brown, crusted tongue.

The wearing of an upper plate rather often frequently causes a smooth, pathologic bright red tongue without pain or inconvenience.

Pigmentation of the tongue is an uncommon abnormality, but in certain cases of sufficiently intense, the tongue may be covered with black patches.

Medical text-books have finished around with the subject of burning tongue, but, as we explained in an article last summer, the condition can no longer be classified as a mystery. It is often due to sensitiveness to nervousness from badly fitting dental plates.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

R. C. T.: "Will you please tell about sacro-iliac displacement and sciatica? What is the latest treatment for same? Trouble and sciatica? How long does it usually last or is there any cure?"

Answer: The sacrum, which is the last bone in the spine, is connected to the pelvic bones by a powerful joint. This joint is not exactly like other joints and moves very little, and when it is sprained and displaced, pain in that region and going down the sciatic nerve in the back of the leg occurs. The treatment is that of still generally used. Is not very new and consists in holding the parts in place by strapping. It is successful in most instances. The condition may, however, be very obstinate, and a good case of sciatica usually takes about three months before it runs its course.

Smart Suit Is a Necessity For the Winter Cruise

Travel suits, left, ensemble of emerald and darker green with plaid jacket; right, navy and white stripe suit, hats made to suit dresses.

By LISBETH

AT THIS TIME of year those fortunate ones who can get away for a winter cruise to warmer climates are receiving travel agencies and time tables to plan the tour. The rest of us consult time tables, too, and dream of trips out in imagining the details of accommodations as delightful although not quite so satisfying, as actually going on a cruise.

Hints of these two smart travel suits would be most useful and practical for any type of trip. The ensemble at the left is in emerald and darker green with jacket in plaid. The plaid and skirt are made of the plain tweed.

The other suit is a navy and white stripe made in classical style, with a cuff skirt. Hose made hat and gloves are worn with this suit. Both suits will be very good styles for spring, 1938.

What's What In Shoes

Just a word on shoes and hose for the season from now until spring. Pumps, you see, are worn by those modish who are dressed for travelling—plain pumps. Beautifully fitted pumps and hose match with town and afternoon clothes. Harper's Bazaar advised some time ago. You can add bedding, if you like, for the more dressy occasions. High-throated shoes are being worn with high dress necklines, and for the more informal occasions you can wear moccasin-like pumps with narrow fringe.

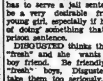
The most popular winter shades of hose are wine, muted beige, copper and red brown.

Faithless Dad Wants Wife Back

By VIRGINIA LEE

WORRIED MOTHER has two small children and has found out that her husband is untrue to her. He is at the "dangerous age" of 40, she. Worried Mother, is in her thirties, and the Other Woman 20.

The husband started going astray a few months before the new arrival—the baby was born. His wife, out in the car with the children, saw him and the girl entering a beer parlor hand-in-hand.



Husband and wife are separated now, but the husband writes he wants his wife and children back. She feels her respect for him is gone, and she doesn't know what to do. She has no means of support. The girl in the case declares she loves him.

I can't help feeling that a husband who acts as yours has done is a small spoiled boy grown up. He feels he must have a thing became he wants it, regardless of consequences.

It happens so many times, but I think the wisest thing is to go back to him, or allow him to come to you. He may have recovered from his madness and go straight from now on. He may realize in what unhappiness such folly will lead. I feel that if you do not take him back and try to keep his home together for his and the children's sake, you may regret it. It is not an easy thing to do, I know, and if you cannot agree to let the matter drop as far as words go, then you are in your home again, better not go back. The children need their father and mother and home, but it will not help if there is always a place of discord. Do you think you are big enough to carry on for the children's sake? If he is sincerely sorry for what he has done—which I hope he will grant—I easily build up your trust again. People are, you know, and need forgiveness. "To err is human," the poet said, "to forgive, divine". As it is his first and only offense, don't you think my advice is best?

A FRIEND: While I don't like to go back on a friend who gets into trouble, even through his own fault, I would not think a boy who has to serve a jail sentence would be a very desirable friend for a young girl, especially if he is guilty of doing something that merits a prison sentence.

THOUGHTFUL thinks the boys are "fresh" and she wants a decent boy friend. Be friendly with the "fresh" boys, Thoughtful. Don't take them too seriously, but don't let them get too fresh. If there are fine young men in the world, go keep your ideals and look for the one you can respect and admire. You'll meet him some day. Sometimes boys act fresh because they think girls expect it of them.

One of Lupe Velez's favorite whims is to lay a lettuce leaf on each salad plate, then add a spoonful of mayonnaise mixed with anything she enjoys for trimming, and fill the lettuce cup with the salad. Here are crushed walnuts, Spanish with whole nuts, cherry and a dab of mayonnaise.

NOURISHING FOOD, EXERCISE KEEPS HER FIGURE PERFECT

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

ONE OF OUR well-known movie stars was once startled into modesty by calling a famous cinema siren a "skinny, scrawny creature". Not a very complimentary remark, of course, but then, critics seldom are complimentary. Scarcrows are out, so far as modern males are concerned. And of course any woman knows that fatness is unattractive, but she doesn't try, on this account, to go to the other extreme. She realizes, if she is wise, that skinniness is just as unalluring as obesity. And so she tries to strike a happy medium.

One of the greatest mistakes that many underweight individuals make is to refrain from exercise. They have the idea that exercising is only for the fat, and many are afraid that if they are too active they will become even thinner. Of course, this is entirely wrong. For exercise helps women to gain weight and accurate curves just as effectively as it does to assist heavy women in losing weight.

Exercise makes the tissues active and healthy. A woman, even who is fat exercises, her adipose tissues are kept active and they become active. And when a thin woman exercises, firm muscles develop in her starved tissues.

Another reason why the underweight should exercise is that if she is on a weight gaining diet, she may acquire added poundage only on certain portions of her body. As a result, her figure will not appear properly proportioned. Proper exercise not only helps to develop the body, but also molds it upon harmonious lines.

Marjorie Weaver Slender and shapely.

A thin woman must eat well, to provide her body with plenty of nourishment. That doesn't mean, however, that she must stuff herself to the point of discomfort just because she wants to gain weight. If she cannot consume more food then ordinarily, she can select those that are not very bulky or filling, but are nourishing.

The thin girls can indulge in all the foods that the fat girls would like to eat, but cannot. She may have cream and sugar on her cereal and in her tea and coffee. She may have creamed soups and creamed vegetables. Sh sense drink rich milk whenever she wishes. And she may eat candies and good things like nuts, pastry, ice cream and tapioca pudding for desserts. But she must see to it that she also keeps it well-balanced nevertheless. For unless her diet has basic foundation of milk, fruits and vegetables, it will not greatly benefit her health or add to the loveliness of her figure. And she must not neglect her exercise.

Christmas Plum Pudding Is Made With Ceremony

Even Baby Takes a Hand in Stirring

Christmas p lum pudding

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Fruit Cup

Roast Goose

Baked Sweet Potatoes

Celery Olives

Cranberry Salad

Buttered Broccoli Plum Pudding

Coffee or Tea if you prefer

Roast goose is the traditional English Christmas fowl, although in America turkey is often preferred. Roast beef or roast pork makes very good Christmas dinners. When we were children the making of Christmas plum pudding was quite a ceremony. The family helped to cut the suet fine, and everyone, from father to the baby, had a hand in stirring it. The first recipe for plum pudding that I am giving you is not elaborate, but was used many, many times in my family. As pictured here the plum pudding is steamed in a mold and gaily decorated.

Today's Recipes

PLUM PUDDING — One - half pound beef suet, one cup sugar, two tablespoons molasses, one cup raisins, one cup currants, one-half pound mixed candied peel, one cup milk, one teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and allspice, a little nutmeg, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, flour to make a stiff batter. Mix well together and boil in floured pudding bag for three hours, or steam for the same length of time. This recipe will serve six, and may be elaborated by the addition of other fruits such as dates, figs, cherries, pineapple, etc., and nuts.

CHRISTMAS PLUM PUDDING —One pound flour, one pound suet chopped fine; one pound apples chopped fine; one pound potatoes grated; one pound carrots, grated; one pound sugar, one pound raisins, one pound currants, one pound citron chopped fine; one teaspoon nutmeg, one-half cup sherry wine. Mix and stir ingredients thoroughly; put in buttered molds, tie cloth over the top, steam four hours. The pudding will keep for three months and will be richer and better after the second heating. Serve with hard sauce or any preferred sauce. This recipe will make nine pounds or plum pudding.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Add Them Last

Lemon halves and slices are apt to give a bitter taste to punch if they are left in it. It is best to wait until serving time to add them.

Christmas Pudding

The original plum pudding or plum potage as it was first termed, was served as an accompaniment to the first course of the Christmas dinner back in the days of the Normans. The method of preparation was to boil beef or mutton in its own broth which was thickened with brown bread. Half boiled raisins currants, prunes, cloves, mace and ginger were then added. The nitrites when done, was sent to the table with the beef meats.

Poems That Live

TO A SNOW-FLAKE

What heart could have thought you?
Past our denial
(O filigree petal!)
Fashioned so purely,
Fragilely, surely,
Maker of Parodisal
Imaginless metal.
Too costly for cost!
Who hammered you, wrought you,
From argentine vapor?—
"God was my shaper.
Passing surprised,
He answered, He wrought me,
From curled silver vapor,
To lust of His mind:—
Then couldst not have thought me!
So purely, so palely,
Finely, strongly,
Mightily, frailly,
Intricately and embossed,
With His hammer of wind,
And His graver of frost."

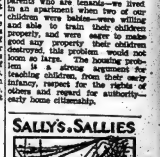
Babies Not Wanted in Apartments

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

WITH SECRETARIES of houses and apartments in most cities, many parents with babies and young children are having a hard time to find desirable quarters. Some owners of two-family houses refuse to rent to parents of babies and young children. Even owners of single houses strongly protest tenants without children.

The chief reason given for excluding babies and young children from apartments and two-family houses is the objection of the other tenants; they dislike to be disturbed. Now children cooperate far more numerous than they used to be and their number is gradually increasing. Naturally the owner wishes to keep the tenants he has, satisfied.



Another reason why babies and children are not wanted is that children are more destructive of property. Many landlords complain that children deface the walls and wallpaper and are hard on the stairways, shrubbery and lawn.

It might be a fine thing for parents of young children if there were many landlords so magnanimous and philanthropic as to prefer babies and children. But most owners of apartments rent their places as a business. Why, if we were in their place, would take the same attitude. We must remember that it is easy in these days to keep apartments filled—with the kind of tenants most favorable to the owner's business. Just why should we expect any more than we expect the butcher, grocer or druggist to run his business chiefly for the special advantages and privilege of certain customers and at an extra cost to him?

Landlords Not Unreasonable.

I own only the house I live in, and have no financial interest in anything to rent. But it seems to me that we are unreasonable when we abuse landlords who refuse to rent to parents with babies and young children.

Many tenant parents of babies and young children have helped create and exaggerate this problem in failing to train their children from early infancy to be very careful of property and considerate of the rights of others. If all parents who are tenants—we lived in an apartment with two of our children were babies—were willing and able to train their children properly, and were ever to insist on good any property their children destroyed, this problem would soon so large. The housing problem is a strong argument for excluding children from their early infancy, respect for the rights of others and respect for authority—early home citizenship.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS ARE SMOOTH AND SOFT AS WELL AS SHAPELY

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

THE GIRL of today who realizes the charm that a beautiful hand holds within its grasp, uses a good skin balm or hand lotion on them daily, and never fails to keep them soft and smooth. And she is particularly careful that her nails are always perfectly groomed and manicured.

Beautiful hands are not only graceful and expressive, but they are also strong, white and shapely as well. The fingertips are perfectly proportioned. They are given corrective treatments the minutes they begin to show any least sign of roughness, and no hard, calloused bits or skin accumulate at the sides of the nails or on the tips of the fingers

Harsh, rough-skinned hands certainly do not fit in very well with a girl's allure. Even in the most romantic settings in the world, it's hard for a Romeo to get properly acquainted if the hand of his fair fullet feels hardened and tollyarn when he holds it. Hands are meant to be soft and smooth, no matter how strong and capable they are, and if they acquire a rough, sandpaperish texture, they use all their femininity and charm.

It is the skin at the sides of the fingernails that generally becomes dry and rough more quickly than any other part of the hands. Through friction, pressure and the like, tiny, rough-edged calluses and hard bits of skin-tissue at the fingertips and around the nails.

Jane Lang Shows her pretty hand.

Of course, when a girl gets a manicure she receives a reliable beauty salon, those small callouses are usually cut away with delicate clippers, but I am not very much in favor of this method of. Cutting these fingernails may develop too easily after such cutting—and changed, you know, can be just as painful as they are unattractive. What's more, if the fingernails are in a curvilee, the may cut a bit too deeply and make the fingertips entirely too sensitive.

The better and simpler method of ridding the fingertips of such unpleasant deadened cuticle is by means of a bit of powdered pumice and pure olive oil. After cleaning your hands at night, make a paste of powdered pumice and olive oil, and apply it generously to the hardened skin.

Allow this paste to remain on for a while, so that the oil may do its work. Then rub the paste briskly over the calloused spots. The powdered pumice will remove any deadened tissue, and the oil will lubricate the skin, thus leaving the fingertips soft, smooth and attractive.

Thighs

Agnes: Massage your thighs with warmed cocoa butter to fatten the tissues. Exercises involving the leg muscles will also help to develop your thighs.

"Amber pin and clip

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

YOU CAN'T go wrong if you give her jewelry!

Every woman loves it, and in this age not only real jewels are lavishly worn and selected, but what is called costume jewelry, is also prized and used to embellish both day and evening ensembles.

The pins shown are made of amber, another jewelry being one of the features of the jewelry show of the Paris exposition last summer.

Amber is said to be one of the oldest forms of jewelry, since necklaces of amber beads have been found in caves of the stone age. The Romans are said to have esteemed amber above gold itself.

Amber is a fossilized gum of prehistoric trees as large as the California redwoods, which flourished countless ages ago. It lies buried about 50 feet below the surface of the shores of certain seas and after severe storms fragments of amber, usually wrapped in seaweed, are washed ashore. It varies in color from light yellow to dark brown.

Eastern Ontario's Hockey War Ends When Teams Involved Accept Suggestion of O. H. A.

Queen's, Belleville, Fliers And Peterboro in One Group

SENIOR "B" RATING

Kingston Garrison, R. M. C., Kingston, Gananoque In "A"

With all clubs concerned satisfied they had individually gained prestige and popularity, from a playing viewpoint, Eastern Ontario hockey war abruptly terminated and amicable peace terms were signed between here in Belleville over the week end. It took the united efforts of President Ben Allen, Schlegel and Sergeant Billie Hewitt of the O.H.A. to quell the disturbances and save all of the bombast waiting to explode. An amicable decision was always the ultimate objective but it remained for the Charlie Hickey brand of tactics, Queen's University Athletic Association, to successfully consummate it. In his views and accept a grouping that included Belleville, the R. C. A. F. Bellevilles, Tradmen and Queen's University in a common group. Added was the decision of the O.H.A. to send a senior "B" grouping, with reservations, however, to Kingston.

At the suggestion of President Schlegel and following a two-hour conference the clubs agreed to compromise with Mr. Hicks accepting "B" status for the R. C. A. F. Queen's club to be grouped with Belleville, Peterborough and the Air Force. Kingston, Gananoque, R.M.C., Perth (Ont.) Garrison and Kingston City are included in the "A" rating, with an intermediate "A" rating. The senior "B" clubs concerned will all four be eligible for a post-season play-off.

Suggestion Accepted

"Here's the suggestion the O. H. A. has to make," stated President A. H. Hewitt, representing Queen's, R.C.A.F., Peterboro and Belleville in one group, the first two clubs to meet in a play-off, the winner of which will go out into the senior "B" standings in the C.O.H.A. while the third and fourth placed clubs will play-off with the ultimate winner entering the Kingston group for the play-downs, but all games in the senior "B" group are under the auspices of the O.H.A. hope to have a senior "B" group in Kingston and I am glad the gentlemen have agreed to the suggestion," concluded Mr. Hewitt. Mr. Hicks and Mr. Allen received confirmation of the suggestion from Mr. McKechnie, Kingston, over the long distance telephone.

At the suggestion of F. O. Carley-Kelly, the four clubs in the senior "B" group will meet in the Capital in Belleville next Thursday night in order to draft the season's schedule, which will be a Kingston-Gananoque quartette of Kingston City, R. M. C. Gananoque and Kingston Garrison will convene in Kingston later.

At the suggestion of S. H. "Sandy" Narrows, Eastern Ontario executive member in charge of hockey at the present, President Schlegel and Secretary W. J. Hewitt will meet the junior men level with the clubs concerned in the controversy, "in applying for admission to the O.H.A. Queen's University originally sought an intermediate "A" rating, but as the Metro board is not in a financial position to send a team to Peterboro for the games in Belleville, so further," was the opening statement issued by Mr. Hicks.

Professor T. A. Oelley, of R. M. C. Garrison represented both Kingston Garrison and R.M.C. stated neither of the clubs present were in a position in a position to play games outside of Kingston, "We at R.M.C. budget our sports and we have not included out-of-town hockey games in our budget," stated Prof. Oelley. "The Kingston City and Gananoque clubs are similar to the Kingston Garrison, leaving Queen's the only potential club in Kingston available for an attractive grouping, that might include out-of-Kingston competition.

Declined at First

After Mr. Hicks at first declined an invitation to enter a group, that embraced out-of-Kingston clubs, R. C. Webb, Kingston, said: "We are backing three teams in Peterborough and have no University or government behind us. This is purely a sporting venture and we cannot take the chances than any other club in the group. Kingston Clubs only have to come to Peterborough to see such, while we have to go to Kingston as often as there are clubs in the group and we're not objecting. It's hockey we want," added Mr. Webb.

Eddie Thomas of the Belleville Bedmen and goal tender Charlie Kelly, representing the R.C.A.F., stated they wanted hockey and the arrangements included in the group as possible, both contending they preferred to have an eight or nine game card included in one large group, if possible.

At the conclusion of the meeting President Schlegel pointed out that Mr. Hicks the fact, that by Queen's accepting the senior "B" grouping that Queen's would save the advantage of the only outside clubs coming into Kingston, which should prove a financial advantage to the "students."

Added from the Ontario Hockey Association celebrities present those representing the various clubs present were—Queen's University and Gananoque, Charles Hicks; Royal Military College and Kingston Garrison, Professor Theo. Oelley; Kingston City, Ben Cunningham; Belleville, Eddie Thomas; Peterborough Hockey Club, H. J. Ross; and Wm. Wells and H. C. A. F. P. O. Carling-Kelly.

TACKLING STOPS FRITZ HANSON AND ARGOS WIN

Toronto Declared Dominion Champions by Exploding Bombers 4-3

GREAT CONTEST

Three Decisive Breaks in Game And All Went to Argos

(By Minos Dulmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 13—(CP)—Argonauts that stopped Fritz Hanson with consummate ease in the second period and a 70-yard punt by Jimmy Finlayson in the third, Saturday afternoon, to win the Dominion championship today. The champions are Toronto Argonauts, featuring the backfield Teddy Morris, West-Outler and Bill Bryden.

Before a blustering crowd of 14,000 at Varsity Stadium Saturday, Hanson and Winnipeg's Blue Bombers were dethroned as the most effective punt-ion of Lew Hayman's Argos. The same kick is a football ceremony returned to the east.

Behind the tremendous punting of Bob Isbister, the Boilermakers contrived to halt the fleet and elusive Hanson, but the three breaks that surrounding the Golden Ghost with tacklers. It was an obvious and entirely accurate decision.

Hanson in Isolation

With Hanson in subjection, the eastern champions won on a field goal by Bob Isbister in the first period and a 70-yard punt by Isbister in the second. Steve Oleksiak, Winnipeg fullback, missed one kick, added two Bomber point and Greg Hanson got the third and vital place-kick, that sailed to the dead-line.

In a struggle between big scarcely-matched lines, backs were thrown for losses on every play, but the tackling, the verdict rested with the fates and the punting. Isbister, although he was subjected to the other and Isbister settled the kicking matter.

Pitted against the best western punter this senior has seen, Isbister had a total punting average of 40-yard shots in the third and fourth quarters to equalize the Bomber hopes. Olander made a gallant stand against Big Bob, kicking and for the win never an error.

Bombers Outgained

The new champions outgained the Bombers on the ground 168 yards to 137, forced the Winnipeg club charged the Western forward wall. They made eight first downs to five. Quarterback had little or no margin in the closest of all east-west battles.

Hanson, wonder man of the 1935 final when the Bombers beat the Hamilton Tigers, had no chance to make long runs. It was late in the fourth quarter when he was able to break loose from his goal line for spurt of 17 and 26 yards.

But the Bombers had a good chance to win in the second. Coach Bob Fritz scooped up a fumbled catch and ran 40 yards to the Argo 20-yard line as the ball was pulled down. Isbister stopped the great Hanson, but Hanson stopped the play. The play nested only one point, Olander kicking a single.

Early in the first period Bill Skirko dropped a centre pass behind the Argo goal and Ozzie Cater, Umpire Eddie Grant of Winnipeg who ruled Skirko's fumble a touch-back. Hanson's punts by the tacklers.

Argo Get Breaks

These were the three game's three decisive breaks. The third occurred when Isbister punted a short one on Winnipeg's 20 yard line in the opening period. The Bombers fumbled and Argos Sellrik kicked a field-goal from 21 yards out.

For the rest of the way it was tight, hard football with the defensive outstanding offensive and defensive player in the contest as he led the Bombers. The Winnipeg coach gave a masterly display of fighting spirit and power, crunching gains and punting as opponents that never yielded.

Scarcely less effective for Winnipeg was Captain Chet Oerath and Lou Adelman. Argos had a definite advantage in their backfield and Bombers blocked effectively. They had a winning line that outplayed the Bomber forward wall of wet and ends that tackled brilliantly.

Bob Isbister had the confidence under rules familiar to them and condition that the Bombers failed and was the best kicker in sixteen years of intersectional rivalry, not game has been so decisive as this one, decided in the long run by the mighty Isbister.

JUNIORS COMING EAST

Regina, Dec. 13—(CP)—Regina Dales, Western Canada junior football champions, plan to leave here Wednesday for Hamilton to meet Hamilton Tiki-Canadians in an intersectional game next Saturday. Canadian Rugby Union sanction for the game as a Canadian affair. C.R.U. Officials have been asked for their approval.

Rangers Score Eleven Goals to Beat Leafs And Red Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

It doesn't seem reasonable but Montreal Canadiens have demonstrated they are the best team in the National Hockey league at the moment. Overwhelming Stanley Cup clubs that seem to outclass them on paper, Cecil Dillon and Flying Frenchmen have bounded to the top of the heap, a game and a half ahead of their best opposition.

They have set a season record by playing nine games without a loss beating Boston Bruin's earlier eight-game streak, have topped Toronto Maple Leafs from the Pacific Division leadership and even have George Mantha leading the goals scored with ten.

Mantha scored three of his weekend total of five when Habitants defeated New York Americans 4-3 on Montreal Saturday night and added the other pair when they held Red Detton's team to a 4-4 tie in Madison Square Garden last night.

New York Rangers aided Canadiens' move to division leadership by beating Toronto Leafs 6-2 in a spotty game Saturday night and Detroit Red Wings 5-3 last night.

Three of the five week-end games produced overtime and the winning goal Canadiens scored in extra time probably will produce arguments, but will last for months. Mantha slipped the puck into the net just 1:40 seconds of overtime was ending. Dolton claimed the ball had rung but the official—Mickey Jo-hnny Johnny Mitchell—ruled otherwise and the timer marked it 10:59.

Habitants had scored twice in the first period through Mantha and Johnny Gagnon, with Bob Gracie man and Sweeney Schriner had tied it up in the second. Three minutes of overtime was ending. Dolton claimed the ball had rung but the official—Mickey Johnny Mitchell—ruled otherwise and the timer marked it 10:59.

Habitants had scored twice in the first period through Mantha and Johnny Gagnon, with Bob Gracie man and Sweeney Schriner had tied it up in the second. Three minutes of overtime was ending. Schriner tied it up for the second time on a pass from Chapman.

Seven thousand fans saw the Montreal game and over 15,000 paying number witnessed the New York clash, indicating both teams this season are drawing well back in Canadiens' favor.

Through goals by Eddie Wiseman and Lorne Carr, Americans took a lead in the first period.

Polly Drouin, brought Habitants within striking distance before that session was over and George Mantha's real hat trick in the second session put the Montrealers ahead. Five goals were scored in that period, Carr and Wiseman scoring again and Babe Siebert getting the goal, that gave Canadiens a tie.

Rangers Impressive

Lester Patricks Rangers impressed a crowd of 11,500 Toronto fans with the smooth execution of their passing play. Even with Charlie Conacher back on right wing after three weeks' absence, Leafs never hit their stride.

Cecil Dillon and Neil Colville each scored twice for Rangers and Phil Watson and Glint Smith got the others. Syl Apps, Nick Metz and Doc Romnes also scored for Toronto counters.

Detroit Red Wings showed a smooth attack and more strength on the defence but they couldn't cope with Rangers' smooth passing. After Lynn Patrick had scored for Rangers Bruneteau ed goals to Herb Lewis and Mac Kilrea, but Neil Colville tied it up before the period ended. Mac Colville, Alex Shibicky and Patrick scored for Rangers in the third.

Paul Thompson won the game for Hawks in Chicago, scoring in overtime, when Stew Evans was serving time for tripping. Thompson's was the first time Hawks had defeated Maroons in ten games.

Doc Romnes got the first goal of the game for Hawks in the opening session, Doc Smith tying it in the second. After Louis Trudell scored halfway through the third, Jack Crawford sent the game into extra time with a neat backhand shot.

SYRACUSE STARS LEADING LOOP

Defeat Springfield 9-7 And Ramblers By 5-1

(By The Canadian Press)

It's getting close to Christmas and the boys who play for pleasure and obviously have ideas of doing their usual shopping early.

Stars ran in a scoring spree during the week-end that gave them a goal total today as plump as a Christmas pudding. In one International-American Hockey League game they defeated Springfield Indians, 9-7, then slackened their boring pace a bit Sunday in taking a 5-1 victory over Philadelphia Ramblers.

Indians fared poorly in week-end play, dropping a 5-1 decision Sunday night to Providence Reds. The victory gave Reds an even break for they lost 7-0 Saturday to Pittsburgh Hornets. Cleveland Barons defeated Philadelphia 2-1 Saturday but dropped a 5-4 decision on the night after to New Haven Eagles.

Eagles's two victories broke the tie for first place in the League's Western section, sending stars two points ahead of Barons who have 14 points. In the Eastern section Hornets pace the league by early part of the season, slipped into the familiar New York Rangers' role into third place ahead of them.

Dugald got the first Cleveland goal against Philadelphia in the second period, and Lloyd Roubell tied it up a minute later. Paul Gerard scored the winning goal for Cleveland in the third period on a pass from Earl Bartholomew.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
By Ken L. Colling

Negotiations for peace were finally signed in the Eastern Ontario hockey war, but it took the united efforts of three O.H.A. executive members before the matter was amicably settled. President Alvin Schlegel and Secretary W. A. Hewitt, both powers in the provincial hockey association, were pressed into service over the week end by S. H. "Sandy" Narrows, local executive member, before oil was poured on the troubled waters. The Kingston City delegates arrived in the city prepared to battle to the last ditch,And even went so far as to threaten dropping from the C.O.H.A. unless their demands were accepted. "We are here in the interests of the clubs and the association and you must realize every person has to give and take a little," pleaded President Schlegel at the outset.

It was only after two hours of round-table conference with Mr. Charlie Hicks, after a long distance telephone call to Mr. Queen's Athletic Board member, Tom McGinnis, agreed to three his bid to the Airport and Peterboro in a senior grouping, Eddie Thomas stated he was willing to play anywhere, anytime and in any group, so long as Ben Redmen and Charlie Belleville got good hockey. To simplify matters hereby exactly what happened, and after three long hours of verbal battle, Queen's, R.C.A.F., Belleville and Peterboro were all included in one group, with a schedule to be drawn up throughout their league schedule. All games counted wins and losses, but Billie Hewitt warned them. At the termination of each regular schedule, the first two clubs in the standing play-off, the winner going out into the senior "B" standings, while the third and fourth placed clubs play-off in a two-game home and home series, the winner entering the intermediate "A" group, meeting the winners of the Kingston-Gananoque loop, that includes R.M.C., Garrison, Kingston City and Gananoque.

During the meeting Charlie Hicks gave us the well known razzberry. "Say, young fellow, you have been robbing Jim Sutherland to your heart's content, and you're young and he's not even in Kingston. Jim's basking in the sun-shine in Florida," stated Mr. Hicks in digging. "Now, if you go further, if Jim Sutherland had been here, you'd never get away with that Napanee player deal either. He was a senior player and had 'short cut business' north of Marysville," he added. "Yes, people down in Kingston are still looking for that cut-off from Napanee to Picton, but the road is there and it's a regular highway and we're going to use the Napanee players. Trouble don't we predict as we left Kingston behind Eddie Thomas for moral support.

President Schlegel assumed "happy about the whole thing", as he pointed out that many of the stronger clubs throughout the province had been elected to higher classification this season. "Next year we expect to raise still more, until we finally have every club in the province in its proper category," concluded President Schlegel. Mr. Schlegel and Secretary Billie Hewitt a beauty vote of thanks were extended by the delegates present for the amicable manner in which they settled the differences, that at first seemed to have all-out-war with a knock-mate.

After Charlie Hicks first objected to an out-of-Kingston grouping, Eddie Thomas reminded him of the big city loop we had in these parts some years ago. "Queen's did not object to going to Cornwall and Belleville, when we had the Dominion Rugby championship now the senior loop, with three Kingston teams in it, that group was to revive hockey and every club came out on the right side of the league," smilingly became we had a bit of different face coming into our rinks and the same will hold good again, predicted Mr. Thomas. On the surface it looks as though some real fine hockey will be afforded the local hockey fans with the prospect sleuth of four clubs "A" teams playing in Belleville. All left the meeting perfectly satisfied, including Mr. Hicks.

Art Cole, local rugby football official and player, informs us that Argos were really fixed to win the Dominion rugby championship on Saturday. It was the game and on a fast field the Argos would not have been defeated. Winnipeg fleet-footed Winnipeg Bombers went. At that time the official score was thirteen on the Bombers in the first period and they should have scored another. That tackle wasn't near the receiver when he fumbled the ball and was the one slitting directly opposite the play and saw it. Winnipeg, but I still think they would have won if we had another playing field," added Mr. Cole in digest. Personally we have made no bones about our interest in local football team, however.

Fearing a repetition of their former mistakes the boys in the know of boxing are not making loud promotionations regarding Johnny Pacek's Thursday night Shamrock meeting heavyweight bout. It must be admitted Thomas has an out-side chance, but unless Hery Mask is there to handle matters,since he took Joe Louis' measure 18 months ago, Black Thomas will be given a thin handily over Thomas. Of course the German is getting stronger and it pleases all at the age, when most heavies retire from the squared circle, but he should be Schmeling over Thomas tonight.

As level as a billiard table and as smooth as a bottle is the only description of the ice surface at the Belleville arena. Manpower at the rink worked feverishly and took full advantage of the mild spell of weather over the week end with the result there is no good reason why the local ice today as we ever hope to see. The arena will not be opened until later in the week, as the management is more concerned in attaining a good quality of ice, before opening the doors.

Local junior cagers desirous of playing basketball on a junior caging squad are reminded to attend a meeting at the "Y" early this evening.

The Road Toward Home

By CLARISSA MACKIE

McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service

The great circular lunch counter in the railroad station was a busy spot at all times.

One October day after Priscilla Fair had been there two months, and was counted the most rapid of all the cash waitress there came a sudden, unexpected rush of customers that filled the stools to the last one. "Please take that one for me, Pris," begged fat Jessie Hardy as she lumbered past with a plate of clam chowder in one hand and a brimming cupful of coffee in the other. She nodded toward the last stool at the counter, and Priscilla, the one next to the cross-counter, Priscilla nodded and slipped around the shining urns and faced the waiting customer.

She saw a pale-faced man with dogged eyes, who stared first at her, then down at the menu in his hand. When he lifted his glance to her again his eyes were not dogged nor kind nor anything. Just cold and indifferent as becomes a stranger.

"Well," prompted Priscilla at last.

"Oh," his eyes
"Oh," he started, looked at her and rubbed his eyes. "Bacon and eggs and coffee," he said curtly. While she was gone, he read a railroad time table. He was still reading it when she returned with the food which she placed before him.

"You are reading it upside down," she said softly.

"Reading what?"

"The time table?"
"Oh—" glancing at it and thrusting it into his pocket, "thank you."
"You're welcome—going away again soon?" she asked wistfully.
"Tonight," briefly. "Sugar, please."

Priscilla pushed the sugar bowl toward him and tore a check out of the bunch at her wrist. "Anything else?"

"What have you got—that's good?"

"Apple pie."

"Sure?"

"It made it."

"All right—I'll take a chance," grudgingly.

Priscilla was glad that Murphy, the proprietor, had agreed to try out one of her apple pies. Since they she had carried extra money by making pies and selling them. Murphy's lunch was famous for its homemade apple pies.

After the man eaten the pie, Priscilla pondered the check and laid it beside his plate, then she began to remove the soiled dishes.

"Wait," he said, abruptly.

Priscilla waited her eyes dark, expectant.

"Have you been here long."

"Two months."

"Where did you learn to make apple pies?"

"My aunt showed me how."

"Oh! Do you want to know what I'm doing here?"

She nodded.

"Looking for my wife. She went away from me because I criticized her cooking. Spunky little thing. And she went away just for that!" His looked hard at her.

"You must have said mean things to her," said Priscilla, with pink creeping into her cheeks.

"Maybe I did, and maybe I was sorry about it. And after I'd put in a couple of loads of hay perhaps I went, to the house to tell her how mean I was and try to make up—and found she had gone. Only married three months!"

"How are you going to find her?" asked Priscilla. her wife face grew eager. "You don't even know where she went."

"That's why when I got home and found she'd gone, I just closed the house, put my crops in charge of a neighbor, and set out to find my wife. I've been all over the Middle West, chasing clews that led me nowhere. But then, at last, I struck luck. I found her—I'm going to take her home on the 6.30 train tonight!"

In the silence that followed this announcement, the big voice of Murphy was heard in a husky whisper. "Is that feller bawlin' about the food here? Tell him to come to me if he don't like it and I'll give him back his money!"

Priscilla turned a radiant face upon her employer.

"Oh, Mr. Murphy, it's only my husband telling me that we're going home on the 6.30 train tonight!"

A hurricane of whispers whirled about the shining coffee urns as Priscilla turned back to her husband, no longer sullen, but smiling, upright with the fine courage that had carried him through a dangerous crisis. "Will you go, Priscilla?" he said, and there was a tremor in his deep voice.

"Go!" and her face went across the counter to him. "That's why I took this job. Lay—hoping you might come to this station some day—try on that road every train. You know! And if you had not come for me today, I would have started home tomorrow."

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, Dec 14

By Genevieve Kemble

A very lively and exciting day is forecast from the predominant planetary configurations. This may be in connection with a sudden disruption in the affairs, favorable or moral change, travel and new interests and associations. There may be much benefit from new contacts, agreements or writings, and these should be surprising eliminations in the private life. But be discreet.

If This is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of great excitement and commotion, with change, journeys or removals in connection with advantageous new contracts or agreements. Writings, publicity and promotion should flourish. The purely private life also should have its reactions and adventures, but be discreet in these.

A child born on this day may be very talented in an original and outstanding way although it may be restless, wayward and given to change, adventure and innovation.

Some queen, eh keed!

... martyrs to science in its grim fight against death were flown from New York to Chicago in a dramatic new attempt to save sight babies from the unknown plague that already has taken 11 infant lives in Chicago's hospitals. From the tiny heads, Dr. Herman Blondeson, Chicago health commissioner, and the most famous medical scientists of the middle west, will attempt to make a serum to save the babies' lives. One terror-stricken "member" of the mercy flight is shown here, and feeding of the cages into the aeroplane at Newark airport is also pictured.

With 502 passengers and a crew of 322 aboard, the American owned liner President Hoover, one of the luxury liners plying the Pacific west aground off the southern tip of the island of Formosa, owned by Japan. Two navy destroyers from the U. S. naval base at Manila, Philippine Islands were rushing to her aid and the German liner Prussen was standing by. Passengers were reported all landed safely. The President Hoover, caught on a hidden reef, was believed badly damaged in her bow and she was grounded on Hsiaoliu Island off the tip of Formosa, on a run from Kobe, Japan, to Manila. The 30,000-ton vessel, pictured ABOVE, was believed in considerable danger with some water in her hold. The Hoover was subjected to bombing last summer when Chinese army aeroplanes mistook her for a Japanese troopship and she thereafter omitted Shanghai, formerly on her schedule, as a port of call.

With only Rod Macquarrie, lanky Winnipeg end between him and the open field big Bob Isbister, stellar Toronto backfielder breaks away, but the ace Peg end, shown about to launch himself at the running Argo backfielder, hauled him down.

Fire ravaging a two-story tenement house in Knoxville, Tenn., claimed the lives of nine persons, among them a mother and three children. Firemen are seen here removing the tarpaulin-covered body of one of the victims. Nine of the dead were burned beyond recognition in the conflagration, one of the most disastrous in the city's history.

Maestro Buddy Schwartz, hailed as the world's youngest singing orchestra leader of the radio, stage and screen, shown at his vocal and orchestral work. Buddy is a member of the American Federation of Musicians, and began his career at the tender age of fifteen months. He is now on a vaudeville tour in which he makes personal appearances with famous orchestras. His ability, at his age, six years, amazes expert musicians throughout the country.

Twenty passengers were injured, when this Cleveland, Ohio, trolley car went out of control on icy tracks, turned over on its side and plowed for forty feet along the roadway after overturning. The trolley was negotiating a steep hill at high speed when it became unmanageable, a freak victim of winter's early blasts.

This is one of the last pictures for which Jean de Koven posed in New York before she sailed to Paris and to a rendezvous with death. The slayer of the 30-year-old dancer, George Weidmann, is said by Paris police to have been a member of a "murder ring" that killed for profit. Two more men and a woman were held in connection with the slaying.

Little Prinde Hanson, midget Winnipeg back-field ace, moves into the role of tackler here, as Bob Isbister of Toronto tears around the Winnipeg end for a short gain. Hanson, hands outstretched, is about to grab the Sculler kicking star. Bert Oja (No. 16) of Pegs is in the background.

The silent of wang ao-Min, ABOVE, Chinese financier and statesman, in Peiping with Major-General Seichi Kita, Japan's political strategist, lends color to reports that Wang may head a new autonomous government in that area of north China that recently fell under Japanese domination. Chinese and Japanese sources agreed that the formation of such a state is imminent.

Jeff Nicklin of Winnipeg (38) one of the west's galaxy of great tacklers, just managed to get his hands on Teddy Morris' ankles, as the Argonaut star broke through the Bomber line in the first quarter. Nicklin's great effort halted Toronto's best attempt at a gain for more.

HUGE ICICLE JUST MISSES PEDESTRIAN

A miss may be as good as a mile, but it doesn't leave one with exactly a feeling of safety when the "miss" constitutes a bare eight inches between one and a heavy icicle crashing to the sidewalk from the roof of a three-storey brick factory. At least so thinks Mr. Harry Hallad of this city and a friend who stood conversing with him on the prominent department store on Front Street today afternoon, when without warning a miniature avalanche of snow crashed to the sidewalk between the two men.

A scant few inches away a large icicle smashed into fragments as also Mr. Hilland's head by a small margin. A large piece of ice struck his companion on the hand inflicting a painful bruise.

Overhanging snow on the roof of the building loosened by the mild temperatures responsible for the fall.

GIVE LIGHTS CREDIT FOR BETTER BUSINESS

Colored lights now festooning the business section of the city add not only a holiday air to the streets but have a decided psychological effect on the buying power of the public. Belleville merchants now enjoying one of the best pre holiday "buying" periods in years, have found.

Saturday topped all previous days of past weeks in volume of business recorded in the local store, it was stated by some of the leading merchants today. In spite of road conditions, downtown crowds were estimated at the beginning of the week.

"The lights have had a direct effect upon this public," they have added the last holiday touch, and serve as constant reminders that Christmas is fast approaching the deer and that buying should be done early.

"The snow has also added its psychological touch, and has helped people to the realities of the holiday season."

TRANSIENT PROTECTS FACE WITH A MASK

Pedestrians in the lower downtown section were given a slightly unusual stir at the sight of a stalwart young bandit's face as he passed around the corner of East Bridge Street to Front after crossing the Interprovincial bridge, heavily laden with a large pack, and wearing a curious mask whose appearance was more alike in the dark cloth material.

While seeking information at a lower Bridge Street rooming house conditions ahead, the traveller exclaimed that he was "broke" for food.

"Just protection . . . protection against snow and rain," he said, and added that last week from the satisfaction of snow on the highway, he had spent a cold night on the ties. Just take something to cover me up, I'll call all in 'll, say you've got perfect protection."

"Like buggy whips, it's been ten or twelve years since I've had such an order."

CONVICTS PLACED IN "SOLITARY"

Captain of Penitentiary Killed by Desperate Prisoner

Columbia, S.C., Dec. 13 (AP)—Six desperate convicts who slew their captain in the dining room of the penitentiary guards, after defying a dramatic, two-hour plea to surrender by Governor C. A. Johnston, were thrown into "solitary" today to await trial.

Sheriff T. Alex Heiks announced that William R. Woods, 34-year-old fugitive slayer, confessed he was the one who stabbed the 61-year-old captain, Otto Sanders, yesterday before the convicts were routed from Sanders' office by National Guardsmen hurling tear gas shells.

Standing Order.

Prison officials said Sanders had issued a standing order that in any emergencies the hands of the prisoners should not be heeded.

Adjutant General Jesse Butler, who begged in vain for Sanders' life after the convicts attacked, said he could hear Sanders talking several times. Once the captain said: "I lay on the floor in his shirt sleeves:

"I'd like to live and if there is any way you can get me out of here, you would be glad."

Prisoner Pounded.

The prisoners, pounded by clubs and billets as they stumbled from the victim's office, were treated all in the prison infirmary and questioned for hours by the authorities before being segregated in solitary cells.

Captain Sanders had gotten off his office in a building in the prison yard to escape the heat. The six men, in the prison yard for the recreation period, overpowered him singly or in couples on the rose of asking a favor. Then the fatal stabbing occurred.

DISCOVERS MAN IN HIS OFFICE

Local Dentist Surprised to Find Young Man Within

Threatened with what he believed was a weapon, secluded in the darkness of the office of a prominent man, Dr. R. H. Empson, local dentist, practising at 343 Front Street, was forced to stand aside and permit a stranger to leave his office, Dr. Empson stated, after finding the man inside his office late Saturday night.

"I opened the office door and switched on the lights," Dr. Empson appeared in the opening of the door. He held his right hand in his pocket as though he meant me to think he was pointing a weapon, I decided, and, therefore, remained like down the hallway to the top of the stairs. He did not move for more than ten dollars, so step right here and don't attempt to follow me," I called to him and down the stairs, I followed him, but was surprised to find that he was merely hurried on Front Street," Dr. Empson, who has been practising here for eight years, stated in his investigation of the crime.

Directly following the incident, Dr. Empson notified the police, who conducted investigation of search. Early Sunday night police authorities who police say is Elmer Hughes, Belleville, was arrested by Belleville on charges of panhandling. Early this morning Sergeant Boots and Detective Sergeant Hughes as to his activities on Saturday night and Sunday morning. He had been in the building in which Dr. Empson's office is located, police court this morning, held before Magistrate J. J. Hughes was remanded for a week and will be tried by the county jail for one week. He emphatically denied any theft of the gold, and also as to the possession of a weapon. Dr. Empson informed the court that he was positive that Hughes was not armed. The man appeared through the inner operating room door and Dr. Empson, who was armed by holding his hand in his pocket, which he said he observe Mr. Empson's purse is remarkable, but perhaps not to the point of theft, Dr. Empson later informed police.

Hughes appeared evening Sergeant Boots ordered Hughes from the vicinity of the City Hall, which he was loitering and it was following this incident that Hughes was subsequently questioned relative to the robbery, when arrested on a vagrancy charge last night.

SNOW COVERING PROTECTS SOIL

Conditions So Far Are Ideal For 1938 Crops, Says Farmer

Bumper crops will be harvested in this section next summer and fall if present weather conditions keep up, it is confidently predicted by rural residents and agricultural experts of the district.

Present ground and weather conditions have been ideal, they are declared by one expert who is pointed out.

As it was explained by one well known Sidney township farmer: "There isn't a bit of frost in the ground. The land has a perfect protective covering of snow, and even if heavy frosts do come they can't do much damage. Right now if the snow stays there what's a bit of heaving and cracking, and the ground will be in perfect condition when the Spring thaws do come."

SECOND APOLOGY IS MADE TO GREAT BRITAIN

Britain, United States Seek Full Satisfaction Over Yangtze Attacks

Britain May Send Sharp Note to Japan; Says London Dispatch

U. S.-ANGLO FRONT

Defence of Hong Kong is Referred to by Commander Fletcher

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
British News Analyst.

London, Dec. 14 (CP)—The House of Commons was keenly eager again today to hear the latest of the grave attention on the Yangtze. But Foreign Secretary Eden, although promising a full statement tomorrow, was unable to add anything materially.

"His Majesty's government," Mr. Eden said, replying to Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, "have under urgent consideration the situation arising by the attacks upon the vessels flying the British flag on the Yangtze.

"I regret I am not in a position to make a further statement today, but I do not think honorable members will regard the question in sorrow I cause in this way to give him a full reply."

G. R. Mitcheson, Labor: Isn't it a fact that the German diplomatic representative in China was one of the attached ships? Could the Foreign Secretary say whether there is any truth in the statement that even the German government has identified itself with the British protest?

Mr. Eden: "I do not quite know why the honorable gentleman should use the word 'even' but it is a fact that our ships have given assistance to other European in China, whatever their nationality."

Will Thorne, Labor: "Is it not a fact that while the Japanese government were expressing regret their military forces were sending bombs?"

The Foreign Secretary did not answer.

BURFORD FILES FULL RECORDS

Fiction Transport Owner Places Records Before Commission

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP) — Lewis Duncan, Automotive Transport Association of Ontario Counsel, raised a storm at the Chevrier Royal Transport Commission hearing today when he charged a former employee was obtaining confidential information from records filed with the commission relating to a trucking operation.

Fred Burford, Burford Transport, Picton, filed his complete business records with the Commission with the understanding counsel should be permitted to look at them, Duncan said.

Premier Makes Complaint.

"I came in early this morning and found one of the Railway Express Company clerks, C. G. Dyer, taking notes from Burford's records," said Duncan. "From what I saw I had difficulty in using moderate language."

"Confidential information is being given the Commission and this conference should not be used in this way. It is a shocking matter that after the case your Lordship took in refusing only counsel should have access to Burford's records that a railway employee should be there."

Customers Not Known.

F. C. S. Evans, associate counsel for the railways, said: "I did look at some of the records. I do not know a single customer on those records. I told Green to go down some rates. I think Mr. Duncan is unduly concerned about the matter."

Green said he had been down only a few rates and did not know any of Burford's customers. The Railway Commission had ruled that names of customers would not be made public. Green's notes were shown to the Commission and Mr. Justice Chevrier said no customers' names were in them.

Chairman's Counsels.

"Our companies won't feel their confidential information is being kept in confidence if railroad executives take their records to the Commission," said Duncan. "I think the Commission chairman said the rule only counsel should have access to the information and that was supposed reasonably.

"Counsel must have assistants and I see nothing reprehensible in what has been done," Evans replied. Counsel Mr. Duncan's solicitude for his clients was quite correct and I have no fault to find with the stand he took."

German "Bluebeard" Admits Killing an Alsatian Woman

One Slept Behind Ear Sufficient Says Killer

SEARCH CANADIAN

Paris, Dec. 14 (CP-Havas)—The newspaper L'Intransigeant reported today:

Searching for German victims of Eugene Weidmann, German "bluebeard", deported from Canada.

French authorities plan to send inspectors to Canada to investigate possible overseas clues in the fate of Brown, the newspaper said.

According to the newspaper, Brown was born at Montreal in 1906. The authorities allegedly found papers belonging to Brown in a hotel in which the ex-convict, deported from Canada in 1936, kept various papers and objects taken from his victims.

Weidmann emigrated from Germany to Canada in 1927 after serving a prison term. His parents hoped this abroad would reform him, but before long he was in trouble with the Canadian authorities and after two convictions at Wilkie, Sask., was deported.

During his stay in Canada he earned English, which later allegedly enabled him to pass himself as a visitor to Paris on to his wife, at the time of disappearance of the so-called murder syndicate.

Weidmann today charged that Roger Millon, one of his arrested accomplices, shot and killed Roger Lebrond, whose body was found in an abandoned automobile at Neuilly-sur-Seine.

Why the Weather?

By Miss A. H. Thomas
Science Service Meteorologist

Strength of ice! With cold weather coming on there is still a will be ice for skating, especially in the North. The strength of ice depends upon many factors, and there is no simple rule which can be applied with safety. The U.S. Army has following rules: over 2 inches will support small groups of men; 4 to 5 inches, cavalry; 5 inches in groups of inches, weapons and 7½-million-ton guns; and 9 to 12 inches, divisional loads. Ice varies in thickness even where there is running water as in rivers and near dams. It is thicker near the shore than in the middle of streams. It is best to test the thickness in several places before planning a skating party. The strength depends largely upon past temperatures.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—Pressure is high over the Great Lakes and the Northwest Territories, while a deep depression has centred over Labrador. Children Laughter Heard in Palace

London, Dec. 14 (AP) — Happy, childish laughter rang out in Buckingham Palace today for the first time in many years.

The occasion—a Christmas party for Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret and several of their playmates —rivalled for attention a small family party arranged in celebration of King's 42nd birthday.

Preparations were made to receive the princesses guests when they were driven up to the palace in mid-afternoon in aglet and span party clothes, accompanied by their nurses or parents.

Among guests were a variety of games and a Christmas play by members of the Swedish Children's Theatre. The king's birthday will not be observed publicly until June.

Event is Marked.

The king celebrated his forty-second birthday at Buckingham Palace today.

Salvos of cannon from Hyde Park, the Tower of London and Windsor Castle marked the event, which will be officially observed on June 9 of next year with publication of the honors list.

His Majesty spent the morning in his study at the palace, signing a number of official documents and receiving birthday gifts from Queen Elizabeth, Princess Elizabeth and Margaret, and other members of the Royal Family.

Germany Protests Bombing Of British Ship

Berlin, Dec. 14 (AP)—It was learned from diplomatic sources today that Germany had protested to the Japanese Charge d'Affaires against bombing of the British steamship Wangpu, on the grounds temporary office of the German Embassy had been established on the ship.

A German message from Hankow said the Wangpu was first attacked on Dec. 12 while anchored off Hsiakuan. There were no casualties but the steamship left its anchorage immediately upriver, guarded by Japanese artillery.

Sunday the Wangpu was subjected to a Japanese bombing attack as it was being conveyed by a British gunboat, again the Japanese failed to hit the boat, the report said.

A British military attache aboard the Wangpu protested to Japanese military authorities. German officials simultaneously informed the Japanese their temporary Embassy was aboard the ship.

JAMES GODFREY IS FOUND DEAD

Started For Creek to Skate But Never Reached Destination

Owen Sound, Dec. 14 (CP) James, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Godfrey, Irish Block, Sydenham Township, was found dead last night by a younger brother, Teddy, near the farm home in Derby Township. He left from neighboring boys, James picked up his skates about noon and started for the creek running nearby. His brother Teddy later joined him on the party and followed the same path in the stream. He came across his brother lying face down in the snow. He could not rouse him, and ran home to get help. The boy's father who found James was dead. He did not get as far as the creek. Dr. A. B. Rutherford, chief coroner, Owen Sound, was notified. A post-mortem was made later to determine the cause of death, but the doctor has not yet been advised that it was not known whether there would be an inquest.

The boy was in apparent good health when he left the house, although one of his brothers and his mother, who thought he should not go, tried to persuade him that the snow to school and back.

He is survived by his parents, two brothers and four sisters.

Canada's Fortification Plans Revised on Coasts—Mackenzie

Pacific Program Likely to be Enlarged Next Year

AIR FORCE FUTURE

Toronto, Dec. 14 (C)—Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie said at a Canadian Military Institute banquet here tonight that plans for the defence of Canada's Pacific and Atlantic coasts have been revised considerably. He said it is hoped funds may be available to enlarge the program on the Pacific coast next year.

Difficulties were encountered in carrying out the defence and armament program just in obtaining military equipment, Mr. Mackenzie admitted.

"In this regard we do not stand alone as Great Britain and all the Dominions have the same problems to face. Great Britain is busy with her own re-armament programme. Some of our equipment must be bought from the motherland and deliveries are necessarily slow."

He said development of an adequate air force was slow because the Canadian people have insisted on a well enough equipped to permit rapid leadership.

The outlook, however, was encouraging and will be greatly improved within the next year and a half, he said. A survey of the Pacific coast has been completed and suitable operating bases for peace and war time requirements have been located.

Peace of World Preserved

The defence program will be carried out as funds can be provided, Mr. Mackenzie said, "but we do not have in mind cannot be carried out with the object of war. Canada is in no policy of aggression but is one for our national security and for the protection of our neutrality."

Mr. Mackenzie said the peace of the world is precarious; said it will take the united efforts of all peace-seeking powers to avert a major war. Great Britain should be supported in her struggles in this regard.

JAPANESE BOAT BELIEVED AFIRE

Salvage Tug Standing Ready to Rush to Freighter's Assistance

Victoria, Dec. 14 (CP)—Marine authorities here turned anxious eyes seaward today as they awaited further word of the Japanese freighter Simon Maru, heading toward this port with fire burning in her cross bunkers.

The 6,986-ton steamer left Vancouver yesterday for Japan with a cargo of pulp and general merchandise loaded at British Columbia ports. Radio wireless reports indicated the ship was 300 miles at sea when the fire broke out. Today it was estimated she would reach Victoria some time today.

The source of the fire was getting hotter and might explode, the bulkhead separating the coal bunkers from the cargo holds. A crew of about 30 was aboard the freighter.

Owned by the Toyoda Kisen K.K. Company of Dairen, the Simmo Maru was built in 1926 at Glasgow and named the Shoppard before acquired by the present owners.

The Pacific Salvage Company's tug Salvage King was made ready to put to sea from Victoria at short distance if it became necessary.

The beard should not be so long anyone that it will get tangled up in the roots of cherry trees, they declared in the short that it will not convince young skeptics.

FISHING THRU THE ICE LIKELY TO BEGIN SOON

Most of the city's fishing shanties this week are now safely moored for the winter season and are being overhauled by their owners in preparation for the annual week of December, beginning with the 20th of December. Though the season officially opens on December 20th, the ice is usually thick enough before and sold for the past several days, and expected to be safe from a safety standpoint, as yet, no shanties have been placed on the ice, owners preferring to wait for another day or two of below freezing weather before hauling their shanties out on the harbor. Last year the first of the shanties made their appearance on the ice on December 15th, the earliest in the history of fishing and continuously established by the city's bill of fare.

ICE IN BAY ABOUT READY FOR HARVESTING

"Give us another week of this weather and we'll be about able to start our annual work", stated dealers of the city this morning when asked why the ice about able to start our annual work", stated dealers of the city this morning when asked why the ice about is not in adding inches of thickness daily. "Even now the ice is cut, but not in such a vault until it gets thick enough to bother", was the reply. Another factor in the time between eight and twelve inches of ice is the necessity required in test holes cut for the purpose.

"It should be a good clear crop this year, for we have had a most fast freezing, which makes for better ice. Also it freezes clear, which was comparatively calm, which will result in ice without streaks or spills", commented the dealers.

Two Large Meteors, Moving Close to the Ground, Startle Several Residents of Marmora

One Glowing Body Appeared to be Only 100 Feet From Ground

VERY BRILLIANT

Two luminous meteors from outer space passed over Marmora district on Friday evening.

Travelling in the sky leaving a trail of glowing sparks in their wake, the two widely separated meteors were observed at different intervals.

The brothers, Isaac and William Wright, returning to their home in Marmora early in the evening saw a trail of glowing sparks in the sky in the first instance, declaring it to be a large ball of fire passing over the Wright residence in an easterly direction.

"Every little while or so was it disappear, a chunk of fire white, disappeared into the air. I would judge its flight to be only 100 feet from the ground", declared Isaac Wright.

Then Wellman Jr., residing between Marmora and Rosebay also reported seeing the object.

At about the same thirty o'clock on the same evening, Clayton Oak, of the Oak Lake Mine, Ontario Steel Settlement, north of Cordova, while walking from the Church Christmas school concert described seeing a "large ball of fire" not very high in the sky, passing and illuminating the whole area with daylight brilliance.

CONCLAVE REPORT GIVEN Y'S MEN

Newton Thompson Speaker At Luncheon Held Monday Night

Giving a report on the Peterborough conclave of the Ontario Y's Men, which was held in October, Newton Thompson, Belleville Y's Men's International President declared that each club should draw up their resolutions and "live up to them".

A member of clubs drop their International affiliation because they do not know the constitution and by-laws of Y's Men" said Mr. Thompson. "For a number of years, the Belleville club has been advocating a fall conclave instead of their customary spring concave, yet when we do have one the members of the club do not seem to have enough interest to go."

Mr. Thompson presented an exhibition of the conclave including a pounding a number of ideas, that the Y's Men's Club could use.

President Norm McDougall, who has been in office for a year, said "International relations between clubs will bring our country more into the limelight, encouraging international relationships with other clubs we are entering good-will, with those countries. Any help that is beneficial to our club but will prove to be a benefit to Canada, as a whole."

Harry Cook, Y's Men chairman with Norm Edwards, Sergt-at-Arms and Frank Bateman, sour-leader. E. E. Corrall played a number of selections on the piano.

CHILD GOES THRU STORM TO SEE FATHER IN 'PEN'

Two And Half Year Old Girl Sees Him For First Time

A Toronto convict in the Kingston Penitentiary saw his two and a half-year-old daughter for the second time in his life Friday afternoon when the little girl's Santa Claus, says the Kingston Whig-Standard, a Christmas visitor, accompanied by her mother and grandmother, finally reached them up.

Delayed after a trip through snow drifts, cold and hardships, that started at Port Moodey, which included several storm-bound stays along the highway, and finally at Napanee, the accidents in Kingston with limited funds exhausted and only scant hopes of getting through until the roads opened and some considerable snow trudging, the trio made it.

Every month since he was sentenced to a term in Kingston Penitentiary, Mrs. Rosebush, mother and wife have hitch-hiked their way to and from Kingston on visit days with occasional trips to Ottawa in a hope of getting the sentence reduced.

Monday of last week, the mother and wife left Vancouver to see the prisoner's daughter, whom he had only seen once as a baby a few days after she was born. She had been here, to hitch-hike to Kingston, even considering when and how she started on the long highway to Kingston but storms followed and although undecided were afraid as usual in helping them, the drivers were sympathetic.

Storm-bound Made Progress

The first leg of the journey was only a few miles this side of Calgary when snow storms forced them to stay at a little farm house over night. They continued Tuesday morning and travelled as far again at night with only a few more miles covered. They finally reached Belleville on Thursday and were held up, like, hundreds of others, with the heavy drifts banking high on each side of them.

Friday the worst storm of the season was encountered. They set out from Belleville and a traveller from Napanee, behind the long queue of cars that had been held up, told Mrs. MacCorville of the storm ahead. Arriving at Napanee the little Toronto girl, her mother and grandmother, took a train to Kingston and then walked through deep snow about two miles from the train Station to the penitentiary.

When the prisoner's family were rushing to warm homes and suppers Friday evening, the mother, grandmother and three walking up Princess Street looking for the Salvation Army barracks, and finding no room for adults were, the little girl was staying at the Salvation Army Hostel.

Saturday morning the visitors were rushing to warm homes and suppers Friday evening, the mother, grandmother and three walking up Princess Street looking for the Salvation Army barracks, and finding no room for adults were, the little girl was staying at the Salvation Army Hostel.

With her rosy cheeks and red-tipped nose, the little girl was the storm, she realized nothing of the past journey, nothing of the fact that faced her mother and grandmother, but looked at flowers or days.

When asked if the little girl knew her daddy, the mother stated that the child had been afraid and had been hiding behind him. "Aren't you afraid out there?" the mother remarked.

'Forgotten Man's' Influence On Greater Canada

Historians Treated to Interesting Episodes in Early Canadian History

When the thirteen American colonies declared they could get along without the help of the Mother Country in anticipation that Canada would eagerly fall in line and join the revolution, that Canada remained loyal to the British crown was due in large part to the French Bishop of Quebec, and the desire of the French-Canadian population to remain under a government which gave them personal liberty and religious freedom, rather than risk joining the revolution and losing at least some of that liberty which they prized so highly. All this was brought back to the memories of Belleville Rotarians at the weekly meeting Monday by Rev. Father J. J. Collins, B.A., assistant, St. Michael's Parish. He gave a very interesting and instructive address depicting in vivid colors the struggles, hardships and achievements of the pioneers of Canada and the suffering and sacrifices of the loyalists who refusing to join Continental ideas in the American revolution against Great Britain left their homes and possessions and suffered personal ill-treatment because of their loyalty and fidelity.

Rev. Father McKenna, an Irish priest who took a poor parish in the Highlands of Scotland and a mighty man of physique and strong in the faith was described by the speaker as one who might be termed "The Forgotten Man," but who left his mark for good upon his times and deserves historical recognition. Sir William Johnson, this Britannic Majesty's Superintendent of Indian Affairs in the new world, supplied Rev. Father McKenna with a thirty to fourteen men of his Scottish parishioners to New York and they formed a settlement on the great estate in the Mohawk Valley given to Sir William Johnson by the King. The colonists were Scotch with a sprinkling of Irish, sturdy folk bound to make good and useful citizens of any land they settled in. However shortly after being transplanted from the old land the American Revolution broke out. Sir William Johnson, his son-in-law Johnson, their retainers and associates were vigorously opposed to the revolution and did all they could to combat it. The Royal Scotch Regiment upheld the British flag and honour in the valley of the Mohawk against heavy odds. However, the Continental Congress, hearing many complaints of the exploits of the Scotch regiment, sent more than 500 strong sent an army of 4,000 against them with the result that an honorable capitulation was made. Terms of surrender were however, not lived up to by the Continentals, and the loyalists suffered loss of their buildings, stock and possessions. Their plight was reported to Sir Guy Carleton, Governor at Montreal who gave the instructions of Rev. Father McKenna were reserved in Montreal and cared for, afterwards serving in the army with great honour and credit. After the war ended settled near Montreal and the Glengarry Settlements came into being. Others moved westward, some settling in the bay of Quinte district. Rev. Father McKenna the made chaplain of the Canadian forces by Guy Carleton and rendered valuable service until his health broke down and he was obliged to return to the old land. Sir Guy Carleton entered the Irish priest so highly that he kept a position open for him against the day of his return.

So anxious were the Continentals to induce Canadians to join the revolution that they sent a commission composed of their leading men in Montreal to try and induce the colony to go in with them in rebellion against Great Britain. The commission included Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Chase, Charles Carroll, leading Catholic layman, and Rev. Father John Carroll. The commission were given a cold shoulder and after fourteen days futile negotiation left for home. The 60,000 French inhabitants of Canada remained loyal and as a result, it has been said, Canada remained British.

Crowding much interest into the limited time at his disposal Rev. Father Collins, sketched the highlights of Canadian history from the time of Jacques Cartier through the French regime until the defeat of General Montcalm by Gen. Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham—the peace which followed ceding to Great Britain, the American Revolution, and the loyalists who helped to build up the greater Canada. He was introduced by Past President W. T. Dolan and Rotary appreciation was voiced by Past President Jos Shortt and President Fred Coleman.

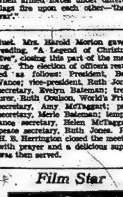
'Powers Run from Trouble', Says Manila Daily Bulletin

"Notes of Regret Cannot Alter Fundamental Fact".

COMMENTS ON SINKING

Manila, Dec. 13 (AP)—The Manila Daily Bulletin, United States-owned English-language newspaper, editorially declared today the sinking of the gunboat Panay by Japanese planes was "needless."

"All the notes of regret that can be filed, all explanations that can be concocted cannot alter the fundamental fact", the paper said.



The paper asserted the United States and other powers have been "running away from trouble" in the Orient for five years and added:

"Diplomats can call it what they please but the cold fact is that when armed forces under different flags fire upon each other—that's war."

Thad. Gunter Suggests Bounty on Bears

Loss of sheep and other livestock through the depredations of a ravenous pack of bears in the northern part of the county should be recompensed through the medium of government bounty, according to Thad. N. Gunter, well-known guide, trapper and hunter of the "Rock Country" in a communication received by the Ontario Intelligencer today.

The bounty would be of great assistance to the farmer, Mr. Gunter states, in that financial recompense would help materially to the payment of the mortgage that most of them have. Last year I lost forty dollars worth of sheep, he continues, while another man lost a "good young cow" through the raids of the bears. As for the bounty to be paid for sheep or livestock killed by bears, Mr. Gunter suggests that local members of parliament take up the question of bounties on the animals with the Provincial Government.

FIREMEN BALK AT FIXING UNDIES FOR LITTLE DOLLS

Are Willing to Repair Toys And Other Work But No Sewing, Please

OTHER VOLUNTEERS

"Well-fix up say, toys you may bring in to us; we will paint them, repair them, overhaul them and make them look like new; we will comb the city for needy families; we will cut wood for them; fill woodsheds, work all night at arranging hampers; we will drive miles in zero weather to do anything we can to assist in bringing Christmas cheer to these people, but we are durned if we will sit down with a needle and thread and concoct dresses, underwear and such things for these dolls," six husky members of the city fire department declared defiantly to their amiable chief at Fire Hall No. 1 this morning.

"Why it's downright insulting to ask a man to do a thing like that," one said, while his mates smiled behind the safety of their hands.

"What would my wife say if she walked in here and saw me making undies for a doll, armed with a needle and thread. Why it would be ruined, not to mention the fact that I would be made to darn my own socks for the rest of my life. No, sir, I refuse."

Fire Chief Lynch enjoying the situation, insisted that his men do this work. Members raved and ranted. The moon would be made of green cheese before they did—ended by saying where they had to "fill shirts on a doll."

The situation was smoothed over when Chief Lynch compromised by saying that friends of the department and wives of several members had volunteered to do the job of manufacturing clothing, sports outfits, and the frillies and fluffies that go to the making of a doll's wardrobe.

Mr. A. Jones Visits Washington Airport

Washington, D.C., Airport, Dec. 14—As a matter of fact this Airport is not in Washington, D.C., at all but in Virginia. It has like Belleville, well equipped but the area of the landing field is much smaller than the Military Airport west of Belleville. This small area is surrounded on at least two sides by wires and tall buildings. Not here is the point—34 huge airships and they were not many besides small ships. If you say anything else but big "ships" you show your ignorance. The ships handle 200 to 300 passengers daily and go to all points of the U.S.A. Three large companies are represented here at the landing field.

The Eastern Air Lines has Louisville, Chicago, New Orleans, Atlanta, New York, Newark, Jacksonville and Miami and other intermediate points.

The Pennsylvania Central has Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee and intermediate points. The American Air Lines has Chicago, Cincinnati, Memphis, Ft. Worth, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Baltimore and others.

It is marvelous how these pilots manoeuvre these giant airliners as they come in to land or leave. They put them up to within a few feet of the ground and they are handling them with the door of the ship directly opposite the gate. I did not notice a failure in this respect. The ships are as easy as a good driver handles an auto. It is a marvel to me. They are unable to back up of course. That is like me with a car and trailer—the meanest thing to back up on wheels.

Mr. Goodyear Tire Company has a fair size blimp flying about each day and they take up passengers for 30 minutes for about $3.00.

I called upon Mr. Ben Dulkney day city Editor of the Washington D.C. Post this morning. This paper is probably the most influential paper published in the Capital city and is said to have the largest circulations. Mr. Dulkney received me with great courtesy and gave me some of his valuable time. He tells me the paper is independent as to its political views. This reminded me of the political views of that great family journal The Belleville Ontario Intelligencer.

I was able to get a Toronto paper here, the first since leaving Buffalo. A snappy young news paper dealer informed me it was "Hot" with him that the President was off the Florida coast fishing, spending the taxpayers money, and all is OK with him that he (the President) was spending the money to go fishing. He also informed me he was never better off financially and never more prosperous. Several people query me as to the same thing. I am also with the President since he is on a fishing trip. However, I think he is on the wrong track by trying to raise the depression in business by spending huge amounts of the taxpayers' money. Millions of U.S. citizens are of the same opinion.

Sincerely,
Arthur Jones.

Shannonville

Shannonville—The second weekly euchre party of the Rinkydink club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Leverton on Monday night with the ultimate prize-winners being Miss—First, Mrs. Arnold Port; Second, Mrs. George Leverton, Gentlemen — First, Mr. Arnold Port; Second, Mr. Gordon Thompson.

The annual business meeting of the Shannonville Cheese Company was held at that factory on Tuesday afternoon with a small number in attendance due to prevailing weather conditions. Mr. Avery, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, Belleville, gave a short address at the outset of the meeting. The Secretary's report and the Auditor's report as read by Mr. Thomas Campbell were adopted.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Mr. Thos. Brown; Directors, Mr. Herbert Houston, Mr. Fred Lewis, Mr. W. H. Dies, Mr. Sam Geddes, Mr. Percy Moore, Mr. Ben Fuller. This is the same board as last year with the exception of Mr. Fred Lewis who replaced Mr. Hugh Hinchey who resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Pepper of Toronto were recent guests of the Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Pepper.

Mr. J. G. Spencer has moved to his winter residence.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Berry of Ottawa, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Diss.

The late Miss Adeline MacFarlane, of Belleville, was buried in the Riverview Cemetery on Sunday. The funeral was to be held on Friday but due to the condition of the roads, was held on Sunday.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"What would we do without the TELEPHONE?"

Sally Watson turned to her Mother. "Whatever would we do without a telephone?" she asked. She had just finished making arrangements for the evening with the ever-faithful Jack.

Mother smiled as Sally raced upstairs to get ready, realizing how much the telephone had smoothed the day for all the family.

Do your children have to admit to their friends, "We have no telephone"? It's hardly necessary when the cost is so low—actually, only a few cents a day!

Dickens' Christmas Carol

Illustrated by Alfred J. Buescher, CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

ADAPTED BY C. D. VORMELKER

DEPARTING FROM THE PRESENCE OF THE GHOST SHOWED SCROOGE ANOTHER SCENE. IN THIS YOUTH HE SAW HIS SWEETHEART, BELLE, REFUSING HIM BECAUSE OF HIS MISERLY HABITS.

"SPIRIT," SAID SCROOGE, "SHOW ME NO MORE! WHY DO YOU DELIGHT IN TORTURING ME!" "ONE SHADOW MORE," SAID THE GHOST. "NO MORE," CRIED SCROOGE. "I DON'T WISH TO SEE IT!" THE GHOST FORCED HIM TO OBSERVE WHAT HAPPENED NEXT.

THEY ENTERED ANOTHER SCENE. SCROOGE SAW BELLE AND HER HUSBAND WITH THEIR CHILDREN. "BELLE," SAID HE, "I SAW MR. SCROOGE TODAY. HIS PARTNER LIES UPON THE POINT OF DEATH, I HEAR; AND THERE HE SAT ALONE, QUITE ALONE IN THIS WORLD, I BELIEVE."

SCROOGE, UNABLE LONGER TO BEAR SIGHT OF THE PAST, IMPLORED THE GHOST TO HAUNT HIM NO MORE. SUDDENLY HE WAS CONSCIOUS OF BEING OVERCOME BY DROWSINESS AND ALSO OF BEING IN HIS BEDROOM. HE BARELY HAD TIME TO REEL INTO BED BEFORE HE SANK INTO A HEAVY SLEEP.

Ocean trips by plane will be possible within one day's daylight in summertime if plans of the Pan American Airways mature by 1941. Bids have been asked for the construction of passenger aircraft. Such boats would have ten times the capacity of the China Clipper class now operating on the Pacific Airways.

Such a proposal would make possible non-stop flights from America to any of the capitals of Europe. It is now felt that the feasibility of an America-Europe service has been proven by the success of the Pacific clippers.

What is very important is that there is a real race under way for the airplane transportation of the world. United States is making a strong bid for a large share of this trade and is missing no opportunity to put commercial aviation on a sound business-paying footing.

It is further seen as likely that the near future is to see commercial aviation on a very safe basis, with planes built under the modern methods as to be able to fly above storms or areas of disturbance. Modern use of metals and handling of metals is bringing radical changes in construction.

There is even the suggestion that the catapult method of launching the airliners will be considered. So much for the triumphs of modern physical science in relation to aviation.

The planes will have a speed of about two hundred miles an hour. That would make possible in summertime a trip across the Atlantic all in the same day—between dawn and dusk.

Out of the plans which have been called forth, even some principles which will cause a great development in aviation.

Such powered airliners as are contemplated will no doubt expand aviation to unprecedented possibilities.

STILL WANT MUSIC

Recruiting officers in the United States still want able-bodied men who can play flutes, piccolos, drums and bugles, trombones, clarinets, cornets and French horns, even if some persons think the agony of enlistment will be a cold methodical, mechanized army without any music in its soul.

The undeclared war in the East has been as ruthless as if fought with automotons, and automotons could hardly desire music. One can imagine that in the Japanese army there is no room for the sentimentalist who could sing "Camping tonight on the old camp ground, wishing for the war to cease."

But if men are to war there must be music, though the advantage of martial music in war is reduced because modern war dodes not allow as great opportunity.

Perhaps the man who dreamed of automatic warfare is not so dreamy after all. If it is possible to make automotons better than men as soldiers, then armies won't want men, though the armies will want to kill men as part of the resources which must be broken down.

But even present day war doubtless will need the inspiration of music, particularly in training days, if not so much in battle. What of the relief of worry and tedium? And such scenes as the gathering of men behind the lines to be abolished by the cold technicians?

IN THE CHRISTMAS SHOPS

Trips through the Belleville business shops are the order these days as entire families make their way to the places where Christmas gifts are on display and offered for sale.

Stores in Belleville have never looked more attractive, or even so attractive as they are at the present time, the show windows display an immense variety of gifts and the stores themselves are veritable treasure-houses. It can be safely said that at no time in history have the wants of the people been more readily met. Merchants have even gone further, they have anticipated not long before the people have expressed them with the result that surprises galore await visitors and buyers.

Merchants' efforts are appreciated by the people of the city and the district. From the environs about Belleville for many miles shoppers come regularly so great is the appeal of the local shops. In consequence business with the district continued in a flourishing state.

Expectation this year is that the pre-holiday season will be the best in many years.

Those writers who lie on the watch for novelty, can have little hope of greatness; for great things cannot have passed former observations.—Johnson.

STAR-DUST

I thought that stars could only shine in heaven
Until I chanced upon a deep, clear pool;
And watched entranced, one summer's night in June,
A sparkling gem reflect from depths calm, cool.

Uplifting beauty dwells in humble things,
And yet I never dreamed that stars were cold,
Until some snowflakes pure, and chaste and white
Once magnified, revealed new stars untold.

How could I know that stars were ever warm,
Until I saw them light your eyes? How queer
Their glow should spread unto my very heart!
The dearest, stars are yours, yet mine, my dear.

IT'S NICE TO BE APPRECIATED. While giving a service which by all just measurements is worth much more than the actual money value put upon it sometimes harrassed publishers of daily newspapers wonder. Such is the appreciation left in the world. Hence when such a well known Canadian business organization as The Royal Bank detours from a description of investments, assets and liabilities and has time out to say that advertisers are getting more for their money than they give, hope returns to the breasts of many doubters in the Fourth Estate. Circulation has gone up much more rapidly than advertising rates, the Royal Bank fact finder ascertains in a survey of business conditions in the Dominion. "In an extensive survey of the situation the bank finds that in Ontario while newspapers show an increase of 25 per cent in circulation since 1929 the advance in advertising rates has amounted to one-quarter of one per cent. In Canada during 1936, and in both the United States and Canada during 1937 newspaper circulation increased all previous records. Where many other business activities declined by 30, 40, or 50 per cent during the depression the decline in newspaper circulation amounted only to about 15 per cent in Canada and 11 per cent in the United States. The loss in circulation occasioned by the depression has been resumed. One indirect effect of the increase in circulation of newspapers in Canada is that, in many places, advertisers are getting more for their money.

LIFE INSURANCE HAS BECOME SUCH A BIG BUSINESS that a difficulty is found placing its great surpluses in safe and suitable investments. New York Times thus summarises the program of life insurance convention holding forth in that city:

"Life insurance presidents yesterday began a two-day convention in town. In addition to representing, by our news account, yesterday, 60,000,000 policy holders and $25,000,000,000 in assets, they will take up several problems for discussion. Among them are "the finding of new investments at the rate of $4,000,000,000 a year, the prolongation of life, and the future of the country." With time out for lunch and dinner, this should keep the life insurance presidents busy for two days."

KEEPING COUNT

The amorous honeymoon couple were a nuisance to the other passengers in the railway compartment.

"Do you love me, George?" asked the bride.

The old man opposite rose.

"Pardon me," he said courteously to the bridegroom, "she's asked you that thirty-eight times so far. I'm getting out at this station, but I'll leave the score with this gentleman in the corner."

EDITOR MAKES GOOD

There are people in all walks of life and professions who have come great handicaps to succeed. The newspaper world is no exception. Recently the newspapers reported that Sinton Rattee, blind proprietor of the Arthur News-Enterprise, has been the recipient of a decoration medal, issued in honor and memoration of their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Rattee was born in Wellington county, not far from where he now carries on his weekly newspaper. After attending the Provincial National Institute for the blind at Brantford, Mr. Rattee entered Queen's University and took his degree as Bachelor of Arts.

Then followed the study of his newspaper's general news himself and with the aid of a reader-typist prepares his material for typesetting. Recently Mr. Rattee has been nominated as Conservative standard bearer both in provincial and federal politics, but has always declined that honor. Prominent in the community in which he has lived for a long time, he has headed practically every local movement, municipality with the exception of the village council. He travels about the village unassisted and is well known in each of the places." His skill in making change is entirely unusual, and he can tell the difference between a $5 bill and a $1 bill and has never yet made an error.

Mr. Rattee has had at least one hobby, namely that of living a happy and useful life and presentation of the Coronation medal is very appropriate. His success in spite of a great handicap should offer a key to others.—Picton Gazette.

AN OCEAN GEM

The pearl is the birth gem for June. From pristine days it has been worshipped for its beauty. It is mentioned in the Book of Job and in the Talmud. During the height of Rome's power, pearls were the most valued possession of her princes and women of fashion throughout Europe. In decorations, gifts and benefactions, the pearl was the predominating jewel chosen to express human feeling at its height. The Gaekwar of Baroda has a string of three hundred orient pearls. The value of seven of these is said to be a million pounds. Many other stories say that these beautiful gems have been found in the gods changed into pearls.

The pearl in the oyster is built up of layer on layer of carbonate of lime, akin on skin, similar to the layers of an onion. Pearls are generally applied to all salt-water pearls in the trade, though those of the superior orient or sheen they are said to possess. Fresh water pearls have the fine colours of the salt water gems. Incidentally the true or genuine pearl is found almost never found in edible oysters.

The source of the oriental pearl is the Persian Gulf, the Indian Ocean coasts of Australia, Japan, Panama, Venezuela and the South Sea Islands. Fresh water pearls are found in some North American rivers and in Scotland, while the pink Conch pearl is found in Florida and the West Indies.

In common with their sisters of other lands the women of Canada love pearls and the importation last years of these gems, real and artificial, was valued at $1,000,000 according to the External Trade Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Department of Trade and Commerce.—Oshawa Times.

COUNTRY EDITORS

Most anyone can be a country editor. All the editor has to do is to sit at a desk on the first, the four weeks of the month and twelve months of the year, and "edit" such stuff as this:

Mrs. Jones, of Cactus Creek, let a spring last week.

A mischievous lad of Piketon threw a stone and struck Mr. Pike in the last week.

Joe Doc climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell, striking himself on the back porch.

While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Saturday night a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green several times on the public square.

Mr. Ford, while harnessing a broncho last Saturday, was kicked just south of the corn crib.

Some Fatherly Advice

The following letter was written by a father to his son after he had left home for the first time:

"Barney, if you get any money, don't count it in a crowd. Don't count it on or off a train when you're moving. Don't ask a woman how much she is, nor ask him as any body's clothes. Don't inquire of a blind person, or tell a cripple how it happened. Don't lie unless it is in defense of a good woman. And never run from a fight that you've started. As to smoking and drinking, use the best, but many of them, I must confess, do one or the other, you can't tell a person by a man's habits, because nobody can mend them but the men themselves. I am from country and can't tell a snake smoking or drinking less or more. Meddling in other people's affairs stirs up trouble and no good. Never do anything to insult, is my rule."

Engine Drivers at 70

The British Army lays its generals off at the age of 60 and commissioned officers of the policemen should be retired at the same age, but men of 70 are employed to drive locomotives with everybody's consent. J. B. Wyngreen of Fayetteville, N.Y., has just retired as engineer on the Atlantic Coast Line at the age of 71 and after fifty-two years of service. A few days ago our own Stella Amelia left the C.N.R. station at George A. Lobb at the age of 73 and after forty-five years of service. Mr. Wyngreen at 71 was fit enough to pilot a train carrying a President of the United States, but the Sixth Avenue "L" car efficient human locomotive driver became an unusually efficient electric motorman.

Perhaps it needs more brains to drive a street car than a locomotive engineer, though Winston Churchill and David Lloyd George might be ready to debate the question. But there can be no question that it needs more greater physical fitness to hold the throttle of an engine than to hold down a chair in the Post Office bureau. The air today is full of superannuation and retirement of men who are not old enough to scrap heaps. Yet the one job above all others that is supposed to and should not fit, theoretically, is in a locomotive cab going fifty miles an hour, with human safety dependent on one's clear eye and steady hand. Let's start a Society for Man With the Hoe, bent with the years, to be known as the permanent substitute today the Man With the Fountain Pen.

MEDICAL STUDENT

An article in the current Lancet draws the attention to the prolonged physical strain of the medical student during training, and to the fact that the course of medical study does not always take rather than of life in its most critical years." It is said that insurance companies regard university students generally as a bad risk, and there is no doubt that the long course is more exacting than any other. After the examinations have graduated, the medical student has little or no time for any more years of clinical and academic work, and during that period he is peculiarly exposed to infection. Moreover the medical course, unlike strictly vocational than most university schools. It also more keenly competitive. The late Alfred Sidgwick, in seven unremunerative years of private tuition, education, experience a serious gamble are inclined to be more than usually nervous, tense, air, sleep, exercise, and even food in their anxiety to make sure of success.

In such cases the provision of medical facilities for examination, insurance, and medical examinations for the student's health. These who are in need of exercise will probably put no attention to "public opinion which expects a student to do something in the playing field," they must either be coerced or deprived of opportunities for overwork.

Provincial Archives

With the Department of Education showing an increased interest in the teaching of local history in the schools of the province, it would seem natural to assume that the Provincial Archives Department in the Parliament Buildings in Toronto would be receiving a corresponding increase in attention. We understand, however, that such is not the case and the Archives Department is having a struggle for existence. A result of fact it is understood that the department which is now housed in the lower of the building, may be removed to the basement of the old building, or be abolished entirely.

The Archives apparently is one of those departments which is shoved around from pillar to post because it is not of paramount interest the public eye as some of the other departments which have received largess to dispense. But nevertheless the Archives is useful in its function and one which should be developed rather than abandoned. It is a matter of fact that the following year increase its value, and to discontinue it at this time would be a serious blow at the preservation of our history, past, present and future.

We had occasion to make use of the Archives several times during the past year when we were looking up data relative to this county. We have been negligent in not before this time tendering co-operation and assistance extended by the director of the Archives, Mr. Doughty. The amount of information he had at his disposal was astonishing and the trouble he took to find us the information we sought was likewise astonishing, but we imagine that the Archives comes under the direction of the Department of Education.

If this be so, the Department is to be congratulated that a vigorous local history be taught in the schools of the province and the other shuts off the source of obtaining authentic information for the local history to be taught. It has been decided to do away with the Archives and to put in its place a department which is more or less inaccessible. We hope that this will be done about it. There is, however, one step which interested persons may take and that is to bring representations to the Department officials to this effect. The Women's Institutes are interested in preserving history, as are the pioneers and do considerable researching in their respective localities. The abolition of the Archives would seem to be of little benefit to the province, and, if they are sincerely interested in the preservation of our local history, they should lodge a vigorous protest on behalf of the Women's Institutes.—Picton Times.

TIME AND TALK

A rare home's reputation depends on its silences. He takes in going around a mile track. A golfer's concentration is broken if he strokes he can use in making the shot. Likewise, the nerve of a speaker's reputation should depend on how few words he can use to get his ideas from the mind of the audience.

No orator ever failed to leave his audience sorry. They are either sorry that he has stopped when he did, or sorry that he didn't sit down when he did. Time is the secret of making a speech exactly the right length. There is no perfect stopping place between sentences, never exactly satisfied. It either sounds as if he has more to say or had too much.

Between the two extremes, it would seem that every speaker would err on the short side instead of the long side, to relate however, there are a dozen speeches to one that are too short.

One cannot help but recall Irvin Cobb's story of the public hanging at which a fat negro mammy stood perspiring in the sun for hours, and when at last the condemned man went on with his final speech, Exclaimed: "Oh, Lawdy! Oh, Lawdy! Git hung, Nigger! Git hung! Then I can go home!" Many speakers after the first fifteen minutes are a great deal like that fat negro but himself.—Kiwanis Magazine.

Township Treasurers

Oh! The treasurer has woes which only the treasurer and his poor mortal himself; when his township's debt is due, many and great, that he's ready to climb on the shelf; when the bank manager says he's sorry, but he can't tell where the ratepayers' money should be and that wishes and hugs and throw out some chaff and tell him to look for more.

When he goes to the phone to call up the sons in which his collection is slack, he gets a cross wood dame who's just sightly lame, and her temper and her nerves are swelling; then the measles and the mumps and all the childish ills come rolling right into the picture; how the chickens are hatching—it's sure a conglomerous mixture. Then he goes to the door and the whole countryside about percentage-ward comes in a body, each one of his mailets and marking their ballot with a cross, and demanding their cash.

They have a big bunch they will fire the whole scene in, then counting the township such bosses, while the heartbroken dog who is keeping their log becomes poorer each day in the circumference.—Trade Dan, Erin township treasurer, Wellington County, in Municipal World.

Derby Coming Back

Observers report that the derby hat is coming back. In the gay nineties it was worn by men who had a mash on. There was no choice between that and a cap, with, of course, the plug hat for ceremonial occasions.

The derby is a distinctly dressy hat. A man with a tight suit, or in fact any suit, looks well enough dressed off with a black derby on his apex. It is a more serviceable hat than the Homburg, which is of recent vintage. Put it away for a few months during the warm season and it comes out of the closet looking like new. It grows in fine firmness unimpaired. Give it a whisk with the broom, and it is as good as new.

The soft hat has its advantages, but it is not dressy enough. It loses shape easily, and it absorbs the dust. It is unsuitable for a man who respects the conventions of dress. It is not the correct substation of a lady friend in the theatre. It is not right for a lady friend in the theatre. It is not right for a lady friend in the theatre. It is not right for

New Meteor

What was apparently a meteor was observed by several local people to be travelling in an easterly direction over Marmora Township about 4 p.m. on Friday. It was first reported by the two brothers, William and Dale Wright who were returning from labors to the latter's home. They saw the object while they descended a short hill of fire with the head which looked to be about eight inches in diameter and the tail about eight feet in length, pass over. Mr. Wright reports, "pieces fell off at intervals and disappeared." Until late Wright, who thought the flight of the object to be a hundred feet in the air.

It was also learned that Rosaires school children proceeding north on Number 14 Highway after school had heard a meteor also fly over the district, Section men at Hubbard-body, Section men at the C.N.R. Station and Mrs. Alan McGarvey of Deloro corroborated the story.

That same evening another phenomena was seen in the northern part of the township. About 9.30, Clayton Cole, son of Fred Cole on the Vanderlip Settlement, left the school house and as No. 10 is to return home after attending the practice for a Christmas entertainment to be held there shortly. As he is invited south he saw a flash of light moving northward which greatly illuminated the country on the path. He claims to have seen a similar phenomena about four years ago.

WHAT'S NEW IN DOLLS

Character Types Are Fascinating to Youngsters and Adults

SUGGESTIONS FOR SIS

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

DON'T PAN. to take the children in the doll department of the ... toy store before Christmas. Go as early in the morning as you possibly can so as to avoid the crowds in the evening, and to get a good chance to see what you have come to use without peeping over other peoples heads or crowding around. You'll want to get a peek.

What is new in the doll department? Well Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen's little buddy, has come right to the front in the past year, and a doll in his image is the very latest in toys. He is shown seated on the knee of the shop clerk.

The imported character dolls are fascinating, more especially to the collector. They come from various countries across the water. A little Dutch boy wearing wooden shoes and with dairy pails on a yoke around his neck is a good example, as is the old gentleman. Both come from England. There is a trio for the man and many other delightful characters, children and adults, from other countries.

Below is a little girl doll that would surely gladden the heart of any small girl, and a Princess Elizabeth doll—both American made.

New Things for 1937

Even the classic baby rattle has a new appearance for 1937 toyland. "Rattle-Lumpers" has a hard rubber head which will allow the infant to develop his muscle without hurting the bottle-bent or himself.

The dial telephone is given an intriguing television model; it is a brick that's done with mirrors.

A B C blocks have a tip proof guarantee. Grooved surfaces guarantee the toddlers that they won't tip at crucial moments—a great saving for infant tempers.

Also are new grooved blocks which the very young can make into miniature furniture, houses, autos and bridges.

A new drinking doll can consume some ounces of her bottle sitting up or lying down. The same almost human dolls can lie down with her eyes open or sleep sitting up. Press this baby's stomach and she moves her lips.

And the really well dressed doll may have 30 pairs of shoes and stockings, besides as complete a wardrobe as any society miss.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"It's All Yours"

"I Happened One Night" and "My Man Godfrey" might well look to their laurels. For today and Wednesday, matinee daily, Columbia presents the first Madeleine Carroll-Francis Lederer romantic adventure, a scintillating comedy called "It's All Yours", and by that token makes a strong bid for top honors in the romantic comedy field.

Sparkling with brighter comedy, mad whimsy and clever romantic situations, "It's All Yours" betrays a captivating charm which proves absolutely irresistible. Credit for this delightful farce-comedy is due Carroll and Lederer for their scintillating interpretations of the light romantic leads; to Mischa Auer, the inimitable comedian, for several of the most hilarious comedy scenes, that ever menaced a society butler's credibility; to Director Mitchell Nugent for exceptionally clever timing of laugh situations and the smooth blending of comedy and dramatic values; and to Mary C. McCall, Jr., for a gay script littered with sparkling dialogue and brilliant wit.

The sprightly, mirthful tale is further enhanced by timely drawn performances by supporting players by Grace Bradley, George McKay, Victor Killian, J. C. Nugent and Richard Carle. Each contributing a top-notch performance.

"Trouble in Texas"

"It's All Yours" offers an unprecedented combination of comedy, love interests and fast action.

Three Features

Three varied and entertaining features have been arranged for exhibition on the same program including the Belle News of the Days showing latest films of war in China as Japanese guns toward Nanking, and scenes of fatal crashes at All American Air Meet at Miami, and other interesting events. Andy Clyde in a funny multiple-reeler "Fresh Fish Night," and a film of fast action sport thrills "Fit to Win" completes the program.

Two great hits are announced for early exhibition at the Belle in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Victoria The Great."

Hawaii hasn't a single roadside billboard.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Broken Blossoms"

There could be only one opinion as to the merits of "Broken Blossoms," coming to the Capitol Wednesday and Thursday only for a smash all No. 1 on a grand double featured program. This is an admission of a veritable triumph for its producers. You will be thrilled by the film's savage realism, and moved to the verge of tears by its heart-breaking pathos. In the midst of silent days of films directors D. W. Griffith made "Broken Blossoms," from a story by the English author, Thomas Burke, and the picture, daring in conception, glowing with romance, and stark with tragedy, was the sensation of an hour.

Lillian Gish was the heroine, a role now filled in the talking version by Shirley Rose, the famous European actress. The picture virtually made Miss Gish as a star, and the performance given by Miss Rose will undoubtedly add fresh laurels to her already brilliant reputation. The plot concerns the love of Chen, Chinese student, played in Limehouse, for Lucy Burrows, daughter of a prize fighter, who ill-treats and hates-while the frail little daughter brutally. Lucy finds temporary refuge from her father's cruelty with Chen, who promises her as he would a goddess in a shrine. Their idyl is shattered when Burrows finds Lucy, drags her home and beats her to death. He is later killed by Chen.

The story unfolds at an unusual and forceful story conveys but little of the tremendous dramatic appeal exercised by the film. It is thrilling, and at times violently brutal, action is edged with suspense that never slackens, its love interludes and pathos would melt the coldest cynic.

"They Met in a Taxi"

"They Met in a Taxi," romantic comedy-drama featuring Chester Morris, Fay Wray, Lionel Stander and Raymond Walburn, is shown as all No. 2 on a double program at the Capitol today and tomorrow.

Morris is cast as a debonair soldier of fortune who, in the aftermath of a fashion display at which the mannequin is strangled with a valuable pearl necklace, in her confused attempt to escape the murderer, finds the aid of Lionel Morris, the taxi driver, and thenceforth investigates him in all manner of capacities.

Lionel Stander, as a reformed pickpocket, and Raymond Walburn, in the role of a stuffy, old-time gentleman reporting society's caprices, are mainly concerned with filling in laughs between the romantic and dramatic moments.

Today Only

Shown for the last times today, Hugh Herbert in his merriest, broadest role "That Man's Here Again," and a great revival showing of "12 Hours by Air" starring Fred Kohlmar, Joan Bennett and John Howard. Last complete show tonight at 8.35.

NEW TREATMENT FOR WARTS

Some one has compared the common wart to skin, saying that a cancer is a "disorderly" growth of the skin cells downward into the tissues, whereas a wart is a disorderly growth of the normal cells outward from the skin and because wart causes no trouble

However a wart sometimes causes annoyance and irritation and its removal is often prolonged and painful. The various simple remedies, usually sufficient to remove warts, sometimes fail so that when a new method is introduced, most physicians are quite willing to give it a trial.

Twenty years ago a physician suggesting that hemorrhoids (piles) could be removed by injecting sclerosing (hardening) fluid into them was considered an "irregular" or a quack. Today in the case of piles that are "bulging" or do not come down and out, the injection treatment gives excellent results, ...dimilarly with the injection treatment of hernia (rupture). ...Ten years ago the method was considered unsafe, not scientific, but today especially because a better type of injecting fluid is being used it has been found that this injection method is satisfactory in 15 per cent of the cases of hernia.

Thus when these same sclerosing fluids, which harden or destroy tissue, are being used to destroy or break down warts, it is worth while investigating it.

Dr. J. G. Hutton, Denver, in Medical Medicine tells of a new method of destroying warts by the injection of a small quantity of the same solution used in destroying piles—quinine and urethane solution—mixed with novocaine solution 50 per cent invert sugar, and others.

"The injection is made with a tuberculin syringe and but a small quantity of solution should be used; it is accompanied by a surprisingly small amount of pain. The fluid should be injected into the wart itself, not into the tissues beneath the wart, thus preventing pain and damage to the surrounding tissues. There are few warts that the wart becomes hard and dry and in two weeks comes off or can be removed.

As these sclerosing fluids can do great damage to normal tissues, any new treatment of warts should be given by a physician, who learns by experience which sclerosing fluid gives him the most satisfactory results.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday Dec. 15, 1937
By Genevieve Kemble

A day of high pressure and excitement is forecast from the rulership of the stars. Some benefits may be nullified by impulsiveness, hasty judgment and restless acts. New projects, particularly in connection with commerce, mergers, diplomatic, political or secret societies are favored, mainly through strategy or subtle understandings. Sudden news should stir energy and optimism and private affiliations should bring happiness.

IF This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively year, with news from a distance as the inspiration. But refrain from hasty and reckless impetuous, quarrelsome activities. Deal with mergers, secret bodies or political affairs rather than direct measures. Happiness in the home is promised.

A child born on this day may be lively, energetic and controversive but it may be carried away by impulse, strife, jealousy or combativeness. It should be personally kindly and approachable. It may lean toward sports and athletics.

Riding Keeps The Figure Shapely

Takes exercise upon horse.

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

EQUESTRIAN riding is an excellent sport because it can be approved when as sex is the figure as well as the fun. Riding benefits the figure by improving the posture and reducing overplump legs and hips.

The reducing powers of riding are easy to understand. Every time the body is exercised and the hips and legs are given vigorous massage. You can safely feel sixty ounces of fat disappear as slender graceful muscles are developed to take its place.

What's more unlike some of our active out-door sports riding does not develop the muscles or harden them into unattractive bulges. It gives long supple muscles, rather than unsightly bunches of brawn. And it trains the entire body to move gracefully, with an easy, natural motion.

Among other things, horseback riding will do much to improve your carriage. Those of you who are inclined to slump or let your heads hang low, could do nothing better than to go out for a daily trot. The act of posting, rhythmically moving the body forward and up, then back and down, will encourage you to straighten your shoulders and hold your head up high. Indeed, after you have ridden for awhile, you'll find that an erect carriage is by far the most comfortable position for posting.

Remedies Drayback

Besides promoting a straight back and high head carriage, the posting involved in horseback riding is excellent training for holding the pose properly in place. One of the most common feminine figure faults is the tendency to over-arch. Sit back, relax and let your backbone assume which is not only awkward to see but also most unhealthful. Posting gives practice in the best curve for health in the best curve for health in the best curve for health

Young Girl Admits She Is Spoiled

By VIRGINIA LEE

M. M. ADMITS that she is a spoiled girl. Because this is the case, she isn't taking the matter of a proper mate too much seriously very well. He asked her for a date and then did not show up. Used to having her own way, she didn't like it a little bit.

Quite accidentally, later she met him on a blind date and he was friendly, but said nothing about standing her up previously. M. M. says she was "chilly and took pendant all evening, and went out to ride with another boy." Beyond making a successful conquest, then way home, that left excited from walking about looking for her, her escort didn't refer to her actions. At parting, however, he begged to see her again. She gave him no encouragement, she writes, but now asks me what to do!

When you know your fault it should help you to correct it, my dear. You can try not to act like a spoiled child. Don't make it an excuse for childish behavior.

Now sitting and crying half the night is not a very sensible proceeding, you know, so why do it? You certainly are not lacking in your mother. I'd advise that you use a little of it and straighten this thing out.

Why didn't you ask the boy how come he failed to show up after asking you for a date? I know, of course, you were too proud to let him think you cared enough to mention it. My guess would be that the whole thing was a misunderstanding. In that case he was not so rude as you thought he was. If you had found out how it happened that he didn't show up at that time, you could better determine how to deal him in the future. If he deliberately "stood you up", however, no further consideration. If it was a misunderstanding, he was not to blame and should be forgiven.

Do you expect to see him again? If so, why don't you have a heart to heart talk—at least a frank talk. Hie two people together and try to find out what manner of man he is.

Crying never does anyone any good—only relieves overwrought feelings once in a while—and it is much better to put your little noodle to work to straighten out your pranks instead of lachdaing in "tears, idle tears."

HOPEFUL: Yes, I think there is a chance of this boy friend of yours coming back to you, Hopeful. He seems to have had no special reason for leaving you. Maybe he felt he was growing too fond of you and had better not see you for awhile. Anyway, go out with other boys, and be friendly to this one when you next meet, and see what happens. I hope your mother is better. She is fortunate to have such a sweet daughter to care for her.

Draped Frock Shows Formality

By LISSETTE

KAY FRANCIS, acknowledged to be one of the best dressed women in Hollywood, sponsors the wave for definitely formal afternoon attire.

The frock she is wearing here is of dark brown heavy crepe with intricately draped bodice and sequined skirt.

A wide hat in light shade with plaid quite and matching gloves with flaring cuffs, are worn with this dress, and plain but well-fitting brown pumps.

Style Whimsies

A nice way of introducing two or three color combinations into an evening dress is to take scarfs of the dress fabric and wind and knot them closely over the bust, shoulders and diaphragm to form the bodice. It is being done in a number of new dresses.

The tunics that have been shown heretofore have been straight, boxy types. Flared tunics are now being shown and are quite new looking.

The heavy, jangling types of bracelets are very popular. Some are exceedingly massive looking, but light in weight. Materials used for them are wood, satin finished metals, rope and composition.

Suit Jackets for spring will be longer, says Paris, about 32 inches. They are slightly fitted, and skirts are from fourteen and one-half to 18 inches from the ground.

Gray is liked for children's outdoor play suits this season. It is a practical color, and may be brightened with bright colored accessories, gloves or mittens, caps and scarf.

Rice and Tomato Dish Takes Place of Potatoes

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Moon Hint

Pork Chops Rice and Tomato
Cabbage Apple, Carrot Salad
Pecan Cake Coffee or Tea

This recipe for rice and tomato is good for lunch or supper, as well as for the main dinner vegetable.

Today's Recipes

RICE AND TOMATO — Wash one cup rice, and add one quart can tomatoes, one large onion, chopped; one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon paprika. Steam for one hour.

PRUNE CAKE — One-half cup butter, one and one-third cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk, two eggs, slightly beaten; two and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon soda, one cup cooked prunes, finely cut. Cream butter. Add sweetened condensed milk and eggs and beat thoroughly. Sift flour once, measure; add baking powder, and spices and sift again. Add dry ingredients to butter mixture. Beat until smooth. Add prunes which have been pitted and finely cut. Bake into two buttered layer cake pans (eight inch). Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) about 20 minutes. Spread with butter frosting.

BUTTER FROSTING—Two tablespoons butter, one-fourth cup sweetened condensed milk, one and one-half cups confectioners' (4X) sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Cream butter and sweetened condensed milk thoroughly. Add gradually the sifted confectioner's sugar and beat until the frosting is smooth, creamy and light in color. Other flavors than vanilla may be used. The frosting may be tinted any color by the addition of a speck of food coloring. Pale tints look most attractive. Spread on cold cake. Makes enough frosting to cover tops of two cake-inch layers, or top and sides of loaf cake, or about 18 cup cakes.

Always use a dry cloth in handling hot glass cooking utensils. If a damp cloth is used the glass is likely to crack. When a glass dish boils dry, allow it to cool before soaking it and then use warm—not hot—water and a dishpan powder.

Poems That Live

A CHILD'S SONG OF CHRISTMAS

My countenance is soft as silk,
My blankets white as creamy milk.
The hay was soft to Him, I know,
Our little Lord of long ago.

Above the roofs the Pigeons fly
In silver spirals across the sky.
The stable-doves they cooed to them,
Mary and Christ in Bethlehem.

Bright shines the sun across the cribs,
And bright upon my Christmas gifts.
They brought Him incense, myrrh and gold,
Our little Lord who lived of old.

Oh, soft and clear our mother sings
Of Christmas joys and Christmas things,
God's holy angels sang to them,
Mary and Christ in Bethlehem.

Our hearts they hold all Christmas dear,
And earth seems sweet and heaven near.
Oh, heaven was in His sight, I know,
That little Child of long ago.

Physician Says Heart Is Tough

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

LAST MONTH'S issue of a national magazine contained an article entitled, "Death Comes to the Average Man". It dealt with heart disease, which, it was said, kills more people than cancer, tuberculosis, Bright's disease and pneumonia, put together.

In adult people its frequency is striking. Of 100 graduates of a great university, it was found that of every 1,000 deaths, 350 were due to heart disease and blood vessel disease. This checks closely with a study of 2,581 American physicians who died in 1936, and in these, 324 out of every 1,000 were heart deaths. Of course, these figures look more alarming than they actually are.

In a group of that kind, definitely over the age of 30, infectious diseases are very uncommon. By and large, infectious diseases are diseases of children. Tuberculosis, which still takes a large toll, kills its victims mainly after the age of 30. The high incidence of heart disease really means that people are being saved until they get into the heart disease period. Dr. Alfred E. Cohn has expressed that idea by saying that the rise in the death rate for diseases of the cardio-vascular system, is due not to malign but to beneficient causes.

The work of the heart is a beautifully adapted piece of mechanism. There are six and one-half quarts of blood in the body, and the heart, as a hollow muscle, has to pump this all over, bringing food and oxygen to all the billions of cells in the body. It works tirelessly and endlessly, and the amount of work that it does has been calculated to be equal to raising a ton of average weight in an elevator four yards every ten minutes.

The heart beat itself is controlled largely by the nature of the heart muscle, although certain intrinsic controls are brought into play according to the nerves which slow the heart or make it go more rapidly, but in general it makes its own rate. This pace is determined by different factors. At rest, for example, the rate is slower than when exercise makes a demand for more oxygen which must be procured from the lungs to the tissues.

Heart Gets Tough

Delicate as all these adjustments are, the heart is a pretty tough character and stands up against a good deal of racket. If more work is demanded of it, it responds just as any muscle does when more work is given it to do.

The two things that cause most heart disease are, first, the thickening of the arteries that goes with old age. This gradual change affects the heart in two ways. In the first place, its own arteries become smaller, and hence the heart muscle gets less nutrition and second, the rise in blood pressure which accompanies the thickening of the arteries give it more work to do.

The second cause of heart disease is infection, which may light on the valves and lead to mechanical difficulties. Even with the valves injured, however, the heart may continue to beat well and efficiently for many years, sometimes as much as 20 years. Many people with valvular heart disease live to old age and die of something else besides heart disease.

A Consistent Winner In the Poultry Field

By Central Press

MRS. A. J. CONNELLY, of Butte, Idaho, 37 years old, and for 20 years a consistent winner of prizes for her chickens, carried away six blue ribbons, two red ribbons and one third award; six singles, vegetables and two sweepstakes cook at the Utah State fair in Salt Lake City, the past autumn. She has a big future for women in the poultry field.

Nineteen thirty-seven was the first time Mrs. Connelly exhibited in Utah and her first visit to Salt Lake City. It was her fourth exhibition since August of 1937, however, as she travels with her chickens, cares for them herself, and prepares most of her own meals. She is the "little old lady" of the poultry world, entering the arena late in her thirties. In what is now the heart of Butte, in those days just a mining camp, she had imported rare species of chickens, raised numerous others of fine strains, and turned their hobby into quite a business. She has an amazing collection of prizes, which include an enviable assortment of ribbons, medals of gold and bronze and other trophies. Light Brahmas, Blue Plymouth Rocks, barred rocks, all pure bred, make up her flock.

"Women understand the chicken better than men," she says. "There is a future for the 'weaker sex' in the poultry field."

"It seems to me the chief defect of our criticism today is that the critics are so ignorant." — Lord Tweedsmuir.

Family Car Is Cause Of Trouble

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

OVER THE FAMILY car is a deal of trouble in some homes, especially homes of adolescent children. More often than not the teen-age son is the centre of the stage.

Now any adolescent, even the child over eight or ten, could easily learn to run the family car, without any instruction, if allowed to undertake it. He is familiar with the mechanics of the thing long before he has the wheel for the first time.

Some children, even before their teens, are allowed to run the car, and some not "allowed" to run it. An occasional lad having learned in secret to drive will demonstrate a good ability at handling the car, that his father will let him go on doing so. Soon this lad is driving with the dad along, and the step to the boy's driving alone is not far. It is surprising how many parents will let their boy under legal age have liberties with the car. These fathers should know that their liability insurance will not protect them in the event of an accident while the boy is driving unlicensed.

Long before the child is old enough to drive lawfully, his parents know all the facts, and make these facts clear to this child. Then, if the child had been properly controlled up to then, he will not be permitted to drive anywhere until arriving at that age.

Observe Driving Laws

Once the youth begins to drive, the hope is that he will observe speed limits, and not exceed a rate of speed she family has convenanted to observe. Persuasion may be more effective, by far, than stating of orders.

But however there are clear signs of carelessness in this young driver, he should be denied the privilege to drive at all for several weeks or months. Drivers under 21 are more dangerous than their parents, as a rule. Not these youths, being more alert, could easily excel their parents as drivers, if they set out to do so. But youth is daring, take chances she'd shun off. Nor does he sense the responsibility that goes as do these with more experience.

Parents are inclined to let their adolescent children have undue share in the use of the family car, and to encourage these people to expect its use still more growing increasingly selfish. Then more parents asserted their rights and good judgment in respect to the family car. All too many parents have no spine in regard to such matters; they are only jelly fishes.

Schmeling Methodically Chops H. Thomas to Canvass in 8th; Ready to Meet Louis for Title

Black Uhlan Looked Fit as He Toyed With Thomas

BOMBER IS PRESENT

Thomas Far From Disgraced Although Knocked Down Six Times

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Dec. 14 (CP) — Joe Louis, the cocoa-colored heavyweight fight champion, is not a test easily impressed.

He sat dead-panned in Madison Square Garden last night while Max Schmeling knocked Harry Thomas silly as a dervish in eight rounds, and all Joe had to say was: "If I can't whip that Schmeling the next time I don't ever want to see another pair of boxing gloves".

Joe might have been whistling in the dark. Schmeling, to the lay eye, looked like a truly great fighter as he toyed with Thomas in the early rounds and then methodically chopped him to the canvas with lightning rights. But Louis sounded as though he meant it.

So did his dusky manager, old Jack Blackburn: "All I hope is that nothin' happens to that date we got with Schmeling next June," he said happily.

Nothing apparently is going to happen to that date. Over 16,000 customers jostled their way into the Garden and most of them seemed to be there to cheer Schmeling.

The veteran gave the ex-champion as he entered the ring brought a broad smile to his face that departed only fleetingly as he worked on Thomas.

Thomas Free Disgraced

While beaten by a much superior fighter, Thomas was far from disgraced. He hit the canvas for the sixth time in the eighth round before Referee Arthur Donovan escorted him, rubber-legged, to his corner. He didn't know a thing by that time, but he still wanted to battle.

The long 16-month lay-off since he stopped Louis last summer appeared not to have affected Schmeling's timing or the lethal power of his right arm as he got himself unshamed. He let his wild-swinging opponent carry the fight to him and landed his blows with speed and concentrated sufficiently to win three of the first five rounds.

It wasn't until the sixth that Max, moving more deadly, unhurriedly began cracking Harry on his whiskers. He said afterward that he had found the Detroit Negro stiffer, packed harder to tak with a right than he did Louis. Without once be got the range it was all over.

Saved by Bell

Just before the seventh round ended Thomas went down, hard, the bell sticking him on the canvas. His mouth had been bleeding since the second round when one of Max's lefts drove a tooth almost through his lower lip. In the eighth Schmeling really went to work and Thomas was bouncing up and down like a rubber ball until Donovan made the German stop.

There wasn't any doubt in Thomas' mind, once it cleared, that he could run into a stinger. He had a humble opinion he and Schmeling will stop Louis's clock again the next time they meet, and quicker than the other time. Thomas hadn't been down before in his four-year ring career, and Schmeling's right surprised him considerably. It being the first such experience, he didn't know enough to take a count. Schmeling was pretty well pleased. He came out of his first time-up seasoned again and looking easily. He seems ageless. At 32, his legs and his body are as smooth and rippling and tidy-looking as ever. Undoubtedly he has a great right that he never exhibited as champion.

FORMER CHAMP SIGNS WITH FARR

Braddock And British Titlist Meet on January 21st

New York, Dec. 14—(AP)—James J. Braddock, who lost his world heavyweight title to Joe Louis at Chicago last June, will signed to defend his title in a ten-round match with Tommy Farr, holder of the British heavyweight championship at Madison Square Garden, January 21.

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced tonight he had clinched the match as a part of his 1938 heavyweight program. Braddock was restored to good standing in the New York State Athletic Commission after being in disfavor since last June. He was charged with running afoul of a contract to fight Max Schmeling. Braddock and his manager, Joe Jacobs, paved the way for their reinstatement by paying fines of $1,000 each, case p.d following the Braddock-Schmeling fiasco.

Farr, who won the fifteen-round decision over Jack Sharkey, will go to Louis in August is now in England. He cabled acceptance of Jacobs's terms for a Braddock match and will return shortly to this county.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

But for from missing this opportunity to bring Sandra home, that's word into her, had made it clear that she considered her daughter an independent young woman and had practically demanded that Sandra give up her friend Peter to the sponsorship of someone that she by disciplined, her wishes respected, for her disgraceful conduct.

Disappointed and discouraged, David had felt, nevertheless, that his one hope of progress lay with Sandra. She was intelligent and reasonable and more mature than his position would ever be. She had to do, he had decided last Friday night as he lay in bed, was to go to Sandra and frankly plead for her cooperation.

Fannie Roberts looked at the tall young man standing on the mat in the hall and smiled. He was very young and very neat and he seemed a little embarrassed. He said, finally, "I'm David Sandra's brother. I thought she might be home from the office by now." And then, pointedly, "You're not Mrs. Roberts, aren't you?"

"I'm Fannie," Fannie said. "Come on in, David, and hall out."

David took off his coat and stood in vigorous pose in the cubic Fannie indicated.

"I was under the impression Sandra didn't work Saturday afternoons," he told her, and looked at his watch. "It's almost five."

Fannie explained. She seemed to be having some difficulty in doing it. "She went up to New York yesterday morning. I don't know about the week's end plans. I don't think she expected to get back before eight or nine tonight."

"On a shopping—"

Fannie looked at him. There was something in the strong face very like Sandra. She said, "No, she went with a friend. They were going out to a show afterward. (It was silly to be afraid this boy didn't know about Sandra and friends.) "She went with Bryant Wilson, David." And saw his eyes narrow.

Then Sandra had not been joking. David thought, as he stood there looking around with Bryant—and they had gone out to a local from New London in the weather! He was on his feet. "Well—" It was a word that said that he had done all he suggested all the frightening possibilities being thrown up by his imagination.

"Don't be uneasy, David," Fannie said, quietly. "They may not have gone out after all when they got to New London. And even if they did and anything happened, Sandra would be all right. She's an extraordinary girl, you know."

David took up his coat and hat. He was smiling now and Fannie smiled back as he said good-bye.

Hardly had the door closed when Fannie's phone rang. Fannie said called Matt Stanley at The Flash.

"You didn't—Sandra's with Peter," she said, hurriedly; "Why did you let her go off with him, feeling? You felt sorry for her enough when there's no need of it—you could have given her an assignment or something."

"Shut up and listen to me," Matt shouted. "The weather bureau has been broadcasting storm warnings all morning and we've just had a flash. Sandra's driving in the middle of the jersey coast. If Sandra and Wilson get in it, there's no telling what'll happen. Now about picking up a car at coffee and some sandwiches and coming out right? I'll pay the duty and—I'd like to feast my eyes on Sandra for a few moments. Aside from that, I've got two real exciting pictures coming in New London and I may get some dope."

Fannie said, "All right, but you'll pay double duty for the coffee and sandwiches. I hope nothing's happened to Sandra."

At three o'clock David was hunched over before the radio hunting for news broadcasts when he heard Matt MacAllister's voice giving storm bulletins. He telephoned the station and asked the operator call him back as soon as he was free. Not three minutes later Sonny called.

"David says—I'm a little fuzzy, Sonny, Sandra and Bryant Wilson went up to New London this morning to go out in some kind of a boat. They weren't to come back until tonight so there's no chance for you in the afternoon. I don't know of any way I could get to New London in a hurry, if you're—silence—Then: "Not right off the bat, I don't, David. But I can figure it out. Where are you?"

"You're sure she went with Wilson?"

David said Sandra's roommate said she had gone with Bryant.

"It doesn't matter," Sonny said. "I don't know why I asked that. Look, you what, David, come down here as quick as you can. I'll have it caged out by then."

David took a cab and riding down to meet Sonny, he kept thinking of Sandra and Bryant Wilson. More than once he had surprised Sonny in there than a casual interest in Sandra.

Through badly frightened, Sandra had not actually begun to sense the awful horror that lay ahead until she looked up and saw the swirling black clouds racing overhead and realized that it had the sheer wall of comber had cleared off the top and one entire side of the shelter.

The crash of glass and the snap of wood had so startled her that she had been unable to think. Instead of her grip on the rail—not thinking or having time to think, she did not realize that the same mounting wave had probably saved them from death, had caught the Water Bug just as her bow was swinging around to be broad on the sea, and by the force of its huge bulk had given the light craft almost completely around so that the next thundering billow caught her stern on.

Ten seconds before the wave bore down upon them Bryant had thrown a makeshift sea-anchor over the stern and, feeding out line hand over hand, had prayed that it may have a chance—If we can get around. The cruiser would ride better with the bow to the wind. Then her heart stood still as the bits of shattered glass rained around her head. Bryant's shoulders snapped and the Water Bug's stern swung sharply around to a low trail and a single useless partition of glass.

Bryant— The lay sprawled on the deck, his head under the low coaming. Sandra came to him so that she could see the hand or that arm protruding from the opposite side.

Bryant had warned her time and time again, "No—don't get frightened, don't let go that rail. You'll be washed overboard in a second if a wave should come through the shelter." But she did not think of this now. She knelt at, a hand sliding along the rail. The stern rose and fell and rose again and she was well beyond the hatch before a frothing wave came crashing out of the dense rain cloud. She dropped to the deck, locked her arms around the post there and waited.

In a moment it was on her, trying to tear her away, and then as she was on her feet again, wet to the skin and pattering, still numb, almost afraid to lift her eyes, afraid Bryant would not be there.

Nor was he, but when she turned to look for him she saw him on his limp form against the hatch where he must have been washed by the rushing and as soon as she was never sure of her own footing, she dragged Bryant's body across the narrow hatch and got him on one of the bunks. Compared to the raging hell on deck, it was snug enough here, but far from dry. She walked in and Bryant's legs dragged through water. Magazines, a book with red lead and an aluminum pot thrown from the rack floated in it. She supposed that it might be a matter of minutes before the place would fill with water and—

But she did not let herself think beyond the moment. Bryant lay on the damp covers and there was no longer that momentary danger of being swept into the sea. She took back on the starboard bunk and looked up at the dripping hatch with a grin, triumphant grin.

It was a paean of seconds, a few precious moments during which her breath, jo summon fresh strength and feel some courage. And then she was bending over Bryant once more, rubbing the gash on the side of his head.

"Sandra....." He had not opened his eyes, but she looked, and his lips lifted. "Are you all right?"

"Yes, yes," she said quickly. "You hurt, my head, Bryant. Is there anything down here—anything I can get on it?"

He did not answer, but took her arm and drew her across him and pulled her face down to his. "I—I love you, Sandra."

Through a little silence, her eyes held his; then she dropped her head and kissed him and put her cheek against his and lay there, quiet, not thinking, trying so terribly hard not to think.

At last she rose. "I must put something on your head."

He pulled up on one elbow, shook his head. "Sandra—the hatch—try open. Look—" He showed her how to close it. "We'll have that much longer, anyway. She closed the hatch. When she turned he was sitting up, waiting with outstretched arms.

INSTALMENT 17

One hand tightly closed around the metal upright to which a corner of the small stove was securely bolted, Sandra stood there in the fatally and stared at the pathetic figure on the bunk.

Bryant Wilson's rotund body sagged with every lurch of the battered and crippled Water Bug and his outstretched arms sagged heavily as if he had barely strength enough to hold them up. He was still wearing the heavy oil-skin, but she knew that under it his clothes were as wet as her own. His hair was matted and dripping. His feet were submerged; the dark water sloshed around his legs.

The Cottage by the Sea

Ronald, his long legs perched comfortably on the wide ledge of the verandah among the debris of the flower pots, finished reading the news in his paper and then turned half idly and half seriously to an old-fashioned headed "Board Wanted."

"Sonny! If you kick any of my pots around I'll throw you right into the sea you will most certainly have to retrieve them and the water has the sweaty temperature of Iceland today."

"I say, Ma, this sounds rather good—almost as if the chap knew how hard up we are and wanted to help us. Room and board, even looking the sea in which he can sleep during the day. She's a newspaper man—night worker and his sleeping time is from ten in the morning until six in the evening, that would suit us beautifully and he will pay ten bucks a week!"

"Sonny, that would be like something out of Heaven. I will have left the house by the time he comes and he will have everything before I return. It's perfectly grand. You could even cook him his breakfast or would you like to wake before going to his work." Alice smiled at the thought.

"Great head," greeted Ronny, but a small matter of fact he will could welcome the pattern of a fish at breakfast. Ronald as fondly during the day that he would be glad of a respite at odd moments.

Caught by a sudden freeze-up in the Lachigolee channel of the Detroit River, three fire lake freighters and a lightvessel tender, were held fast for several days while the quicker-freezing ice packed into impassable masses around them. Steady tugs from Amherstburg, Ont., finally smashed open a passage for the freighters, three of which were damaged slightly. Veteran lake mariners reported the freeze-up the fastest in their history, with a strong wind piling up the ice in serious jams to completely halt navigation. Winter's sudden descend left Lake Erie practically blocked with ice.

New Accurate Clock

The most accurate clock in existence is to be installed at Greenwich Observatory, London. The gift of a London amateur astronomer, it will be composed of three separate units and will not vary by more than one-quarter of a second in a year.

The speed of the earth's rotation varies slightly, it's "time-keeping" sometimes losing or gaining as much as one second in a year. Greenwich astronomers will in future be able to check up on the earth's mistakes with certainty.

The "master" clock will be reared of actual work, such as the turning of wheels and hands, and will be the nearest approach to a freely swinging pendulum with nothing to vary its time. This pendulum will keep the time but the intricate workings will be contained in the two "slave" clocks.

There are other clocks of this type at Greenwich, but this is the latest and most accurate of them all.—Monreal Star.

He is a young surgeon who borrows and begs every book he can find on the subject of electricity. He can take a radio to pieces and rebuild it better than new. He knows more about the ignition of an automobile than a garage mechanic, and he can repair a piece of wiring neater and quicker than the local electrical man. But when he finishes high school, he is going to have to take a job jerking sodas in a drug store because his parents have no money to send him to an electrical school for a couple of years.

She is a modest kid of humble parentage, but she plays first violin in the high school band. She accompanies all the singers at the high school musical events. She writes the little songs and composes the incidental music for the high school plays, but when she graduates she will be a curb waitress at a barbecue stand because her people have no money to develop her unconscious genius.

He designs and executes the posters for the store windows to advertise the school football games and athletic events. He draws the covers for the programs, and makes all the humorous cartoons for the high school annual. Yet, when he graduates all he can do is apprentice himself to the local sign painter because his people have no money to give him a commercial art course.

She planned the meals in the high school cafeteria. She could make an order of corn beef hash look like the most appetizing thing in the world. They had to chase her out of the kitchen both at home and in the cafeteria because she wanted to mix and match good things to eat. She had an instinctive knowledge of calories, food values, vitamins and the like. Yet the only place for her after graduation is as cook in some family or some cheap restaurant, when the hospitals of the world are paying splendid salaries to dietitians. Her family has no money to give her the necessary education so she can find happiness and prosperity in the higher branches of the work to which she is well adapted.

In any of these cases, it would be a joy to the girl or boy to repay out of their earnings in beloved work, any organization that would finance their further education. It takes little money to back a revolving fund for this kind of vocational education. It takes little work to properly place the inspired geniuses of this world.—Ryerson Magazine.

Just before she was freed by a French court sitting at Versailles, Mlle. Irene Schneider, French airwoman and star of an aerial love drama that featured the shooting of a pilot and Mlle. Lallemont in the cockpit of his aeroplane, whose pilot she assertedly landed to oust the pilot and took off immediately for Britain. Her aeroplane partially crashed in a Croydon landing, and Mlle. Schneider was arrested and returned to France. Lallemont recovered.

A unit of New York's mechanized snow army is shown gobbling up a seven-foot drift at Lake Placid where the new equipment is being tested. This machine, it is claimed, can move 21 cubic yards of snow in 35 seconds. So enthusiastically have the operators of these machines gone about their manoeuvres that it is feared they'll run out of snow and begin moving the mountains if there isn't another fall pretty soon.

Yestiddey I had a splinter in my finger all day-and after supper it started to hurt worse so I thought may be it was time to have it took out, and I said, May ma, O, pop, I've got a splinter and I don't like the way it looks.

Let me look at it, pop said.

Which he did, saying, It's nothing. It's what is known in the medical profession as a first degree splinter, meaning that one end is in one and the other and is within a atome's throw, or at least easy walking distance. Go and get the tweezers from the medicine chest, he said.

Which I did, and pop stook them in one hand and my finger in the other hand, me saying, Owtch, Say.

For feet sake I haven't touched it yet, pop said. You just told yourself that it was going to hurt so it automatically started to hurt. That's known among diphnologists as auto suggestion. Now this time just tell yourself that it's not going to hurt, and it automatically won't, he said.

And he started to take it out again and I said, Hay, owtch, Rummy crickits pop, owtch.

Did you tell yourself it would not hurt? pop said, and I said, Darn, pop, I told myself all rite, but I didn't believe it, and I was rite.

My landa, come over here with that splinter and there I present for goodness sakes, ma said.

Which I did, and ma said, Now this is going hurt so you might as well make up your mind to it so you'll be accustomed to the kine.

Aw O, ma, does it have to hurt, cant you do it some other way, ma, asr ma, I said, and ma said, The splinter's out.

O, I never even felt it, I said, and ma said, You were too busy crying over imaginary spilt milk, and pop said, The next time you get a splinter let me know and I'll refer you to your mother.

Children to Use Street Hills For Sledding on Certain Hours Council Decides at Meeting

Committee Appointed to Interview Rink Management

2 BYLAWS PASSED

Relief Statement From Department for November Presented

Children of the city were catered to by the members of the City Council at their regular session on Monday evening, the hour in the last meeting of the month when the members will pass from the picture. The final meeting of the council for 1937 will be held on Thursday, Dec. 30 instead of the Monday following Christmas so as to not break in on the Christmas festivities. The council made preparations for civic employees to enjoy their Christmas season by authorizing the payment of December salaries before Christmas day. This is a general practice of the council and is greatly appreciated by the employees.

The future citizens of Belleville will be given an opportunity to enjoy the splendid sledding facilities now available as the council ordered the closing of various streets during the season. From four hills on the afternoon Church street from Bridge street to Pinnacle, from Victoria street from Catherine street north, Bridge street from Order street to Pinnacle, Charles street, and Lingham street from Pine street north will all be closed to vehicular traffic and the children can romp and play to their hearts' content during the hours mentioned. These hills at the present time are in excellent condition for sledding.

Committee Appointed

A committee of Aldermen Wills, Herbison and Lewis was appointed to meet the Lions rink management with respect to hours for the children on the rink while Mr. Bell is "sandy" Burrows sent a letter to the council making a proposition with respect to this matter and it will be considered by the committee appointed. Mr. Burrows asked a flat rental of $600 for the rink from nine o'clock on Wednesday and from two to five on Wednesday throughout the season from the city and half the gate receipts for all time they have the skating and the management of the rink will pay their water and tax rate direct to the city. The city will supply coal for the fires and water while they will pay out $600 for the use of the rink.

Parking space in the rear of the stores on Front street will have to be maintained clear for a five foot side to prevent cars from driving into the rear of the stores and the city's sidewalk snowplow using the parking space they do so at their own risk, according to Chief Constable C.N.R. Superintendent G. A. Gibbons in his report to the council of snow shovelling during the winter. It was decided to let the matter stand as it is and if changes were needed to shovel snow on C.N.R. property at that time they are available from the C.N.R. but, that relief men of the city be taken from the Western Avenue supply the man. Two by-laws, one to govern the measurement and classification of wood and the other that no wholesale gasoline or other storage tanks be permitted to be erected within the Corporation". The last named by-law is to be amended so to a by-law passed sometime ago respecting this matter.

Sinking Fund

Sinking Fund requirements was the subject of a recommendation passed without comment or discussion at the meeting of the council held "That the City Auditor be requested to compile and submit to this council the information for the year 1937 in respect to Sinking Fund requirements, the same to be based upon the same basis as that supplied in this respect for the year 1936 and that a further summary be made by him for the information of the 1938 council showing amounts and percentages of the Sinking Fund requirements for the year 1937 and secondly, and that the amount of surplus at present existing over and above requirements not alloted to debentures falling due between January 1938 and December 1941 both dates inclusive."

A recommendation that the city no longer would be responsible for the maintenance of Mrs. Olive Rose as Mountain Superintendent at Hazelton was passed without discussion. New bylaw will be introduced for her inside market at a cost of $32. A sum of $30 was passed to provide decoration for the upper and lower bridges during the Christmas season.

Letter Received

A letter was received from the Quinte Motor Cycle Club and after being read was acknowledged and the clerk instructed to notify the Club of its receipt. The letter in full follows:

Mayor and City Council,
City.

Please find enclosed a statement in full for expenses incurred by the Quinte Motor Cycle Club for the race, that was sanctioned by the council in March 1937, for Labor Day.

It was recommended by Ald. Saeagar at the meeting when the memberships was vanished that the Motor Cycle Club be reimbursed for expenses incurred in connection with the race.

At a directors' meeting of the Quinte Motor Cycle Club, it was decided that an expense sheet be drawn up and be presented to the council to show exactly how much was spent. The directors feel, however, that your body has had a considerable amount of expenditure in grants to various organizations and do not like to ask for this expense they are not asking to be reimbursed.

Our reason for holding this race originally was to bring to Belleville and vicinity a sporting event, that would be of interest to the citizens and would promote the publicity of the city.

While we were very disappointed when the motion was rescinded and although we have had to bear the brunt of expenses without reimbursement we wish to thank you for your consideration in the matter.

Yours very truly,
Quinte Motor Cycle Club

memorandum.

Notes Cobalds.

The statement from Washington and the Foreign Office was practically coincidal.

President Roosevelt's memorandum had asked the Japanese government consider for presentation to the government of the United States full expressions of regret and profound sympathy and assurances that no outrages against a repetition of any similar attack.

Another Washington government statement was issued in connection with the Panay incident.

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye issued the following statement:

"The birth of a new China will serve to safeguard foreign interests in the Far East."

It summarized Japan's contention, that the government has a policy of "non-aggravation" and said the Nanking government is being reconsidered to a more local government.

Earlier the Premier and the cabinet council had heard Hirota's report on the Panay incident and the report of War Minister General Sugiyama on the capture of Nanking.

Statement in Part

The Premier's statement said in part:

"Foreign powers will certainly understand Japan's position as the only established force in Eastern Asia. Japan will not relax chastisement of the Anti-Japanese administration (in China). Japan will co-operate with whatever administration comes into existence in China.

"My sympathies with the nationals of third powers whose lives and properties have suffered by hostilities. The birth of a new China will serve as a safeguard to foreign interests in the Far East."

Thus Nanking's fall is only the prelude of the China question and marks the beginning of real, protracted hostilities against China."

A million persons, mostly school children, paraded in Tokyo celebrating formal occupation of Nanking. The Mikado gave the army section of imperial headquarters a cask of wine in appreciation of its services.

Some Suggestions Accepted As Outlined by City Auditor

Detailed Report on Recommendations Given Council

MOTION PASSED

Recommended that the report be received and adopted and that steps be taken by the parties concerned to carry out commencing January 1st, all recommendations made or approved in the said report, and that the City Clerk notify the heads of the Departments concerned of the recommendations made thereon affecting the Department of which each is head.

A long recommendation was passed in Council Monday evening after a committee composed of Aldermen T. T. Wills, Laurie Lewis, C. H. Clapp and H. J. Armstrong had submitted a lengthy report on the recommendations contained in the individual report submitted to the council a; a recent date. The report in full follows:

To His Worship the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Belleville.

Your Special Committee appointed to consider the recommendations contained in the Auditor's Report of November 30th, 1937 and to report as to ways and means of giving effect to them, reports as follows:—

1.—Treasurer's Department

Your Committee is of the opinion that sub-ledgers as recommended by the Auditor should be set up to sub-divide Accounts Receivable, Public Works, and Debenture Debt and Interest and such other accounts as may from time to time be considered necessary by the Auditor and Treasurer and approved by the Council. Charges against Instruments for work or services rendered by the City should be shown on vouchers which your Committee proposes to deal with in more detail under the heading of the Public Works Department, but a copy of such voucher or voucher should be supplied to the Treasurer forthwith after any such work or services are rendered or arranged for.

Your Committee feels that the Auditor's recommendation as to a standard form of receipt to be made in duplicate and consecutively numbered should be used for all receipts issued by the Treasurer in order to assist in the accuracy of checking by the Auditor. It is proposed to deal with the various forms of licenses issued from the Treasurer's Office at the present time, whether or not such licenses include a receipt therein.

Your Committee does not see at the present time the necessity for changing the complete control of the books in the hands of the Auditor, but expects that the Auditor will in the course of his duties make such recommendations as he may see fit from time to time for the improvement of the book-keeping system, and that if the books are not kept in accordance with his desires, or in accordance with the instructions approved by the Council he will report this to; once to the Council.

2—City Clerk's Department

Your Committee is impressed with the desirability of having a central filing system in the Clerk's Office to contain records affecting the entire Corporation of the City. Without limiting the scope of this recommendation, it is considered that reports from the heads of departments, general correspondence, and papers and documents making final dispositions of matters and such other papers as may from time to time be thought necessary by the head of any department with the approval of the Auditor, should be included in this filing system. It does not appear that any substantial expense or the need for extra help will be entailed thereby.

It is also felt that a card index system for Council Minutes should be established at once, and that all matters dealt with thereby should be indexed under suitable headings in order to provide a ready means of locating dispositions of matters touched by previous meetings and Councils.

3—Public Works Department

Your Committee is of the opinion that no work should be undertaken for outside parties, unless specifically authorized by recommendation of the Council, without the obtaining of a work order signed by the party in respect of whose property the work is being done. This order should be prepared in triplicate by the Engineer or such other person as he may direct and a copy transferred handed to the Treasurer within two hours of its being obtained except that in cases of emergency work ordered after regular office hours, such work order shall be signed and left at the Treasurer's office for the Treasurer as soon as possible. The triplicate copy of such order shall be furnished to the party ordering. Upon completion of any work under a work order, any amended order or statement in triplicate should be made out by the Engineer's Department and the triplicate should be immediately handed to the Treasurer and any moneys then owing to the City in respect thereof should be entered in an Accounts Receivable ledger. The triplicate of this statement should be furnished to the party for whom the work has been done.

At the time of signing the work order herein referred to, and before any material or work or labour whatsoever is supplied, the person receiving such work shall make a deposit with the Treasurer of not less than forty per cent of the estimated cost of labour and materials as certified by the City Engineer, and the balance of the actual cost shall be paid by such party upon completion of the work, except that in the discretion of the Treasurer the time for payment may be extended over such period as he may be deemed fair and reasonable but not in any event to go beyond the fifteenth day of December in the year in which the work was done.

Your Committee approves the Auditor's recommendation that the Treasurer should keep a sub-ledger of Public Works in order to assist the division of expenditures of the Department as between the various projects, works, jobs, and other undertakings of the Department.

Your Committee also approves the recommendation that material for any Department (except miscellaneous small supplies required for immediate use on works) shall be purchased without a requisition approved in writing by the Chairman of the Department but is not prepared to the Treasurer to approve the direction of purchasing by the Chairman concerned solely.

Your Committee approves the recommendation that a stock record should be kept of all materials and tools purchased by the Public Works Department, such record to be kept in a book, the custody of which and the checking thereto being the responsibility of the City Engineer. The Engineer should see that an inventory is taken at least once a month of such tools and materials so that such inventory can be checked with the records of the Department in order to prevent any losses or shortages. Should any such loss or shortage should be made in the Department monthly in order to facilitate the issue and checking all tools and equipment issued to persons employed by the City, it is recommended that the Foreman of the Department be held responsible for all tools and equipment so issued.

Your Committee approves the Auditor's recommendation that a closer check should be provided of gasoline, oil, repairs and supplies used in connection with City trucks, and feels that this may best be done by the Auditor being requested and authorized to prepare such charts showing mileage and cost of operation for each truck and vehicle as he may see fit, and that he be empowered to insist that the information required thereto be furnished by the employees concerned. It was also felt that gasoline required by employees for use in private motor cars used in connection with City business should be obtained on requisition as hereinbefore provided.

4—Staff

Your Committee does not approve of the Auditor's recommendation that clerks and stenographers should be brought under one head as it does not consider the proposal practicable at the present time.

T. T. Wills,
Laurie Lewis,
C. H. Clapp,
H. J. Armstrong.

NEW GOVERNMENT

Meanwhile, it was said, the Japanese continued their "mopping up" operations.

Chinese sources admitted the Japanese occupied Pukow, terminus of Tientsin-Pukow Railway into North China across the Yangtze from Nanking. Chinese troops were reported to have withdrawn up a railway station at Pukow, about a mile north of Pukow.

While clouds of smoke shrouded the fallen city, a new provisional government for China—under the aegis of conquering Nippon — was formed at Peiping.

Created After Fall.

The guiding principles of the new regime, reported Domei (Japanese News Agency) with vigorous opposition to the harassed government of General Chiang Kai-Shek, suppression of Communism and cooperation with Japan and Manchukuo.

The new government was created after the fall of Nanking. The Japanese command for the Nanking campaign announced its troops completed occupation of General Chiang's former capital when the sun set yesterday on a day of street fighting.

Among the officials of the provisional regime were two former presidents of China, three premiers, five former finance ministers and four other one-time cabinet officers, the Japanese News Agency said.

May March Further.

The communique on the occupation of Nanking gave no word of Japanese spokesmen said they were without information concerning foreigners or foreign-owned property.

In a communique was a hint the Japanese high command would throw on into the heart of China: "Although Nanking has fallen, it is clear that anti-Japanese sentiments exist in China the sentiments of the Japanese people are that hostilities have just begun."

The Japanese reported their foe was in flight up the 25-mile valley of the Yangtze River and charged the Chinese retreated from their one-time capital, had fired many buildings in the city in carry-out of the "scorched earth" strategy of leaving nothing useful for the Japanese.

Chinese press reports from Hankow, one of the centres of the Chinese government about 300 miles further up the Yangtze from Nanking, declared Chiang had sent Japanese objectives said outer Mongolian authorities had arrived to confer with the general on plans for a war effort against the Japanese in North China.

Conquer 5 Provinces.

"The Japanese have invaded or conquered five North China provinces, Peiping, seat of the new Japanese-sponsored provisional government for China, is the capital of one of them Jehol, Suiyuan, Outer Mongolia, lying between Soviet Russia and Northern China, is under Japanese influence)

Chinese sources reported the Japanese lost 20,000 men in 200 miles south of Shanghai, would be the object of the next major Japanese campaign.

All communication from within Nanking ceased at 10 a.m. today when one of the Japanese aerial attack on the stricken city Panay, Navigators at Nanking had been using the Panay's wireless as the last link with a world separated from the city by the fighting.

The official Japanese announcement of the fall of Nanking said the end came after an intense five-day attack in which the army, cooperating with naval fliers, bombarded the Nanking inner-hard defenders, driving them northward through the city while the invading forces advanced from the southern and eastern sections.

The battle, bitterly contesting every foot of the advance, had turned numerous government buildings into small fortresses from which machine-guns and snipers' rifles chattled defiance to the Japanese.

GERMAN "BLUEBEARDS"

dancer Jean De Koven told police "It wasn't I who killed Leblond, but Roger Million."

The police asked me how to kill him," Weidmann said, adding that they had advised Million: "You only have to shoot him behind the ear. That will be enough."

At the time the 29-year-old German admitted killing an Alsatian woman, Mme. Gabrielle Keller. He implicated Million and Million's mistress, Mme. Deydier. In this crime, committed in the forest of Fontainebleau, Oct. 3.

They started out in the direction of Vichy but stopped on the Fontainebleau road not far from Barbizon to decide whether we should only rob Mme. Keller or kill her," he said.

He hirssely voted the "death sentence," Weidmann said, and then invited the woman to take a stroll in the woods. A shot behind the car was enough, he complacently confessed.

Stripping the body of a 1,300-franc money order (about $40), a gold ring and about 100 francs in change, they buried her in a shallow grave.

The Patay party had fled to Hankou to avoid Chinese-Japanese fighting on the river banks.

Sandri had represented the Tourist Association and the Italian press newspaper Stampa. Before coming to China he had covered wars in Spain and Ethiopia for Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo d'Italia of Milan.

No Word of Missing

There was no word of the 68 missing Chinese members of the crews of the Milan, Melania and Melping. Standard Oil Company boats destroyed in the Japanese attacks for which the Japanese navy has accepted full responsibility. It was believed, however, that most of them had been saved.

Names of the eight foreigners seriously wounded were not known here. Available information included names of 22 survivors, including Lieutenant Commander James Hugh Hughes, British naval attache; Anders and Jim Marshall, Colliers Magazine writers, all of whom were wounded.

F. Hayden Yiles of Roanoke, Va., arrived at Hankou with a slight injury.

Captain C. H. Carlson of the Melan was unaccounted for.

The Italian embassy said its Chinese Secretary, Albert Roh, was believed to have been aboard the Panay and had radioed last farewell from him.

Try to Locate Survivors

The United States cruiser Augusta received word that one of two Japanese planes which flew down to the scene of the incident was on its way back The Sea and the Japanese gunboat Hogei were expected to steam back from Nanking to the scene of the tragedy, locating survivors of the tragedy.

Efforts were under way to locate possible straggling survivors along the riverbanks. The Cabby received at that its plan was to bring survivors and dead to Shanghai with the aid of the Japanese embassy and the understanding of Japanese assurance for a safe passage down stream.

The more seriously wounded may be flown to Shanghai on board the Japanese planes, one of which carried doctors, nurses and medical supplies.

The spokesman for the Japanese navy, which has admitted full responsibility and expressed regrets for the incident, said enemies of staff officers on one of the planes would investigate all details of the tragedy.

tract with Quebec power companies.

On the power export question, both Premiers maintained silence but it was stated authoritatively the Quebec Premier had expressed willingness to meet Premier Hepburn in asking for authority to ship his province's surplus energy to the United States.

There was no announcement of the appointment of successors to the Rowell Commission submission. Most probable was the belief that this problem had been left open.

Member Retires

The forestry industry was debated, and it was understood the parliamentary Quebec policy that no new lumber mills may be started in the province until those now standing are operating The lumber industry, too, had been taken over by a few weeks before by Mr. Duplessis, as Minister of Lands and Forests, and Hon. Peter Heenan, who holds that portfolio in Ontario.

Mr. Heenan was present yesterday, with Attorney-General Gordon Conant, Highways Minister T. B. McQuesten and Mines Minister Paul Leduc. Quebec was represented by Agriculture Minister Hon. Dr. Irenee Vautrin Minister John Bourque and Hon. T. J. Coonan, Minister without portfolio.

NO FREEDOM IN RUSSIA TO-DAY

St. Louis, Dec. 14 (AP)—Father Frederic Siedenburg, S.J., Executive Secretary of the University of Detroit, said last night that Russians were better off under the Czars than they are today.

The University of Detroit Dean, speaking before the Faculty of St. Louis University, said that "while there was little freedom under the Czars, a Russian could at least leave his country whereas today he may not, and the government is paramount in industry, agriculture, education, literature and art."

BRITAIN

London, Dec. 14 (CP)—Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Yoshida today apologized to Foreign Secretary Eden for Japanese attacks on two British gunboats on the Yangtze river Sunday.

This was the second official apology in two days for the incident. A military attache having expressed regrets to the war office yesterday.

The ambassador said his government was not in full possession of the facts, but was actively pressing inquiries. The gunboats, the Ladybird and the Bee, were not seriously damaged.

Eden May Make Statement

Eden, in the apologies, Great Britain was understood to be preparing to dispatch a severe note to Tokyo and Mr. Eden is scheduled he would make a new statement to the House of Commons later in the day.

Indications grew today that the British government would look for President Roosevelt for leadership in the next move if protests to Japan against the bombardment of United States and British gunboats on the Yangtze river fail to gain full satisfaction.

Look To United States.

The view was expressed that the United States was "the more appropriate party because of the sinking of the Panay whereas the British gunboats Ladybird and Bee were fiberced attacks.

London newspapers gave prominence to the Roosevelt message to Emperor Hirohito but carried little or no information. Interest in Downing street. Editorials urged a solid Anglo-American front to deal with the matter.

It was understood Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Yoshida would call on Foreign Secretary Eden today to express regret at the sinking of the Ladybird and Bee on Sunday. The Japanese navy flies bombed the Panay.

A Japanese military attache's words in the war office yesterday on a similar mission.

Possible Steps to be Taken

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it was thought, might make a statement in the House of Commons this afternoon, following up Mr. Eden's terse announcement yesterday that the British Ambassador to Tokyo had "made the strongest protests."

Government leaders were believed to have under review steps which might be taken if Japan does not comply with requests of the Powers, indemnities and guarantees.

Lieut. - Commander Reginald Fletcher, Labor, said he intended to ask whether Mr. Chamberlain is satisfied that British forces at Hong Kong, the crown colony on the south China coast, are sufficient for defence of Hong Kong in view of the situation.

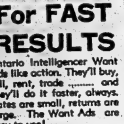
Commander Fletcher said also he would ask if the Prime Minister would consider the desirability of withdrawing capital ships to Far Eastern waters.

Eagle-U.S. Consultation

By George Hamblelen

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 14—(Cp Cable)—Consultation continues between the British and United States governments over the Far East.



In connection in Washington and London the situation has been examined and the next move discussed. But official denial is given reports of the likelihood of a joint Anglo-American naval demonstration against Japan or that any decision has been reached to recall the British Ambassador at Tokyo, Sir Robert Craigie.

At the close of the usual question hour in the House of Commons this afternoon, General Attlee, leader of the opposition, is expected to invite Foreign Secretary Eden to make a further statement on the situation.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 14—(AP)—Kalamazoo College students, "striking" because of the dismissal of Dr. Carey H. Gazong, Canadian born Economics professor, picketed campus buildings today.

The picketing lined back Dr. Sherwood Gates, Dean of men when he attempted to enter Bronson Hall today. Students not assigned picket duty held a dance, instead of slanderous classes.

Dr. Stewart Grant Cole, College president announced the dismissal of Dr. Gazong at a faculty meeting late yesterday, had made no formal statement today. One of the student leaders, said Dr. Cole told him Dr. Gazong was dismissed for "inefficiency"; because he had conducted classes improperly, and because he was not a native of the United States. Police Blotter

Minor break-ins and petty thieving confronted Provincial Police during the week-end and are being investigated. E. H. Potter, Jones Creek, reported the breaking and entering into his fish camp shack, immediately west of the Jones-Trent Canal on the Trent River. Two pairs of trousers, a shirt and a quantity of food were taken. Provincial Police authorities is attach the blame upon passing transients, who desired warm quarters.

William Grundy, North Park St., reported the theft of three chickens from his henhouse recently. "The birds were valuable ones and were being fattened for Christmas," Mr. Grundy informed the authorities. Four pride found in the snow near Mr. Grundy's henhouse were the only clues available, however.

Nineteen transients were afforded the warmth and security of the cell block last night, three from the wintry blasts that blew.

BURFORD REFERS TO EQUIPMENT

Says There is Much "Starved" Equipment on Highway

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—At the Chevrier Royal Transportation Commission today Mr. Justice Chevrier voiced protest against long hours by truck drivers.

"The Commission chairman said: there must be an end to this burning of human energy. I don't think it is a good thing to have men working on our highways so long hours. That is what I am concerned about."

Mr. Burford had testified some of his drivers on the Picton-Ottawa run worked 81 hours a week for several consecutive weeks during the fruit season but did it voluntarily because they were paid by the round trip.

"If some people cannot protect themselves, laws may be necessary to do so," Mr. Justice Chevrier said.

Under cross-examination, Burford said there was considerable "starved" equipment on the highways and advocated that the standard of equipment be raised by all operators.

Counsels' questions disclosed that Burford went to Picton in 1922 and that he had established himself in the motor transport business later. He now owns seven trucks and a Ford-on waredistributing 150 tons of canned goods. Some of his drivers have been with him for 12 years and are "quite satisfied with wages and conditions."

Drivers Called in Conference

Burford said that last year he called his drivers into a conference about wages. Three asked to be paid by the week, two at $20 a week and the other at $18. Their request was granted. Others asked for the trip-basis wage and this request was also granted. "I have never had a complaint from a driver," witness said.

THE ACCORDIAN BAND

Sixty-six accordian bands, numbering more than 1,000 players, came from all parts of England and Wales to contest at Central Hall, Westminster.

Five-year-old Yvonne Coleman is the youngest competitor.

She has had a special accordian made for her, costing £10 besides.

The youngest soloist was Charles Bishop, aged 11, who represented Wiltshire and Swindon.

For the first time, it is believed, in the history of St. Paul's Cathedral, hand-bell music was played there in celebration of the 900th anniversary of the Ancient Society of College Youths.

The anniversary dinner was attended by the Lord Mayor of London, Rt. Hon. Sir Percy Bradfield, the Duke of Argyll, who is himself a College Youth, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Bishop of London, and the Dean of St. Paul's.

SECRET OF AGE

"What is the secret of longevity of the common parrot, living to the age well over eighty years? Or of the tortoise, which is outside the garden of the Governor of Cape Town has lived there for over 150 years and there is every indication that it will live for many years before that. In the Galapagos Islands we have evidence of these creatures living to 200 years of age. Even the Romans kept eels alive in an artificial pool for more than 80 years. Salmon live up to the ripe old age of 100 years, and 150 years, while pike often live 200 years. More recently it has been claimed that the age of fish can be ascertained exactly by counting the annual rings of the otoliths. In the case of birds, many of the parsonne order, tiny creatures, live for twenty years and many of the picarian order, small birds, live for eighteen. Gulls live to the age of 40, ducks and geese to 50, and falcons and eagles for 100 years. Even the ducklalk, whose habitat is Central Asia, indeed a years sva, is said to reach the great old age of 150 years.

"Birds is actually known of the life span of snakes and lizards, but they probably live to a great age. Crocodiles, alligators, caymans, grow slowly and live long. Some of the sacred crocodiles of India are believed to be more than 100 years of age, often reaching the age of 60 without signs of senescence. In the case of Galacaos, sedimentary

A Belleville commercial traveller, J. E. Brouse, representing the Penberton Biscuit Company, who remained unaware of the fire in the city, was an occupant in the hotel at the time. He escaped only with the clothes on his back, all of his personal belongings being lost with the fire. He had a night, but have lost all my clothes. Nearby Residence Burned

The Bancroft volunteer fire department quickly battled the roaring inferno, pressing into service the modern pumper recently purchased by the town. Flames had gained more than a foothold before it was discovered. Only the fact that there was no wind blowing, it being a dead calm and hovering around the zero point, prevented the entire six sides of the street from sharing the same fate as the hotel.

Mr. Peter Ryan, owner of the Bancroft Times contacted the Ontario Intelligencer today.

With very little wind blowing the only other damage done was to the residence of Mrs. W. J. George whose home was badly scorched when the intense heat emanated from the fire. All of the household goods in Mrs. George's home were removed to safety, however, but the home was saved from destruction by the prompt work of the fire department at hand.

The building was partially covered with insurance carried by the Hamilton Brothers Agency. It is carried $6,000.00 insurance on the building and contents, but we believe the Queen's Hotel in itself was valued at $10,000.00," stated Insurance Agent today. The only articles salvaged were two show cases and a cash register.

Improved Storage Reduces Loss of Tools from Theft

New systems of checking, better facilities for storage and closer supervision in distribution have all tended during the past year or so to reduce greatly the essentially to tools used by employees of the local department of public works.

In past years, with construction going on in various sections of the city on two or more jobs of different nature, annual tool loss assumed alarming proportions. Picks, shovels, scoops and various other tools daily were misplaced on the unsing list with consequent annual appropriation made to cover the replacement. Lately this loss has been reduced to a minimum.

"We are able to keep closer watch over them because we have better facilities for checking and caring for them," it is reported at the office of city engineer. "Today when we issue tools for work we make out a requisition and check them in with the hours or time in which he is employed. Each man is personally is the red lanterns we are obliged to place on work left unattended at night. People will steal them and we can't do much about it."

Tools lost are not lost alone in the majority of cases, however, it simply lost at work," it was stated.

MISSING COUPLE MASQUERADING

Using Names Taken From New York Tomb-stones

Washington, Dec. 15.—(AP)— An international mystery confronted the United States government today after State Department agents said that an "American" couple who vanished in Moscow recently were masquerading under names evidently taken from New York tombstones.

American passports were issued to "Donald Louis Robinson" and "Ruth Norma Robinson" April 6, 1933, the Department said, but birth certificates used to obtain the passports were those of children who died years ago.

Today, what began as the mystery of two Americans who disappeared from a Russian hotel deepened into an international enigma.

As Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, the couple was said to have arrived in Moscow Nov. 8 to witness the celebration of the 20th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. The interest of the American Embassy there was aroused when "Mrs. Robinson" told callers last week that her husband had been taken to a hospital Dec. 3 suffering from pneumonia but that she did not know the name of the institution. On the next day, acquaintances found that she too had disappeared from the hotel without a trace.

The embassy sought the aid of the Soviet Foreign Office in locating the couple but received no information concerning them.

No Mandate Given Gov't On Power Pacts Says Macaulay

Refers to Election Issue of Possible Power Shortage

MACAULAY FETED

Toronto, Dec. 15—(CP)—Leopold Macaulay, Ontario Conservative House Leader, addressed a luncheon in his honor, said today he had information Premier Mitchell Hepburn denies, that his representatives were negotiating the terms of the agreements with the power companies," before the general election Oct. 6.

Mr. Macaulay said Premier Hepburn had led people to believe during the campaign that never would the 1929 contracts between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the Quebec companies be declared null by the legislature, he renewed.

Challenges Hepburn

"I challenge Mr. Hepburn to deny that he was advised before the election, and when he was pooling the power shortage and saving, Hon. Earl Rowe's statements of an impending power shortage were a deliberate lie for office, that at that very time Mr. Hepburn had reports showing there was an impending power shortage," he said.

"Therefore, he not only suppressed the information as to the power situation, but falsified it by making statements directly to the opposite of his available information. We have further information that prior to the election, Mr. Hepburn or his representatives were negotiating the terms of the agreements with the Quebec companies.

"Back to Montreal"

"Therefore, instead of telling the people his policy was 'back to Niagara' he should have told them that he was already on his way 'back to Montreal.' That would have been dealing with the electorate candidly.

4 Succeed in Escaping As Benzol Unit Explodes In Works at Hamilton

Only Seven Out of 3,000 Employees in Building

FIRE CONTROLLED

Firemen Prevent Flames From Spreading to Storage Tank

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 15—(CP)— An explosion in the benzol unit of the great Steel Company of Canada plant here killed three workmen today shortly after the day shift reported for work. Bodies of the three were recovered.

Only seven of the plant's 3,000 employees were in the benzol building when the explosion occurred in a section where distillation retorts were located. At available city firemen fought the subsequent flames more than two hours, preventing fire from reaching a benzol storage tank.

One Victim Identified

One of the bodies was identified as that of James Osborne, an employee in the benzol department. The other two were not identified immediately, but earlier it was reported Barney Michelson, assistant foreman, and Primo Stipcich, truck driver, were missing but Osborne.

One of the mutilated bodies was found outside the building, force of the blast having hurled him through a window and over the railway. Other structure, 91 feet high and built of steel and brick, the other two bodies were found when the fire was under control.

Benzol Flow Diverted

When flames shot up from manholes on the lines carrying benzol to the wrecked building to other parts of the plant, the flow of benzol was diverted through the sewer into Hamilton harbor. Firemen checked the spread of fire in the lines by throwing sand down the manholes.

Situated in northeast Hamilton, several hundred yards from the nearest houses, the steel plant is one of the largest in the empire. While firemen worked in terrific heat, the neighborhood was cleared by police who kept spectators at a safe distance.

A truck from Brantford, Ont., H. Whitely, was loading coke on the track nearby when the explosion occurred.

Explosion Described

"There was a big 'crack.' Pelated Whitely. "The sky lit up. Then another 'crack' and a pall of smoke. I saw three men run out, when the building burst into flames."

The building was filled with billows of black smoke and quickly-spreading flames. Firemen believed at first could not be prevented from reaching a big benzol storage tank. It was two hours after the blast before they conceded the danger of a further explosion was past.

Once more Sandra told herself she must attend to that cut on his head. Vaguely she understood that the little cruiser was doomed, and they with it; but she could not just let there beside her, waiting for the moment when the frail craft could no longer withstand the battering of the racing sea. To do that would be to lose her nerve.

She saw Bryant's hands drop at last. Quickly she went to him. He arm circled her shoulders. "You do love me—just a little Sandra?" she thought. "What difference can one life make now—or a doesn't? And nodded slowly.

"Sandra—sweet!"

His face was just above her own. His breath, hot on her cheek when she suddenly pulled away from him and made her way to the galley and stood there staring up at the closed hatch. And she thought that odd sound that had mingled with the wail of the wind a moment ago—

She did not see Bryant rise from the bunk and start toward her. She heard something fall behind her and felt a thin spray across her shoulders. She pulled her eyes from the hatch and looked back—saw Bryant lying face down in the black water.

"Bryant,...!" She pulled him over on his back. "Bryant—speak to me!"

Somehow she got him back on the bunk. She thrust a hand under the oilskin, felt the labored movement of his chest. Not knowing what else to do, she rubbed his hands vigorously. His face had been submerged only a moment; she doubted he had taken enough water into his lungs to matter.

Once more the whining wind brought that scraping like the muffled cry of a human voice. She sank to her knees in the narrow space between the two bunks and sat back on her heels. The surging water lunged and pushed, splashed on one thigh, then the other; but she was not even remotely conscious that she was sitting in six inches of trapped brine.

Something above the deck directly over her head! She sat up, eyes wide and lifted high. There was no possibility of a trick of the imagination in that dull thud. She had heard it, definitely.

A long, reptile-like object was writhing across the deck when at last she managed to work the hatch open. Suddenly she realized it was the loop-end of a receding line. But too late, for in a moment it had gone over the side.... Then her face came up and she saw, with incredulous eyes, the white phantom riding the heavy of a hundred feet away.

Fannie Roberts sat on a corner of Matt Stanley's desk and drummed nervously with her heels. Matt was pacing the floor.

"All you think about," Fannie was saying, "is getting a headline for your no good rag. Even now you're not giving a hoot—whether Sandra lives or dies."

Matt halted, facing her but not really seeing her. "There's a lot more about their starting for Block Island," he said. "And they didn't get there."

"All right," Fannie said, shortly, "so what?"

"Of course," Matt went on, hardly aware that she had spoken, "they may have turned back and landed somewhere on the Connecticut shore, in the channel—fifty to one they didn't."

Fannie slid from the desk, eyes bulging. "Matt—you don't mean—"

"Take it easy," he said, gruffly. "You know exactly as much as I do, Fannie." And then he saw the tears rolling down her cheeks and forgetting was the hard-boiled managing editor of The Flash, he put his arms around her and pulled her head down to his shoulder. "Listen, Fannie—don't be a sottie. Things like this happen—and they do not: have newspapers if they didn't.

Fannie made no effort to draw away from him, but she said in a high wail, "it's your fault. You had no business letting her go—you big tomato!"

"That's better," Matt said, grinning. "You know, you're pretty sweet, Fannie. I used to say there wasn't a woman in the world I'd give a tumble, but—" He turned his eye toward the door, bent down quickly and touched his lips to her cheek.

Fannie leaned back in his arms and studied his face with unbelieving eyes. "For the love of mike, I believe you do love a girl!" The door was opening and Matt's sharp ears caught the hurried movement of the reporter coming into the room, but Fannie did not. She put her head around the corner. Then she his head down and pressed her lips to his. Grinning, releasing him at last: "It's simple when you know how—and I've."

"Sorry to interrupt," the reporter said, trying very hard not to grin, "but I know you'll want to see this."

Fannie watched the color rising in Matt's face and suddenly burst into laughter. "He's never been kissed before," she said to the reporter. "Breathe."

Bowling, Matt took the cupcloate printer copy and read the brief bulletin. Then he shoved it back to the reporter. "Wipe that grin off before I knock it off," he said.

The reporter went out, still grinning. Presently there was a shout of laughter in the city room. Matt jumped to his feet and started toward the door, but Fannie stopped him.

"Don't be a sottie, Matt. I think you're pretty sweet, and they may as well know it now as later."

Matt looked down on her and his eyes went hard, but after a moment he went back to his desk and sat down. Presently he said, "The Coast Guard cutter Waldeman put out from New London half an hour ago to search for Wilson's boat. Sandra's brother and Ronny Mackallister, the radio announcer, were on board."

"Is that the message the grinning hyena just brought in?"

"Yes." A fresh flush spread in Matt's face. "What a ribbing he would take when he went in the city room again! Deliberately he brought his thoughts back to Fannie. Brooks. He said, "I forgot had to put on a show, she might have waited until she'd cleared up that divorce story."

Fannie was sitting in a chair at his left, her still-blue hands folded over the top rung of the chair. She was carefully folding a piece of copy paper. She did not look at him.

"What girl, what show, what di'vorce story?" She pressed down the last fold of a paper glider, pulled its wings up and sent it sailing across the room. "You wouldn't be talking about Sandra, would you?"

Matt grunted. His eyes had followed the course of the glider, but now he looked at Fannie. "She didn't like that assignment a little bit and I've got a notion she went with Wilson to get away from it." He paused, then, "I'm sure of it. And this is all about."

"Nothing you'd be interested in," Matt said, "I got up the wife of one of her father's law partners was about to sue for divorce and I told Sandra to find out who was likely to be named for correspondent."

Fannie was busy making another glider, but now she looked up. "You've got a fine nerve, putting her on the trail of a woman who probably known all her life. I can't figure you out sometimes, Matt." She dropped her new glider into folding again.

"I don't if she gives a darn about the wife. She's supposed to be plenty queer. And for all his money and power, Jim Brooks isn't any too popular. You've heard of him—everybody in New York has—Ancell—Anthony Ancell."

Fannie's fingers as she spoke were and the blood drained from her face, but her eyes continued to stare at the folded paper. "He did—is going to divorce him?" she said. "And name a correspondent?"

"Say—what's the idea of the funny voice? You haven't been running around with the big boy friend, have you?" He laughed, sadly.

At last Fannie's eyes came up to his. They were grave and troubled. "You can't give Sandra an assignment like that, Matt. You've got to expect her to mix up with the divorce—"

"No?" Matt said, grinning. "Say, if I let you run the job, you'll be so busy looking after Sandra, there wouldn't be anything to print."

Fannie didn't answer. She rose and crossed the room to stand before the wide window. Everything in the street below was blurred, partly because of the rain cascading down the glass of course, but partly because of the tears welling in her eyes.

Fifty-five minutes' out of New London, the Coast Guard cutter Waldeman's look-out sighted a white phantom in the gray pall of rain and having ascertained that it was the Penniwomen, the private yacht of John R. Crozer of New York City—he reported to the cutter's captain and there followed a prolonged exchange of signals and speaking and scarcely shouted through long dripping megaphones. The Penniwomen then proceeded toward New London and the Waldeman came around and followed in the Penniwomen's wake.

"Well," said the cutter's captain to David, "what takes care of that. The cruiser's on the bottom, but your sister is tucked away in a stateroom on that floating rita."

David and Ronny had heard the boarding party between the two craft. Neither had spoken. Neither spoke now, though David nodded as the captain put a hand on his shoulder and stalked off across the rain-washed deck.

IN THE ORIENT

Events in Europe have for the moment lessened in public attention as the progress of the war in the East proceeds. The past few days have seen a culmination of events, the outcome of the Japanese war upon China, which have made many take a very serious view of the conflict there raging. Many incidents which might have started a war in such days as 1914 have occurred. Such are the bombing of foreign vessels in Chinese waters and the latest is the sinking of the U.S. gunboat Panay and the firing on other craft for which Japan has assumed responsibility and offered apologies.

In the past couple of years the world has witnessed the occurrence of unusual events and is living in a grave anxiety and in a feeling of insecurity. Tension has been marked particularly in the past two years during the Ethiopian campaign, then with the war in Spain, then in the attacks on shipping in the Mediterranean and latterly in the struggle in the East, full implication of which is known only to those statesmen who are concerned.

The Spanish civil war seemed to be settling down and in attracting much less attention after so many efforts to keep it within bounds. No such sign is to be seen in the Far East where one of the greatest tragedies in history is being enacted.

Why are these events taking place in the Far East? The mombings are so unusual as to make people wonder what the future holds.

TALKING OF THE STORM

Those who like to recall the good old winters when snowbanks were higher and snows were deeper have enough present day weather to talk about in preference to the old stories. Anyway the people who live in Shannonville have enough to talk about since they were elevated to public notice across the country when one of the greatest blockades of traffic in its history occurred. Shannonville, hospitable place at any time, was at its best when it entertained day and night so large a company of travellers by the way, whose cars and transports had halted.

That Shannonville's weather story is one that will rest for a while and will probably be handed on for years and years.

But these tie-ups are not what they might be, if there were no radio and no modern mechanism like the telephone. In spite of a blockade the people have just a new experience, the residents have visitors from here and there and everywhere and the visitors meet the residents.

VATERLAND-LEVIATHAN

After a varied career the Vaterland, later known as the Leviathan, will go to the scrapyard. She has been purchased by British junkyards. The German-built ship on her first trip to New York was confiscated in New York by the United States on July 27th, 1917. After interning she was used to carry troops and then stood idle as the Germans on the western front. She was later used for merchant marine and has been laid up for some years. Under another flag, the British, she will cross the Atlantic again, this time on her last voyage. Probably some of her steel will go into rearmament.

Ships have short lives in these days. This craft is only twenty-three years old and is one of the oldest in use. Modern ships pass in a few years, so great are the mechanical strides due to new inventions. It was not so with the old sailing ships, which braved storm and yet came through to last longer.

The old Vaterland terminated in its career across the entire tragic period of modern history. It was built in the days when Germany was a great power and stood high in world affairs, when nations did not suspect her as they did later and as they have ever since in these days of rearmament. The Vaterland was commissioned in the piping days of peace before the war sounded in 1914. She ran into the war, was seized, was used to fight the home of her manufacture, and finally will end in a junkyard of the land which was mainly instrumental in the defeat of Germany after being used for years by the people of that other land, the United States who helped to bring Germany to its knees.

No enjoyment is transitory; the impression which it leaves is lasting, and what is done with diligence and toil imparts to the spectator a secret force, of which once cannot say how far the effect may reach.—Goethe.

CLIMBING HILLS

There's always been
Something symbolic about climbing hills.
You plod along one slow step after the other,
And by and by you get to where you're going,
(Provided you've kept at it long enough!)
But here's the thing that's always puzzled me—
Whether the better plan, all things considered,
Is to fix the eyes on some far, shining peak,
And struggle up towards it, day after day,
Not minding stones and thorns—or just to look
One single step ahead, and be surprised
How soon you've got there!

SCARLET O'HARA WAS THE DAUGHTER OF A HARD RIDING, HARD DRINKING VERY LOVABLE OLD CHAP

who came a cropper when his pet jumper failed to negotiate a particularly difficult jump which only John Barleycorn would try. Scarlet entered many people's lives through Margaret Mitchell's thrilling story of the old South and the decline and fall of the aristocracy and personal slavery. Another O'Hara is now making the Front Page because he eased his turbulent spirit through the columns of his newspaper. O'Hara was a young man going places, successful, making money and plenty of friends. He established a racetrack and made a pot of money—then he made a serious mistake, he started a newspaper in Providence, Rhode Island, and thought like a lot of other people that he could make money out of that, thought he had a gold mine when he saw the newspapers falling from the press all neatly folded and ink-smelly like snow flakes in a winter storm looking like a shower of pennies from heaven, each paper a potential penny in the till. His newspaper made him trouble with the politicians and the politicians made trouble with his race track—in fact they closed it and put a military guard over the gates to keep the public out. At long last he decided the newspaper was a losing proposition, asked the Judge for a receiver, was granted one and then wrote a final and devastating blast at all his enemies before leaving his beloved sanctum. The receiver detected the editorial blast, stopped the press and killed the editorial. However, some papers escaped the slaughter and every correspondent in the city wired the editorial in the form of a newspaper. Result every leading newspaper in the United States ran the story next day with the banned editorial and O'Hara banned got more publicity than he could ever have hoped for if the editorial had been permitted to appear as is. Moral seems to be that anything banned immediately becomes valuable, and any attempt to muzzle the press in these days of enlightenment is immediately met with resistance and defeated. The O'Hara's have it.

CHRISTMAS IN THE PENITENTIARY

is not a very pleasant thought, and this was brought forcibly to public attention recently by a human interest story on the Front Page of the Kingston Whig Standard relating the fact of a visit received by an inmate from his wife, mother, and infant daughter whom he had never seen. The wife and mother are from Toronto and visit the prisoner regularly, also visiting Ottawa where they are pleading for his pardon. Additional interest was given the story by the fact that the wife, mother and babe left Toronto to hitch-hike their way to Kingston just before the big storm last week. They made slow progress and were detained overnight at Belleville and other places, finally reaching Kingston with their small stock of money exhausted, and a long hitch-hike back to Toronto facing them in zero weather. It would seem that there is a sermon in devotion, courage and sacrifice in this true story that deserves the sympathy and assistance of those who are able to smooth some of the hard places which this family find themselves in.

He who can at all times sacrifice pleasure to duty approaches sublimity.—Lavator.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"She's getting in practice for his christening!"

Christmas Debt to Nature

"So hallowed and so gracious is the time" that the last month of the old year must always be associated with the season of good will, and that precious thing called home is the most powerful laodstone which draws the wanderer's heart from the far farther end of the earth, writes E.W. Hart, Division of Botany, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

It is the spirit of Christmas, Saint Nicholas or Santa Claus that fills the home of all with good things, both spiritual and material.

Mr. Frank Church once exclaimed: "Not believe in Santa Claus! Never as well not believe in fairies. Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives for ever!"

o o o

Children will certainly agree with Mr. Church when, at this most gracious season the spirit of Saint Nicholas (their patron) loads them with gifts. Most Christmas presents are both pleasing to adults. Among these will be the indispensable box of candy composed mostly of sweets made with sugar and flavored with materials of vegetable origin, such as chocolate. Sugar can be extracted from the sugar-cane (one of the grasses), from the beet, from the maple tree or from beetroots. Chocolate is a preparation of the seeds of the cocoa tree which only grows in hot countries such as tropical America and the West Indies. It is interesting to know that its first botanical name, Theobroma, means "Food for the Gods". Another vegetable flavoring material is the cocoa-nut, which grows on a great palm tree. It is no relation of the chocolate-nuts, which belong to the same family as the dale, which also finds a place in the Christmas candy box.

The cocoa-nut palm is one of the wonders of the world because every part is said to be useful to man either to clothe, feed or shelter him. The nut furnishes milk; the young grass leaves are eaten like cabbage. A wine is made from local producers of the flowers. The sap supplies sugar. Vessels and utensils are made of the nut-shells. The wood is used for making dwellings. The leaves of the dead palm form the roof or they may be made into umbrellas. Mats and mats are woven out of the fibres of the leaves, and the leaves sewn together make sails for ships. The fibre also makes rope and cordage. The oil expressed from the fresh kernel is used for the seasoning of food and also for illumination.

The date-palm, which grows to a height of 80 feet and more and is surmounted by feathery fronds, is the symbol of elegance and grace. Its fruit, known as a favorite food for women's name, "Tamar". The date is common in Palestine. As Bethlehem is only about five miles south of Jerusalem, it probably flourished there at the time Christmas Day. Many places are named from its abundance; e.g. Jericho "The City of Palms", Hazazon-Tamar, by the Dead Sea, Baal-Tamar, near Gibeah, etc.

Providence, through the medium of plants, supplies not only the Christmas gifts, but loads the dinner table with delectable fruits and vegetables. The after-dinner cup of coffee is made from the seeds of the coffee tree that belongs to the same family as the familiar bedstraws or Galiums, one of which is appropriately associated with Christmas. It is the Galium verum or Lady's Bedstraw—because of the legend that it was plaited in the hay on which the Mother of Christ rested. It is therefore called Our Lady's Bedstraw or Ladies' Bedstraw. In parts of Eastern and Western Canada this plant is a beautiful golden ornament where its showy sprays of tiny yellow cruciform flowers bloom all the summer.

Gratitude and thanksgiving for the beneficence of festal seasons are the time-honored and gracious duties of an appreciative world. Two hundred years before the first Christmas, Aeschylus, a Greek poet whose religious feeling was probably stimulated by the solemn services of the Eleusinian Mysteries, expressed the deepest and purest element of religion, said: "For those things it is meet to give forgods thank-offerings long-enduring." Indeed, as Aeschylus knew, the centuries later he might have been profoundly stirred by the seraphic hymn, "Gloria in excelsis Deo!"

Royalty and Christmas

About this time of year many little girls are secretly at work with much laughter and love, making Christmas presents for father and dad, grandma and the rest of the family. It may add zest to their labor to know that the two royal princesses of Great Britain, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, are doing exactly the same thing.

The time may come when the silken princess, under the magic title of Queen Elizabeth, will revive for England "the spacious days of good Queen Bess" and "the spirit of Elabet," as she has been called since her babyhood, She is now 11, being born on 21 April, Princess Margaret is only 7, with a somewhat undignified daughter whom he had never seen. The wife and mother are from Toronto and visit the prisoner regularly, also visiting Ottawa where they are pleading for his pardon. Additional interest was given the story by the fact that the wife, mother and babe left Toronto to hitch-hike their way to Kingston just before the big storm last week. They made slow progress and were detained overnight at Belleville and other places, finally reaching Kingston with their small stock of money exhausted, and a long hitch-hike back to Toronto facing them in zero weather. It would seem that there is a sermon in devotion, courage and sacrifice in this true story that deserves the sympathy and assistance of those who are able to smooth some of the hard places which this family find themselves in.

That Body of Yours

By James H. Barton, M.D.

THE FINDING OF SUGAR IN THE URINE DOESN'T ALWAYS MEAN DIABETES

A patient called on a physician and asked that he examine a sample or urine which he brought in a four ounce bottle. The physician found a considerable amount of sugar in the urine and telephoned the patient to call again. The patient passed some urine to find the following week and then again two weeks later showed the urine to be clear of sugar.

Now the patient may have had a little sugar in his urine the first time or the bottle in which he carried the first lot of urine may have had some medicine containing a small amount of sugar before the urine was put on a diabetic diet or was given injections in insulin.

Dr. J. L. Wade in Proceedings of Staff Meetings, Mayo Clinic, calls attention to the harm that is done to individuals in whom a small amount of sugar is the "normal" condition, and the living on a diabetic diet and other forms of treatment is cast of weight, tiredness, nervousness and insulin "reaction".

When there is this small amount of sugar in the urine—renal glycosuria—the urine only contains a little sugar in the urine, but is never in continuous type, in which all specimens of urine contain sugar, as a specific kidney in which the sugar in the urine occurs only after eating a large amount of sugar foods.

The thought then is that this small amount of sugar in the urine is not common, and runs in some families. It is not a disease, there is no disturbances in the body and does not predispose or bring on diabetes. It is a benign variety of the type of sugar in the urine, only one case later developed diabetes, which is not more than 1% of those who have it and where there is no sugar in the urine.

We do not let the finding of a little sugar in the urine upset you. Don't change your diet, don't be afraid for sugar and also the amount of sugar in the food.

PIE FOR BREAKFAST

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Times reports that students at Shelton High School in Connecticut, according to the principal, have the school football team pie served to the all-pie men." A most extenuating circumstance indeed!

It wasn't so long ago that some of the New York City subways found that the eating of pie bar declined that the eating of pie bar declined when the nickel fare went to the dime and breakfast fare must be the reason for the present inferiority of the confectionery.

I can well recall with what relish I, as a boy, would eat the pies of the ovens New England Winters on at least two generous portions of pie—apple pie, mince pie, pumpkin pie—along with a hearty helping of eggs and ham, bacon and sausage, or fee. At times there was even dried fish, and brandy in the cup—now I know who liked it, on top of grilled bacon and black coffee.

Life in the protected confines of city existence does not allow me to indulge in such a breakfast myself, but no doubt there must be many who can still eat pie—now for the sake of the manner dear to one's memory.

Arthur Ellenberg.

RABBIT DRESSED UP

"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," has been paraphrased to read "A rabbit by any other name would be a luxurious fur coat or neck piece," Mayo Clinic, in the conclusion reached by the American Medical Association Council on matter of information to the public publishes a list of more than 60 names under which rabbit and rabbit and hare pelts find their way into the market. Certainly some high-sounding names as Belgic White Fox, Chinchillette, Mendoza Beaver and Polar Seal, for instance, will be found a rabbit or hare skin, says the Institute. Belgic White Fox is nothing more than natural rabbit, or white rabbit. Chinchillette is chinchilla-dyed rabbit. When the pelt of the rabbit is sheared and then dyed, it is called Mendoza Beaver and Polar Seal skin comes not from the Polar brand of the circus and stage struck family, but is made from the fur of the seal, and is to resemble the skin of a northern fish eater." "Rabbit pelts, after different treatments and under various other names find their way into the market in imitation fur, leopard, lion, tiger, ocelot, jaguar, mink, muskrat, and squirrel."—Ontario Department Game Fisheries.

COLD ENOUGH

Cold weather records tumbled before the world's official cold record. It was registered at Verkhoyansk, in Siberia, on January 15, 1885. That thermometer sank 90.4 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

Four of the convicts who overpowered J. Olin Sanders, captain of the Columbia state penitentiary prison guards, held him prisoner for three hours, and then stabbed him to death as Gov. Olin Johnston pleaded for them to surrender, are shown inert on the ground after they were routed from the barricaded captain's office by tear gas and subdued as they rushed out. A sullen crowd of guards and spectators look on. The state penitentiary is at Columbia, South Carolina.

Mrs. C. D. Lazier, who is spending some time in Toronto, was home for a few days recently.

The Rev. H. R. Hayes preached anniversary sermons at Foxboro on Sunday last.

Miss Jamie Fleming, Cedar St., is visiting her daughter in Rochester, N.Y.

The heavy fall of snow on Saturday last had the effect of blocking the channel at the mouth of the river and in consequence the water rose to an unusual height. Many cellars in stores on the west side of Front street were flooded and necessitated the hasty removal of goods. Little damage resulted.

Jack Marks, an old Belleville boy, who is now playing hockey in Pittsburg, is slated for left wing on Stanford's hockey team. It is likely that he will be landed within a few days.

Lionel Stander, Chester Morris and Fay Wray starred in "They Met in a Taxi" at the Capitol today and Thursday only.

Mr. Frank Paisley received a letter yesterday from his cousin, Charlie Foster, in which it was stated that he would sail from London for Singapore on the 14th inst.

The country roads, especially where not gravelled, are in a frightful condition, but none of them can compare with some of the streets in this city.

Mr. Charles Dickens has donated one of the most attractive windows in the Gough Clothing store that has been seen in this city for years. Hundreds of people stop to admire it.

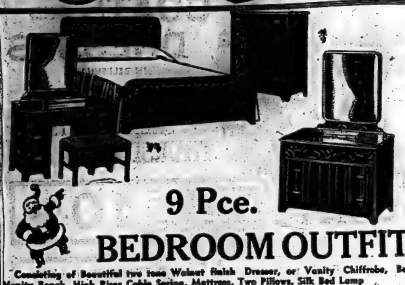
The street crossings are again in a deplorable condition.

Shop windows in stores on Front street are in holiday attire and attract considerable attention.



It is now time the Water Works Company replaced the plank street crossings which were torn up by them when putting down pipes. The weather has been exceedingly mild for the past ten days; much like spring weather.

The water works pumps are set up and the boilers were steamed up yesterday for the first time. The galleries will be pumped next first and it is likely that the pipes will be flushed early next week.

Facial Mask Beneficial To Skin

Astrid Always
No flaws in complexion.

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

"SOME TIME ago you spoke of the benefits of an almond meal and milk paste for the face. Mother says that she's heard of another almond meal face mask that possesses greater bleaching properties than the one you spoke of, but she doesn't recall what ingredients are used in it. Do you know what mask it is that she is referring to?

"FRANCES."

The mask to which your mother refers is probably the almond meal, egg and lemon juice mask. Mix a beaten egg with a cupful of almond meal, and add enough lemon juice to the mixture to make it a smooth paste. Then cleanse your face and neck thoroughly, smooth a bit of theme cream around your eyes and mouth, and apply the paste. Allow the mask to remain on the face until it is thoroughly dry, taking care that you do not crack it.

When removing the mask, use plenty of hot water and a soft cloth, and avoid rubbing the skin roughly. If your skin is normally dry, it is advisable to apply a coating of cold cream to the face and neck after the mask has been removed. The oily skin, however, generally has no need of such lubrication after the use of this face mask.

"My wrists are very thin and bony. I'd like to rid them of that scrawny appearance. What would you advise me to do?

"ENNA."

Coons butter, a product of the oil of the Theobroma tree, is used for fattening purposes. Massage your wrists with warmed cocoa butter nightly before retiring. This will help to fatten the tissues, and round out the wrist contours. Also, practice the following exercises vigorously every day:

Stand erect, arms extended forward at shoulder level. Flap the hands vigorously up and down from the wrists.

Stand erect hands hanging limply at the sides. Then stiffen the arms and rotate the hands at the wrists, describing wide circles with them.

Stand erect, arms extending forward at shoulder level. Using the left hand, pull the fingers of the right hand as far back towards the wrist as you can. Then reverse the exercise.

Present Gifts to Foxboro Couple

Foxboro Community held a shower on Tuesday, December 7th, at the home of Mr. Jos. Hollinger in honour of his son and bride, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hollinger. About one hundred were present.

Mr. Earl Hord was chairman and the popular couple were presented with a lovely occasional chair, end table, and an electric lamp, also a few other small gifts.

Miss Eleanor Carr read an address in their honor. Miss Marie Bardell gave a reading entitled "Oh, Your Foolish". Earl Bird gave the toast and Harry Dafoe responded. About ten o'clock lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

The address:

Foxboro, Ont.

Dear Mac and Bernard:

We your friends and neighbours have gathered here tonight to wish you a happy wedded life. We hope it is not as stormy as tonight.

We have known you Bernard since you were a small boy and found you always willing to do your part at all times. Although you have been from our midst for a few years we could not let this most important occasion in your life pass without showing our esteem and extending our best wishes to you and your bride. We certainly congratulate you Bernard on your choice of a life partner and wish you much happiness.

You kiss we do not know as well but hope to be better acquainted soon. We are glad you and Bernard are not going to live far away, and hope to have you often with us.

We now ask you to please accept these gifts as a slight token of our love and esteem to you.

White silk faille evening dress

PUBLISHERS in the bodice, slim hips, flared skirt and a bustle-like bow at the back.

These are the style features of this intriguing dress made of white silk faille with a wide, horizontal stripe.

While their has been much talk in styled circles of the tubular silhouette, in looking over the dresses that are being worn by well dressed women, one is struck by the fact that a very goodly number are wearing wide-skirted frocks in net, frails, metal, taffeta, brocade, velvet, and satin.

The glittering effects that we have been talking about are still popular, as is proved by any large, smartly dressed evening assemblage. Sequin decorations are very much in evidence.

Decolletages are low, generally speaking, with very narrow straps and many suspender straps supporting the bodice from the centre front in necklace fashion.

Doctor Outlines General Treatment of Heart Case

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE CALLED attention yesterday to a recent magazine article which reviewed the condition of heart disease in the United States. Whether this mortality can ever be improved is doubtful. At the present time, the most that we can say about it is that it depends more upon individual initiative than anything else.

Most people with heart disease are walking around, and although they occasionally have to resort to bed rest for short periods, most of the time their condition can be well controlled by means of such medicines as digitalis, and by supervision of the routine of daily life.

The question of exercise always is a difficult one in heart disease, and it is decided by the physician as an individual problem, so that each case is studied on its own merits. The general rule cannot be laid down. In valvular disease with good compensation, exercise is a useful method of treatment. The patient should be taught to watch his breathing, and if exercise because he uses very carefully. Even sitting in a chair is exercise as compared with lying flat, because a certain percentage of additional work is required of the heart in the upright position.

A man with high blood pressure, especially a high diastolic pressure, in the recumbent position is putting a heavy load on his heart and this cannot be greatly increased.

Guide to Exercise

The most important guide to exercise is the functional response of the heart. Count the pulse rate before and after exercise, noting breathing, fatigue, discomfort or pain in the region of the heart. Sometimes irregularities of the heart will disappear and if this is the case, it is a good indication that more exercise can be tolerated. If exercise results in shortness of breath, this also must be analyzed. In fact, people who are subject to exercise may become very breathless, but this is not necessarily an indication that they should stop. The patient, however, who continues to be short of breath on exercise, and in whom this symptom does not improve, had better give it up.

Diet has little, if any, influence on heart disease, unless as a contributive factor or in treatment, although there is a large body of belief to the contrary. The diet of a heart patient need not be modified to any extend except sometimes simply to reduce the total amount of it.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

W. D.: "What is the cause of sinus? What is the cure of sinus? I know of one treatment of sinus which is operation. Is there one by the use of needles.'

Answer: Inflammation of the nose are bony walled cavities lined by mucous membrane. This mucous membrane sometimes becomes infected and pus or other debris accumulates. Treatment is of various kinds. Some people get relief by daily douching with hot salt water or antiseptic drugs, and sometimes surgical drainage has to be instituted. I am not familiar with any treatment exactly of the kind in which you describe a serum is injected by needles.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, Dec. 16

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Very progressive and expansive and solidifying factors figure in this day's activities, judging by the lunar transits. There may be a tendency to fulfilled expectations in a large way, with operations of influential persons or major institutions. Elders also assist in these worthy projects, and there are likely to be advancements and happy reactions in new friendships or social contacts.

If This I Year Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of splendid opportunity for growth, expansion popularity and standing both in business and social relations. Elders could offer practical co-operation.

Speculation is also under good auspices.

A child born on this day may be ambitious, progressive and responsible, although much given to social life, needs wise guidance and direction. Its fondness for splendor and show will not prevent its arrived a high and respected position.

Stuttering Emotional Problem

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department, Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

"Dear Dr. Myers: In THIS column, have discussed stuttering, especially in the younger child. I have considered the handicap chiefly as an emotional problem, and have suggested that cure is most likely to come when the parents work on themselves for poise and more manly accuracy, helping the young child outgrow habits of quick response and to feel emotionally secure. Scores of parents have written me that, under such conditions, the young child who stuttered has overcome it.

By the same principal we can help the older child who stutters; but the older he is, of course, the harder the problem and the more he will have to work on himself to gain poise, self-confidence, and social courage. If he has sufficient will power and self-management, and enjoys adequate sympathy and understanding from those he comes in contact with at home, school, and at large, he has a good chance to win.

The best book to show him how to win is, "The Stutterer Speaks," by Comrade P. Wallbert, bureau of speech correction, California state department of education. I wish every stutterer old enough to read would read this book, and that every teacher and parent would.

"A thoroughly happy child never stutters! . . . The stutterer is a person who is not happy in his life, but rather IN his way! . . .

"Stuttering or stammering is merely the manifestation of emotional maladjustment.

"We must ignore the symptoms of stuttering as a speech defect. Corrective procedure must be applied to the source of the struggle, the emotional conflicts which, struggling on within the socially maladjusted personality."

Path of Struggle

The author tells of his own case and his victory. "Until I was 30," he says, "I stuttered severely. . . . When I finally came to the realization that my affliction was more than a mere speech defect, that it involved my whole personality, and that my stuttering was only the audible struggle of a soul battling on within my emotional life, I attacked my problem from an entirely new approach. In exactly five weeks I secured from the lips of a student's evidence and entered the realm of fluent and unhampered speech."

But let us turn my adult reader who stutters, to read this book. The book won't cure you. You can cure yourself only if you have the necessary sense of shame and grit in yourself, and either sufficient help by way of inspiration from other people you mingle most with or have the ability to take from their hindering response to you. In the last analysis, it will be up to you. Please have no illusions about the matter. Nevertheless, if those who are nearest and dearest to you only knew, they could help.

Noted Poems That Live On

THE FEAST OF THE SNOW

There is heard a hymn when the people are dim,
And voices are mute again,
When the nights are strong with a darkening song,
And the dark is alive with rain

Never we know but in sleet and snow
The pale place where the great fires are,
That the midst of earth is a raging mirth,
And the heart of fire earth a star.

And at night we win to the ancient inn,
Where the Christ in the frost is furled,
We follow the feet where all souls meet
At the fire at the end of the world.

The gods lie dead where the leaves are red,
In the realm of the sun is gold,
For the flame of the sun is the child come
And a Child comes forth alone.

SMALL HAT IS POPULAR IN WINTER

Turbans, Pillboxes and Chapeaux Of Similar Size Are Favorites Now for Street, Travel's Wear

By LESLEY

THE SMALL HAT always is a favorite for winter wear as it "stays put" in spite of cold and blustery winds.

Turbans are liked for town wear now—Dad Indian, Arabian in Paisley satins with heavy drapes at the front. These are often trimmed with tassels.

Pillboxes of corded satin are other favorites; pillboxes also are liked in felt and tucked crepe.

In resort millinery the small hat also plays a prominent part. Pictured are two new chapeaux which show a definite Chinese inspiration —poor China being very much in the limelight now through her misfortunes.

The one at the left is a travel hat with cuffed brim and pagoda crown in blue laced cotton and silk belting ribbon, from Louise-sanders. It is amusing and youthful.

Gold Silk Jersey

The other may be worn by more mature women. It is of gold velvet-centred knitted silk jersey, a draped turban with a band of antique Chinese silk embroidery, said to be from a Chinese lord's coat over 100 years old.

It also is designed by Louise-sanders, for town with black, or for resort wear.

Gold colored gloves to match the Turban are worn with it, and notice the silver Chinese Gerli-collar—the perfectly correct jewelry.

Belting ribbon is a favorite material for hats for immediate wear.

Brimmed hats are given a new look by a brim that flares at one side instead of all the centre front. Some of the new small hats show the Mexican influence in many gay colors.

Top, blue laced cotton and silk belting ribbon travel hat; right, gold velvet centre knitted silk jersey draped turban, embroidered, gold gloves, silver Chinese Gerli collar.

Can Youth Love Two Sweeties?

By VIRGINIA LEE

CAN A MAN love two women at the same time?

Do I hear a rousing chorus of "YES" from the men; and "NO" from the women?

Plenty of men—and some women—do love two or more people. An infidelity make love to their stenographers, the girls with whom they work, and their wife's friends —some men, I mean—while declaring all the time that wifey is the only true love. And to be perfectly fair, some women are born flirts and have affairs with their doctor, dentists, and hubby's pals.

AN INTERESTED READER propounds the query. She tells of a boy who is attending college and who has one girl in the old home town and one at college. He tells each about the other and declares that he will make up his mind eventually which he likes better. To date he hasn't done it. Reader thinks the youth is weak-minded. "His above considerable weakness of character," she states.

Oh, I don't know, Interested Reader. It shows, for one thing, that he has an open mind and that he hasn't found the right girl, for another. One of the girls you speak of appeals to one side of his nature and the other another. When he meets the one who suits him all around he won't have to make any decision. He'll know she is the one.

This boy is young and probably it is just as well, from his standpoint, that he isn't sure which girl suits him best. It is hard on the girls, of course, if they are strong-ly interested in him. However, they are not deceived, as he is perfectly frank with them. Their best scheme is to also date other young men and try not to get their hearts and hopes anchored on him.

LOVESORE AND BLUE: I am afraid you will have to give the boy up to this other girl, or at least share him with her. He may like you, too, of course, and the other girl also. Go with other boys and show him you can get along without him.

* * *

LOKEN AHEAD: You flatter me in asking me for a date, dear girl. You will have to go with your troop, I am afraid, as I fear my "steady" would object to the ramble with you. Thank you just the same.

Good News for Insomniacs

If counting sheep doesn't help your particular brand of sleeplessness, try a hot bath. It will let you down gently into sound, restful slumber.

Get quite a tub filled with water slightly above body temperature—about 100 degrees F. on the bath thermometer is about right. Use soap lavishly to remove soil and skin secretions, then lie back and relax for ten minutes or so.

Resist that impulse to drift right off into slumber. First you must pat yourself dry, put on a clean night gown, and slide between crisp fresh sheets. And be sure to cover up well.

Building blocks for small children

BLOCKS THAT the small child can build into all sorts of fascinating things are among the finest of gifts for the pre-school, nursery school and kindergarten age child.

Children can play with them for hours and learn to use their creative ability, ingenuity and to direct their small hands.

These children have built a log house with their blocks and have many fine, large blocks to make other forms of buildings.

Holiday Apple Dishes Can Be Served Any Time

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Menu Hint

BREAKFAST

Oatmeal With Rich Milk and Sugar
Apple Baked With Currant Jelly
Toast Coffee

DINNER

Cottage Ham and Cabbage
Boiled, Sliced Potatoes Celery
Apple Tarts Tea or Coffee

I am giving you three very good recipes for apple dishes that are holiday dishes, but can be used at any time. The breakfast menu is a delightfully different idea, and I thought it might appeal to you if the members of your families are not too hidebound in their ideas of breakfast. I'd like it, but my family prefers a variety of dishes and more hearty ones than are contained in this menu.

Today's Recipes

APPLES BAKED WITH CURRANT JELLY—Six firm tart apples, one-eighth ounce glass currant jelly. Core apples and pare over third way down from stem end. Fill cavity of each apple with currant jelly. Place apples in a baking dish. Melt rest of currant jelly with one-half cup water, and pour around base of apples. Bake covered in moderate oven (375 F.) until apples are tender. Remove cover and bake about 15 minutes or baking so apples will brown. Serve hot or cold surrounded by cooked or ready-to-eat cereal with sugar and cream.

HOLIDAY APPLE TARTS—Six firm tart apples, three-fourths cup granulated sugar, one cup water, one-fourth cup red cinnamon candies, one tablespoon lemon juice, four tablespoons orange juice. Wash, pare and core apples and place in baking dish. Combine sugar, water, cinnamon candies, lemon and orange juice and heat, stirring constantly until cinnamon candies have melted. Pour syrup over apples. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (375 F.) until tender. Turn apples in syrup during baking so they become pink throughout. Remove apples from syrup and cook syrup until it thickens. Pour thickened syrup over apples, chill and serve as suggested above. Note: Stayman Winesaps or York Imperials will hold their shape when peeled and baked in syrup. Serve these cold as a fruit compote or fit flaked tart shells with a dash of whipped cream.

CHRISTMAS APPLE PUDDING—Four firm, tart apples, one-half cup light brown sugar, firmly packed; cinnamon and nutmeg, salt, butter, juice of one orange, juice of one-half lemon, one cup; colored granulated sugar. Butter an oblong baking dish (6in inches by twelve inches by two inches). Pare, core and quarter apples. Cut stirring constantly until cinnamon candies have melted. Pour syrup over apples. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (375 F.) until tender. Turn apples in syrup during baking so they become pink throughout. Remove apples from syrup and cook syrup until it thickens. Pour thickened syrup over apples, chill and serve as suggested above. Note: Stayman Winesaps or York Imperials will hold their shape when peeled and baked in syrup. Serve these cold as a fruit compote or fit flaked tart shells with a dash of whipped cream.

Bruins, Rangers and Maroons Score Wins on N. H. L. Front But Standings are Unchanged

Leafs Lose to Boston When Wolland Scores Two in 7 Seconds

CANADIENS LOSE

Defeated by Maroons in Overtime While Rangers Stop Red Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

All that Dave Kerr and Bill Beveridge needed for recognition for their goal-tending was a little consideration from their mates. Now their chits are beginning to go places in the National Hockey League.

Note that the team's records are comparable, for Kerr's New York Rangers are leading the leading Boston Bruins in the American division and Beveridge's Montreal Maroons are trailing in the Canadian section. But both goalies have been misunderstood until lately by partners to other players, leaving protection poor.

Rangers stuck to hockey in front of Kerr last night and registered their first straight win, 3-1 over Detroit at New York. Maroons recalled their goalie behind them Saturday at Chicago, so they straightened up and ended Canadiens' long string of no defeats, 3-2 in overtime, to gain an edge in the Inter-National standings. Only Bruins' belated, in front of Tiny Thompson, at Boston; and Leafs whipped Toronto 5-1.

Kerr and Thompson are pacing the notables, having been scored on 28 times each. But Kerr's mates have been dealt 15 penalties in penalties and Thompson's only 10, while the Bruins' defence is recognized generally as the N.H.L.'s best. Beveridge has had 34 pokin' at by him but Maroons have scored by a record of 280 minutes in penalties, equivalent to 3 1-3 games, in consoling.

Anglo-Woolley Combine

Kerr and Beveridge both big men as goalies go, are Ken Leonard's chief opponents in the "money-man" system. They stand well out from the goal-line and cut down the angles for the shots that come on right. They don't top as often as others may for give the puck only plenty of time to make the first move.

Kerr would have had his fifth shut out of the season if Captain Doug Young of the Red Wings had not been on hand to shin Hec Kilrea's rebound late in the second period last night. That made up for Mac Colville's goal in the first, but Mac passed Dash in the last minute later and Rangers led again 3-1. Byron Rankin got the rest of the scoring in the late minutes.

The half game Rangers lost was to Chicago by Toronto. Referees Red Phil Watson were serving time when the Black Hawks' goals were tallied. Now Rangers have won three games in four nights through sane measures.

The picture was something the same when Montreal Forces tied Boston 3-3 at Chicago Sunday. They drew three penalties in overtime and Hawks scored on one of them.

Freak Goal Decides

Canadiens, however, hitched their best on exactly a month, levelled the score against Maroons at 1-1 in the second period while the opposition was short a man, Tye Blake's counter against Baldy Northcott's pass. Then the Habitants raced to the front on Paul Haynes' drive from the blue line and it appeared they were on the way to their 10th game without defeat.

But the Frenchmen let Bob Gracie and Hooley Smith cover their nets and he tied the score with nine minutes to play on a delay from Stew Evans and Gus Marker. With less than two minutes of overtime to go Dave Trottier flipped the puck from behind the Canadien net. Goalie Cliff Outz had his eye fixed on potential pass-receivers in front and the rubber rolled down his back and over the line for the winning goal.

Beveridge had the hottest pack of forwards in the league in check, George Mantha, with ten goals, was stopped only three times by Big Bill.

Before 15,000 Clancy Wolland bagged two goals in seven seconds during the first period and Bruins were ahead of the Leafs to stay. Syl Apps reduced the margin to 3-1 in the second but Charley Sands made it 4-2 in the last five minutes.

That result decided the Leafs a chance of pulling to within a point of the group leading Canadiens, while Bruins maintained their one-point edge over Rangers.

KITCHENER AND BRANTFORD TIE

Both Teams in Third Place Tie in Senior O.H.A.

(By The Canadian Press)

It was all even today on the Western Ontario front of the Senior A Division of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Kitchener Greenshirts and Brantford Redmen lost around the ice as hard in the first two periods of their 3-3 draw last night they battled to a scoreless third and overtime session.

Barring that first points of the year, the teams went into a tie for third place in the A loop standings and left the cellar club, Port Colborne, the only pointless team. Twenty Goodyears remained at top position followed by Oshawa.

Brantford scored soaring in the 59 minute battle when right wing Cooper took a pass from Torti and slammed high into the upper corner of the net. Just 45 seconds after the period opened Kents took Bauer's pass to tie the score.

Schaerr sent Kitchener into the lead about a minute later to end scoring for the Greenshirts. Webster's goal halfway through the period deadlocked the game.

The Greenshirts' rushes of both teams in the first two periods were lacking for the last sessions and both outfits appeared content to end matters tied. Kennedy and O'Brit were benched in the third by fighting and threats on the referee.

Port Colborne will have a chance to make it 2 points for a game on Wednesday when the Sailors play at Oshawa. Other Senior A games this week will be Friday when Brantford plays at Toronto Goodyears and Oshawa mixes with the Greenshirts at Kitchener.

DRASTIC CHANGES IN HORSE RULES

Harness Horse Section Meet in Columbus to Change System

Columbus, O., Dec. 16.—(AP)—Drastic changes in the starting, registering and eligibility rules governing Harness Horse racing bore the approval today of the three harness organizations that control trotters and pacers in the United States.

Representatives of the United, National and American Trotting Associations, meeting in session with the Trotting Horse Club of America as the governing body, decided that:

1—The "money-won" classification system, adopted in 1928 and modified in 1935, be changed to include a portion of the old "time-method" system so that the "money-won" plan was approved.

2—Certificates of registration obtained from any of the three associations, be sufficient for any horse to start in any race, horses registered with one group were not be qualified to be also privately owned by the others without payment of an added fee.

3—That all circuits, mostly at County fairs, use the new "parade" starting system in which a pacifica, thus doing away with the ancient "scoring" ban.

4—All horses, before becoming eligible for registration with any association, must be registered as standard-bred or non-standard bred by the Standard Bred Trotter Association, with headquarters at Goshen, N.Y.

Each of the new rules must win approval by the Boards of the three associations before it is registered effective, but sanction of the Rules Committee has been tantamount to full approval in the past.

BARONS COMING FAST IN LOOP

Cleveland Squad Under Bill Cook Only Beaten Once in 9 Games

By The Canadian Press

It's time for the boys to pay more than passing attention to Cleveland Barons, who have been going places with a minimum of fuss in the International-American Hockey league. And it's time too for Coach Bill Cook to do a quiet bit of celebrating.

Cook, famed former National Hockey League star with New York Rangers, certainly couldn't have felt like turning handsprings with joy in the first week or so of the season as Barons started off slowly. But all that is changed now and Barons have only been beaten once in their last nine games.

In that run which carried them into a tie with Syracuse Stars for the top position in the league's western section, Barons won four and tied four. Only loss came last Sunday when Providence Reds topped them 3-. Latest link by their streak came last night when they defeated Springfield Indians, 5-4, in the night's only game.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Sylvanus Apps of Toronto and Johnny Gagnon of Canadiens were the only members of the National Hockey League's circle of scoring leaders to step ahead last night, but Apps' one tally was a beauty. Apps got the lone goal against Boston in a 3-1 reverse and Gagnon contributed an assist in the Canadiens' 3-2 win over Detroit. Previously tied with Apps and Gagnon at 13 points, Red Horner and Georges Harry of Detroit and Cecil Dillon of Rangers remained behind the eight ball on the Big Seven. The leaders:

was a portion of the better two-thirds of the game at times. Only Quinte Motorcycle Club. Their goal-getter will be long remembered by the sporting fraternity of the city.

Beds by Bebe Rush, became more major cubs in not entering Bebe into a 52kg seat as a manager, are out of order. In the opinion of Bob Considine of the New York Daily Mirror, who believes that managing might well be managing himself, instead of becoming an understudy.

"Babe Ruth's recent statement that he would never go to another ball game, unless he is made the manager of a big league team, somehow doesn't strike me very responsive chord in the hoy chord," writes Considine. "For will it add appreciably to the great man's list of admirers. We don't quite agree with the notion that baseball owes Ruth an eternal debt of gratitude. He made him able to retire at 40 and lifted him from dimly nothingness to the status of gravely beloved and respected throughout the country.

"To look upon a great active player as a key point of managerial ability is as false as assuming that a fine violin maker must be a great fiddler or a Kreisler, or that the best tube builder is a good radio. Despite the leader's baton, If Ruth is almost about being manager-wise personally, we believe that most of his managerial ambitions are based upon the personal shoots of his friends—he will take some minor league club and prove that he can make a go of it. He has been offered several such places and ignored the bids.

"It seems to us that if Babe wants to start managing, he might begin on himself, and manage to refrain from swinging at the bitter old boy that Ty Cobb—who, too, longed to manage baseball for—became.

Certainly, he can't expect the baseball fans to support for his pouting campaign against a game which, after all has been very, very good to him, comfortable for life."

Remember Nick Mercurio, the villainous wrestler who appeared in Belleville on several occasions? Well, he packed quite a wallop over in England wrestling these days. We received a Christmas card from him "loaded with cheer from across the pond." Nick says he's packing 'em in. And like the London fogs, especially when the stillings are rolling in.

Henry Lynch, world flyweight champion, defeated Georges Batsalis, bantamweight champion of France, on a technical knockout in the eighth round at Leicester, England last night.

Pat Calladine, brother of Bill Calladine and well known Peterborough athlete, is the new manager of the Lakeside Bowling Club, in the Lyndhurst City. They'll commence bowling early in February with their sheets and do not expect to get out before Saturday. In the meantime the local ice palace has almost as much ice over as anytime last winter and a splendid surface and foundation. It would not have affected the surface too much to have permitted the Redmen to practice last night but the management refused, stating they wanted to manufacture, not use, ice.

HARD LUMPS CAME ON HER LEGS

Ankles and Feet Swollen With Rheumatism.

Rheumatism sent this woman to bed with lumpy swelling and intense discomfort. Yet these symptoms soon disappeared, as they always will do when the poor kidneys are set right. This letter tells you the splendid she received:—

"I was taken ill with rheumatic pains in my legs. Nights were badly inflamed, swollen, and they were partly covered with red, hard lumps. My feet were down to the ground was agony. After I had been in bed for 16 days, suffering agony all the time, my husband said, 'Now you go on suffering like this, let us try Kruschen Salts.' He got a bottle and noticed from the first I felt benefit. In a few days long, I was completely relieved of my swellings, inflammation, and lumps all gone—and I am up again and doing my housework."—(Mrs.) H.L.

Do you realise what causes a good deal of rheumatic pain? Nothing but sharp-edged uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs! Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.

A penny-a-day bottle of Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.

The Age of Julia

By ELLEN ADAMS

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

Miss Marsh of the triumphs counter, touched her beautifully waved hair with a polished finger tip, then she lifted the limp mirror so that she could see her wistful face and, head held out a few inches, pouted the new red mouth, suddenly, star dazed the vanity case fell to the floor, and regarded its gold and pink enamel beauty with a sudden shiver.

"That," she said bitterly, "would have been the whole end of almost my cooling troubles."

"What do you like talking about?" asked Miss Dodge, buyer for the corset department. "Cooking schools are of no use to you in your child-by-ten room at the boarding house, and believe me, Julia, at your age, you should be glad to have such fine prospects as Herbert Lindsay—I suppose it will be soon—"

"How long have I been engaged?" demanded Julia.

"I don't know. A few years—"

"Ten!" interrupted Julia. "Pretty better than nothing—plenty of girls here in upholstery would be glad of your chance."

"I suppose so," murmured Julia as they returned to their respective departments.

Herbert Lindsay, who had sold pianos for twenty years in the front of the big store, glanced at the handsome sapphire pin he was thrusting into his scarf. "If I was the sort of boy that Julia Marsh invested in scarf pins," he thought, "I could have built a modern house and had room for 200 feet —" he sighed and turned away to polish a set of clothes in a cramped washroom who ran a small grocery store and fancy goods shop in a country village. Lindsay had sold Peters clothes for twenty years.

"How's the clothing business?" asked Peters as pulled out a big roll of money.

"About the same as usual; and how's the store coming along—and the children?" asked Herbert.

"All right; but I'm selling out."

"Selling out, why?"

"Moving to California, so if you hear of anyone who wants to buy the house and chickens and stove—it brings in as much as you can with here, young man!" he boasted with pride.

The "young man" of forty smiled grimly. "Will me al about it," he suggested.

That evening he took Julia Marsh out to dinner and asked her what she wished for a birthday present. Julia glanced at him from tired eyes. "I don't care, tell you, Herbert," she said bluntly.

"Coat a lot?" he asked.

She shrugged. "Do I look old, Herbert—much older, to you?" she asked.

"You always look just the same to me," he said gallantly, "the prettiest girl in Spinnakers."

"Not now. Ten year ago—when I was looking—yes. Haven't the years gone though?"

"Ten years isn't a never thought we had enough to take one of those apartments in the Lacrida, but next year—of course you wouldn't want to go anywhere else, Julia?" He looked at her doubtfully, and she saw with a pang that his hair was streaked with grey.

"The Lacrida?" she repeated. "I don't want to go there, now."

"There's a new one going up—two-housekeeping—handy service, valet service—" he said drearily.

"I don't want maid service—nor housekeeping or anything like that, Herbert. Don't you understand, Herbert? She was near 30 now, and he was glad that their table was partly concealed behind a large screen of palms.

"—a hotel then?" he ventured desperately.

"I want—to—do thy own housework," she said distinctly. "Of course you are horrified and disgusted, and your ideals are shattered, but I am tired of being dressed up all day and just selling things. I've had to be nice every day for years and years — and I want a chance to have a little house of my own, and wear cotton dresses and go to the butcher's and cook things. I have some chickens, and belong to the Ladies' Aid society and go to church every Sunday, and wash every Monday morning and iron Tuesday—and never eat in a boarding house or restaurant again. —If you want to give me anything for my birthday—just let me pick it out—I don't want a silver mesh bag, or a bracelet or anything like that—just a whole lot of kitchen utensils—"

Herbert put his hand on hers and for about the man, person, who wanted to sell his little boy's home.

"Ah, why didn't you buy it, Herbert?" she wailed after.

"I did" he did calmly, "and I thought, say in March, when the frost is out of the ground, we might be married, and go there."

"Henry," cried Julia, "for we are not growing any younger—and I want to look at that catalogue of Michen things—"

"And I," said Herbert, doomed to a small city existence, "and I'm happy as a schoolboy, for this parched subdivision must make out a list of garden seeds."

PUBLIC SERVICES

The former Premier declared Liberal Government has adopted while he was in office had aroused interest and would be carried out immediately. Many of his addresses that time dealt with items now in the Liberal platform, including crime and towns where poverty and difficulties are present. He was a strong opponent of the sales tax.

Other addresses had dealt with the mentally deficient and public pensions proposition" with health insurance and with the question of the Province of Ontario.

Dr. Bruce spoke highly of the help his wife had been in public life the last term. At one time, he was elected representative, standing unopposed, and working for a record before contesting his address.

The toast to Dr. Bruce was proposed by the Thomas White, former Liberal Minister of Finance. In his he said, was acknowledged by complimentary remarks by Mr. Bruce in connection with the election of his office, during an address saying that he had done well and faithfully, but with high credit and distinction."

The literary men who attended the banquet also availed afterwards the "suite" which was provided for those who attended a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Bruce by Mayor Hewitt, on behalf of the city of Toronto.

Mrs. Bruce was a recipient of a corsage bouquet in the anteroom from a balcony above the banquet hall.

Police Blotter

Local cases on various charges during the last 24 hours and remanded on custody until the next sittings of Police Court were dealt with here before R. H. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace.

Proof hitching on the city streets early this morning and unable to give a satisfactory account of himself to a youth, who police say is Victor Silvers was arrested and charged with being charged with vagrancy.

William Murphy, 37, no address given, pleaded guilty to having committed a theft, on a charge of theft from the C.N.R. station here on Dec. 4th, at your old residence, was sentenced to a month's imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary.

Other cases of a minor character were disposed of.

Others: Zebedee, Herchimer St., complained to the authorities today that persons had been stealing Christmas trees from his premises. Mr. Herchimer said that he had planted the trees for sale, but before he could place them on the market someone pilfered the collection.

EDEN SAYS

necessary measures to prevent a recurrence of incidents of this nature, and to punish those who are guilty, after inquiry, with those responsible for any outrage."

Compensation to be Made

The Japanese government has already made the necessary compensation to the British government himself and personally for the incidents would not impair relations between the two governments.

The Marquis's statement to Mr. Eden continued, was sending a communication to the Japanese government acknowledging receipt of this note and defining itself on the incidents, the whole series of incidents, emphasizing the seriousness of the situation which had been created and the requirements which, in their judgment, flow from it.

Recent Grave Incidents

"In this connection," he said, "further are drawing attention to aspects of the recent grave incidents not covered by the note of the Japanese government. In particular they wish to be assured that the actions being taken are of such a character as will definitely insure that there will be no repetition of these incidents which, as the Japanese government themselves admit, must impair relations between the two countries.

Mr. Attlee then asked Prime Minister Baldwin whether he had details of the Far East situation in the Commons. Mr. Chamberlain suggested that question should be taken up when business for the coming week is discussed, when the party whips.

Protection to Fleet

Asked by Mr. Lieut.-Commander Reginald Fletcher, Labor, whether the government planned to strengthen the fleet in Far Eastern water, the Premier said:

"The honorable gentleman may rest assured that the protection of interests in Far East has been a constant preoccupation on the part of His Majesty's government. I have no further statement to make on this matter today."

J. J. Davidson, Labor, asked Mr. Eden if he was "fairly satisfied the Japanese government is given the consideration to these protests we should expect them to give."

Mr. Eden's Reply

"Satisfaction is an almost unknown sentiment for a Foreign Secretary," Mr. Eden replied.

Christmas Concerts

Railway Street S.S.

One of the most Christmas concerts presented in Railway Street United Church delighted a very large audience Tuesday night when the scholars of the various Sunday classes took part in the musical entertainment. The well directed numbers, the lovely costumes and the splendid singing at well known Christmas carols made an evening that was long to be enjoyed.

The audience was welcomed by Mr. H. S. Pollard, superintendent of the Railway School, who acted as chairman for the evening. The chorus by the junior choir following, the programme was carried out in detail.

Miss Dorothy Davison's class contributed a beautiful tableau and recitation, the girls taking part, after star, with tinsel streamers, Christmas carol, Nadine Hall, the soloist, who sang "Making a Star." This musical number was most effective.

Mr. Kenneth Hay's class of boys followed by the singing of "We Three Kings of Orient Are" by Mr. Harold Rive's class. Miss Dorothy Bell gave an interesting recitation, followed by John Smith in the feature of the concert and were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

An English street scene with carollers singing the well-known Christmas hymns was effected by Miss Lindsay and Miss Lottie Green's class and was very realistically done. A solo was well given by Ronald O'Neil.

East and West

A telephone conversation between a Canadian Christian girl (Miss Laddie) and a Chinese girl (Helen Brown) brought to the listeners of Christmas spirit from the Christmas message, what Christianity has brought to Christians, how it is observed, and an invitation for her to enlist herself with her Christian friends.

Miss Phyllis Veitch's class presented a beautiful tableau "Angel in the Manger," while Miss Orma's class presented a dramatic dialogue entitled "Inasmuch."

Under the direction of Miss Myra Cunningham, the C.G.I.T. gave a strikingly beautiful pageant of the Christmas story. During the singing of the solemn spirit of the play, the characters in costume with the full-lay manner in which they took their parts. A number of solos were also rendered by the other members of the C.G.I.T. singing "Hark, Hark My Soul," "Silent Night," "While Shepherds Watch their Flocks," "Away in a Manger," and "O, Come, All Ye Faithful." The cast of this spectacularly fine number included:

Shepherds: Marion Kilbank, Jean Lucas, Lois Liddle, Helen Brown, Helen Anderson.

Angels: Nadine Hall, Evelyn Reid, Doreen Rose, Beth and Roslyn Johnston.

Joseph: Margaret Simpson.

Mary: Barbara Lloyd.

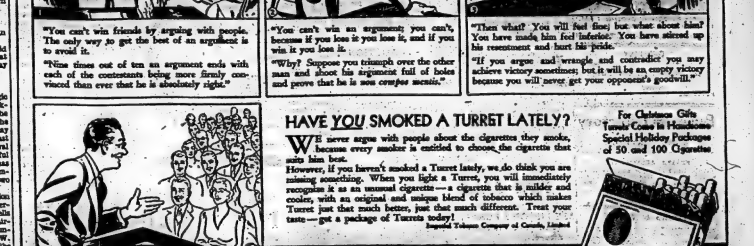
Kings: Ruth Oliphant, Jean Sherry, Gwen Storey and Ruth Boyd.

At the conclusion of the splendid entertainment, there was a hearty vote of thanks to the Sunday School.

Salvation Army

Arriving at the most, strategic moment in a special delivery package, Santa Claus gladdened the hearts of over 180 kiddies at the annual Station Street Sunday School of the Salvation Army last night. Prior to the novel arrival of old St. Nicholas, a delightful programme of an entirely Christmas nature was presented by the members of the Salvation Army's two citadels.

The Salvation Army Station Street citadel was filled to overflowing when Brother Cross Richards spoke words of welcome as chairman. Leading the efforts of Sunday School Superintendent J. E. Brown for his untiring efforts, the chairman assured the large audience that the night's programme and the success of the Station Street Sunday School was entirely due to Mr. Brown's efforts.



At the conclusion of the evening's programme over 180 bags of candy were distributed among the kiddies present, while special gifts were awarded to the Sunday School scholars for attendance and standings within their respective classes. An action song "Silent Night" preceded by the Pinnacle St. Sunday School was one of the features of the programme.

The arrival of Santa Claus came during the consideration of a short skit—"Not to be opened until Christmas." The novel drama proved very interesting, as the audience when Santa Claus was found in the package which was supposed to not to be opened until Christmas, but unless children's Santa Claus, were tempted by sounds from within the box, which revealed the fact that they were not alone. Adjutant and Mrs. Alderman of the Salvation Army Citadel, assisted in the programme also.

The programme proceeded was as follows:

...st away with anything," he said.
Study of R.N.W.M.P.

An objective ahead of Ontario Conservatives should be the unprejudiced study of the British North West Mounted Police, Hon. Peter Heenan declared in a speech at Orillia last night.

The Howell Commission is now carrying that problem and I am not going to say anything to embarrass it," he said. "I do not think the Liberal Party, or any other groups should gang up on that Commission. Should a province not right to submit its economic and political problems to that body, but they should avoid anything resembling sectional or mass attack."

Patronage Cited Evil

Political patronage was the greatest evil of public life in Canada today, said Mr. Macaulay. One out of every seven persons in Canada today was on the public payroll or dependent on some one who was.

"In Ontario, the civil service, notwithstanding Mr. Hepburn's promise to reform it, is not only more generous in numbers than ever before, but is being added to every day," he said.

Mr. Macaulay propounded that if something was not done he reduce taxes "the people are going to rise up in their might and abolish some of the taxing bodies."

Twin Foes of Liberty.

Conservatives must fight twin foes of liberty, Fascism and Communism, he said. Where British democratic institutions flourished, these doctrines would melt away.

"We must have toleration for minorities, treating them with sympathy and understanding, but we must have backbone and courage when dealing for law and order by every citizen and by others that come to this country. We must find them using this new freedom to torpedo our institutions and customs, we will have to find effective means of stopping them converting liberty into license."

"Revision Essential"—Hepburn

Toronto, Dec. 15—(CP)—Revision of contracts between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and Quebec power companies could never have been achieved without the legislation declaring the nullity of the contracts, Premier Hepburn Mitchell Hepburn said today.

"In connection with these new contracts, you must realize that Ontario's position was not an enviable one," said the Premier. "Merchants had a judgment against us in the Supreme Court of $7,000,000 and there was little reason to expect that judgment would be upset by the Privy Council. If that had been so, other companies could have commenced similar actions and Hydro would have had to pay a total of approximately $15,000,000.

Power at Reduced Price

"Furthermore we would have to start paying immediately for 456,000 horsepower at $15 a horsepower, and all the old objectionable clauses would be restored. We would have had to pay in United States funds, power supplied would have been withdrawn by Quebec at any time and Hydro would have been obligated to absorb any new tax on power imposed by Quebec.

"Under the new contracts we are getting power at a reduced price and we are only taking that we can use to the best possible advantage.

Consolidation Serves Purpose

"We did the best we could out of a bad situation and it is rank hypocrisy for any Tory to criticize us for doing the best we could out of the contracts they left us. These new contracts could never have been negotiated without our cancellation of the original agreements. Cancellation served its purpose. It brought the power companies into a frame of mind to do business."

FIRST ICEBOAT MAKES APPEARANCE

First of the ice boats of the season made their appearance on the Bay of Quinte this morning. A fleet of ice boats, manned by a crew of youthful sailors skimmed over the bay from Belleville to Deseronto, where snow fall had drifted to prevent satisfactory skating. In the afternoon the crew of the ice boats were busily engaged in sailing rinks have now been cleared in the private residents, and impromptu hockey games have become the nightly pastime.

LAKEFIELD RESIDENTS SEE SAME METEOR AS OBSERVED AT MARMORA

Mr. Jack Murphy and Morley Bullock, Lakefield, also report seeing the same meteor as was reported being seen by residents of Marmora districts on Friday evening last. Mr. Murphy and Mr. Bullock were at the farm of James Moore, five miles east of Lakefield, when they saw a ball of fire shoot through the skies. They described it as being of a silvery color and giving off sparks which turned blue. They estimated its height above ground at about from 150 to 200 feet up.

NO MANDATE

"Now we know why the Ontario election was sprung on the public at the last day. One of the reasons was Hydro. Mr. Hepburn deliberately fooled the people of the province on that issue. I suppose he hopes by the next election this will be forgotten," said Mr. Macaulay.

Claims No Mandate.

The Conservative chief contended the government had no mandate to make contracts with Quebec companies. The original contracts had been cancelled by Mr. Hepburn because they were made without the approval of the Hydro municipalities and the legislature.

"Now Mr. Hepburn has done exactly the same thing only under far more questionable circumstances," he said. The 1928 contracts had been made on the advice of engineers. In 1937 they were made despite the premier's statement that there was no power shortage "and he was going to keep the sturdy power barons' hands out of Ontario's pockets."

If Mr. Hepburn can get away with deception of this kind, he can

EMPEROR HIROHITO.
With the blunt insistence of President Roosevelt for an apology from the Emperor of Japan, himself, for the bombing and sinking, with loss of life of the American gunboat, Panay, near Nanking, the personage of Emperor Hirohito, considered sacred by Japanese but been inflected into world politics for the first time. An apology from the emperor, virtually condemning the military and naval officials for the incident, would involve Japan in the greatest loss of face in her modern history, world diplomats believe. President Roosevelt's "demands" in a memorandum to the state department, that Japan's ambassador transmit direct to the emperor his deep concern over the incident.

AT THE ELLIS

"Breakfast For Two"

"Breakfast For Two", a riotous romantic comedy co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall comes to the Ellis, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily.

Fast-moving and replete with hilarious situation, this RKO Radio romantic comedy is unquestionably one of the gayest and most brilliant films of the year.

The theme concerns itself with a charming killer, played by Herbert Marshall, who prefers night life in all its phases to that of running the affairs of a huge steamship line of which he is president, and with a rich young heiress played by Barbara Stanwyck, who tries to make a man of him.

After a wild tour of night clubs, Marshall awakens one morning to find that Miss Stanwyck, who has brought him home somewhat against her volition" is still in his house, being forced to stay there by Hattie Carnegie's Great Dane who has blocked her retreat.

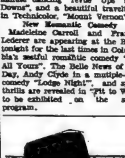
While the apologetic Marshall is breakfasting with Miss Stanwyck, who evades all his questions as to her identity, Glenda Farrell, portraying a gold-digging actress, enters and treats Miss Stanwyck with scant consideration.

But by this time the valiant Miss Stanwyck has taken quite an interest in the handsome Mr. Marshall and determines to make a man of him whether he likes it or not, and proceeds to buy the steamship line which is on the verge of bankruptcy from under his nose. This enraged Marshall, who believes he has been outwitted by being penniless, he is powerless to fight back.

Enlisting the aid of Marshall's man-servant, Eric Blore, Miss Stanwyck secretly buys Marshall's interest and claims the servants who are ordered to stay on and run the steamship line.

A hilarious scene is then enacted when Miss Stanwyck ogs Marshall on to "put on the gloves" with her and he receives a black eye. Glenda Farrell arrives and considers Marshall, who is fiancee vice-president of the line by secret connivance on the part of Miss Stanwyck and the directors, buckles down to work, not realizing Miss Stanwyck is behind all this.

In this smart romantic comedy, Miss Stanwyck establishes herself as one of the most versatile of screen actresses. Fresh from her delightfully dramatic role as Stella Dallas, she steps into this sparkling comedy, with a performance that reaches a new high.



Marshall, recognized also as a most capable dramatic actor, is equally as impressive as the rich playboy. Truly brilliant performances are also turned in by Eric Blore, Glenda Farrell, Etienne Girardot and Donald Meek, all of which goes to make "Breakfast for Two" a picture that should not be missed by anyone.

Three Exceptional Shorts

Three exceptional short treats are announced for presentation on the same program in Edgar Kennedy in one of the funniest comedies in weeks, "Morning Judge"; Hal Roach's dazzling new edition of the best of funmakers from stage, screen and Radio in a twenty-five minute dancing revue "Ups and Downs", and a beautiful traveltalk in Technicolor, "Sunset Vernon".

New Romantic Comedy

Madeleine Carroll and Francis Lederer are appearing at the Belle tonight for the last times in Columbia's sparkling romantic comedy "It's All Yours". The Belle News of the Day, Andy Clyde in a mutiple-reel comedy "Lodge Night", and sport thrills are revealed in "Fit to Win" are exhibited on the same program.

KING FAROUK

A constitutional crisis threatens in Egypt with the youthful King Farouk opposing a parliamentary majority and his cabinet advising the monarch refused to sign bills passed by parliament, which included a secret grant of $195,000, as prejudicial to his country's interests. The cabinet reportedly has given Farouk 10 days to sign the bills before re-submitting them to parliament whose second approval would make them law under the constitution, without the king's signature.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Broken Blossoms"

"Broken Blossoms" a story as poignant as "The Good Earth", starring Dolly Haas, is shown at the Capitol today and Thursday only, in Sneak Hit No. 1, on a grand double feature program.

It was in the old "Broken Blossoms" that Lillian Gish scored her greatest screen triumph, as the pathetic heroine. In the new version Dolly Haas portrays Lucy, and it is a safe prophecy to make that her performance will win multitudes of new admirers for this European star, whose fame on the Continent as an emotional actress is second to none. Lucy's delicate, wistful appeal never falters, never slackens throughout the entire picture, thanks to the perfect artistry of Miss Haas.

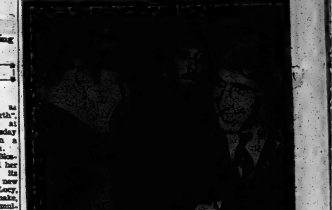
The plot concerns a fragile, beautiful denizen of the London Limehouse district, Lucy, a child in years, who has the experience of suffering. Her father Baulding Burrows, is a drunken vicious brute who daily constantly whips and maltreats his frail daughter. She finds refuge with Chen, a Chinese student, who keeps an antique shop in the neighborhood. Chen, a poet and idealist, worships the lily-pale Lucy, provides her with a little bower of beauty in his lonely flower-decorated room with silks, where she recuperates from the effects of the final beating which drove her forth into the winter night.

But Burrows after wining a fight, learns of his missing victim's whereabouts. He comes during Chen's absence, batters down the door in house and scourges her to death. Chen later finds Lucy's body conveys it to his home, lays the bruised form in the resting place she got loved, and then returns to wreak vengeance on the murderer. Burrows is slain by the hands of the Chinese youth, and Lucy's death is avenged.

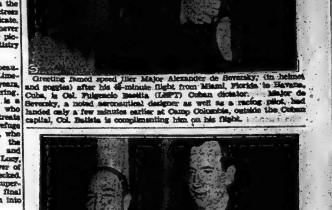
"Broken Blossoms" pulsates with life's red currents flowing at feverish tempo. There is never a moment when the interest slackens, and few productions have ever mingled thrills pathos and grim, savage realism with such extraordinary effect. It is brutal at times, as such a picture must be in order to reflect the truth about people who live in brutal surroundings, on the other hand its tender moments are replete with magic magnetism of the kind that brings an ache to the heart and tears to the eyes. Nothing could be more vividly impressive than fighter Burrows smashing his way to victory in the ring, nothing more horribly nerve-shaking than his sadistic treatment of Lucy, and her unfeeling death. Then again, nothing could be more touching and charming than Chen's devotion to the wilted little flower of girlhood that he succors and tends with self-sacrificing love.

"They Met in a Taxi"

A four-star cast comprising Chester Morris, Fay Wray, Lionel Stander and Raymond Walburn, cavort through the lasting roles of this romantic comedy-drama "They Met in a Taxi", which is shown at His No. 2 on the same program. The story of a dashing New York Evening Post story by Octavus Roy Cohen, "They Met in a Taxi".



The film tells how Chester Wray poses as an heiress escaping an undesirable marriage and enlists the aid of Chester Morris, a New York taxi driver, to get her out of the situation. Morris discovers that the girl he is sheltering in his apartment is not an heiress at all, but an unknown mannequin; second, that she is accused of shoplifting a pair of valuable pearls and last but not least, that he was falling in love with her, suspicions notwithstanding, the fun really begins.



Stander and Walburn contribute many of the outstanding comedy scenes, Stander as the reformed pickpocke, turned taxi driver and Walburn as the fussy old newspaperman assigned to a daily column of society gossip.

Last complete show tonite and Thursday at 8.30 with matinee each day at 2.30.

DR. CHEN CHING-LOK

Now on his way from Colombia to Canada to take over his new post is Dr. Chen Ching-Lok, who has been appointed Chinese consul-general at Ottawa. A brilliant scholar and a devout Christian, Dr. Chen was formerly commissioner for foreign affairs at Canton and also served as consul-general at San Francisco.

Something like a real idea, and Mary Watkins ran out in front of her house humming a bit right catching it, Mary's mother, who happened that what she is a musician, and I suppose Mary is a musician, too, but she's a terror about this thing, Mary, you're a prima donna, Mary worker, Shorty said, and Pete said, So why don't you go home and sing for a bit? Have a home.

O my goodness such an idea, big enough when it was born to be looked natural, but now he's got grown stones or something all over it. Mary Watkins said, and I said, Well so would you if you'd been through the mill.

My, thanks for the compliment, Mary Watkins said, and besides let's get them, look at him scratching, he must have fleas. Well what if I have, and Pete said, Well what if it, why can't you have charity for them too, they're human beings the same as everybody else.

O, they are not, Mary Watkins said, and I said, Well at least they're animals.

That's nothing of the kind, she said, and Shorty said, Well what do you think they are, vegetables.

They're insects, that's what they are, and I dont have any charity for insects and never expect to have, Mary Watkins said.

Being a good listener and the end of the subject.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and Pada and Shorty haven't found a home for Sunshine yet, and we've been keeping him at the 30th Century Garage, on account of the man saying he can sleep there as long as he dont get run over and as long as it's not too long, being a good thing for his motor but not so good for his looks on account of the grease from underneath the automobiles and today after school we stopped and got him and had another meeting about him, Pete Hankins saying, Hay, how about asking Mary Watkins to keep him for a pet, she's always talking about doing things for charity.

THE CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

Departure of "Joe" Wilson Regretted by County Residents

Agricultural Representative Takes New Post at Welland

ACTIVE WORKER

He is an amiable sort of fellow is this Joseph Wilson, Agricultural Representative for Hastings County for the last eight years, and who will leave for Welland late this month, where he has been transferred by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. There was a tinge of regret in the pleasant voice last night as "Joe" as he is familiarly termed by his host of friends and associates throughout the urban and rural communities of this district, recalled the many pleasant associations he has made during his tenure of office in Hastings County.

"Grand people," he said, "and it gives a fellow a refuge around the heart, when he thinks of leaving them."

Casual opinions, comment and reports picked up at random throughout the county since the news of Mr. Wilson's transfer was made public, confirm the opinion that regret at his leaving is natural. For his pleasant likable disposition has endeared him to all with whom he came in contact in his many agricultural, athletic and social activities throughout this district.

Easy to Make Friends

"Joe" is one of those fortunate human beings who possess the happy faculty of making friends without expending the least bit of effort. A personality, that immediately drew man to him whether in the agricultural classes, the baseball field or the drawing room, marked him as one of the outstanding people in the public eye. In his work, he never assumed a dictatorial manner, he preferred the conversational method, that not only engaged faith and confidence in him but merited him as being an authority on his chosen subject of ability.

Who used the same methods in all phases of his work. The hardy farmer of the sparsely cultivated areas of the Northern part of the county received the same attention and interest in his problems as did the young scions of the wealthy families of the southern part of the district. "Joe" was no respecter of persons insofar as the use of his wide range of agricultural and other knowledge is concerned.

His natural interest however lay in the development and promotion of junior farmers clubs of the county. He originated several of these organizations and spent much time and energy in the furtherance of the interest of the young farmers of the county.

Well Liked by Young Farmers

His ability to impart the knowledge and benefits arising from such organizations among the large following among the younger agriculturists with the result that the Junior Farmers clubs of Hastings County stand out among those of the province.

But he did not confine all his efforts to the younger people. He took a deep interest in the promotion of county, urban and particularly school fairs and it is through his untiring efforts along these lines that the fall exhibition of the county, and especially those of the schools occupy the enviable position they now hold in the estimation of the province.

"Joe's" love of things agricultural is inherent. He was born in Oakville a section of sturdy agricultural stock. His younger days were spent in the meadows, the barns and the fields of his home and here was sown the seed for better agriculture that has blossomed into full flower, when he graduated from one of the foremost agricultural colleges of the province.

Faithfully he studied the three "Rs" at public school. Then on to High School where he "plugged" tirelessly through the languages. But always was that secret yearning for the wind-blown fields, the lowing cattle, the prancing of high-spirited horses and the many other phases of the farm that were part of his heritage.

And so it was that in 1907 "Joe" walked from the dignity of the halls of the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph with his diploma in his hand.

Started as Assistant

Proud in the responsibility reiled in him, the young agriculturist took up his duties as assistant representative in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, assisting in short courses and school fairs. From there he went to Norfolk county and stationed at Simcoe acted in the same capacity.

Branching out, he was taken to the Fruit Department of the government where he studied packing and boxing of apples, and inspection for export of one of Canada's first fruits.

Later he was transferred to Wentworth County, where he remained for three years. In the fall of 1928 he left Wentworth for Hastings County, where he has remained until his transfer of a few days ago.

His many activities during his stay here included the re-organization of school fairs, the organization and development of one month and three months short agricultural courses; out of which were born the many junior farmers' clubs that now flourish in this county and activities in the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association and other dairy work. He was mainly responsible for the completion of the tuberculosis test among the cattle of the district, while during 1929 the importation of many blooded sires of extra fine and first-class breeding in no small measure due to his activities.

"Joe" holds many positions of responsibility and trust in the various agricultural organizations of this district. He is treasurer of the Quinte Seed Growers' Association, Director of Stirling Farmers' Co-operative, Secretary of the Hastings Holstein Breeders' Association and president of the Rural Hockey league.

Regrets Inevitable Term

"My term of office among the farmers of Hastings County has been a most enjoyable one", Mr. Wilson stated last night, "and I wish to voice my appreciation of the support of the people of the various rural districts in assisting the many projects, that have been put from time to time. I sincerely hope they will give the same fine measure of support to my successor as they gave me during my stay here."

Further appreciation of the sterling work done by Mr. Wilson as Agricultural representative for this county is seen in a motion passed by the County Council of Hastings at the final sitting of their December session held in Shire Hall last Friday. The motion is as follows:—

"We, the Council of Hastings County, wish at this time to express our sincere appreciation for services rendered by Mr. Joseph Wilson, our Agricultural representative. He has been most faithful in his duties, energetic in his work, which has been productive of excellent results, particularly in the Junior Farmers' work. This County Council feels that they are expressing the sentiments of all ratepayers within this county in passing this resolution, most unanimously carried."

State officials of Japan, at home and abroad, have offered profound apologies to the governments of United States and Britain for the bombing of warships of both nations, with considerable loss of life, on the Yangtze River near Nanking. The attacks forced the most serious crisis which has involved the two nations since the Chinese war began and Japanese officials in Tokio were admittedly aghast at the incidents and their possible consequences. Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa (LEFT), pictured aboard his flagship during the drive up the Yangtze and commander-in-chief of the naval forces responsible for the attacks, offered personal apologies to British and American officialdom in Shanghai, while ambassador to United States Hirosi Saito is shown (RIGHT), as he left the office of Secretary of State Cordell Hull after offering his government's apologies. Question of Increasing Number of Coastal Ships in East Raised

London, Dec. 16 (CP)—The Royal Navy, has not reached any decision to send battleships to the Far East.

The question is constantly under discussion by the British naval authorities but it is not as for some time considered sufficiently grave to justify the movement of capital ships from home or Mediterranean waters.

Such a movement, it is felt, would raises absolutely essential, serve to render present difficulties more acute.

Question May Be Raised

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—The government in urge Great Britain to send more warships to Chinese waters was reported under way today in the House of Commons. The plea, it was forecast, would be voiced at noon, Tuesday's foreign affairs debate in the attempt to make sons considerably.

Advocates of the measure, who were not grouped along party lines, contended the fleet reinforcement would put a stop to attacks on British ships—such as the Japanese airplane bombing of the Yangtze River gunboats Ladybird and Bee and merchant vessels.

Government Watches Scene.

The government, after delivering its protest to Japan for the Panay bombardment, watched closely the events in both China and Hong Kong, a British Crown Colony.

Air-conditioning! Man has partially air-conditioned his house for a long time. Now comes the first built a fire in his tent to supply warmth, he regulated the draft and temperature, circulated the air by fans—another step in air-conditioning. These two, temperature and air circulation are very important air-conditioning factors. But there are two more to complete our control and to make an atmosphere that invites best in human efficiency. These are humidity or regulation and cleaning or freeing the dust of the air. Air-conditioning began with the fireplace and had to do first with the materials used. Now it is installed for that purpose and also for human comfort and efficiency. . . .

PREMIER HEPBURN ISSUES CHALLENGE

Dares Any M. P. to Deny Right to Export Power

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario today challenged any Ontario or Quebec member of the House of Commons to go to deny the, province the right to export surplus electrical power under contract.

"If they vote against permitting us to export surplus power then they are voting against the best interests of their constituents," the premier said. "They would be voting against lower hydro rates and increased revenues for both provinces."

Right of Ban Questioned.

Reports from Ottawa constitutional authorities doubted that the validity of the legislation forbidding power export could be challenged brought from Mr. Hepburn the statement: "I am not a lawyer, but law officers that the right of the Dominion to forbid the export of natural resources by the provinces, except as a war measure, can be challenged.

"All we are trying to do is to give the people of Ontario the power rates," he said. "As it is, the water is going over the dam and all we want to do is put it through the turbines."

Mr. Hepburn criticized Leopold Macaulay, the Ontario Conservative leader, for his criticism of the negotiating of new contracts with the Quebec power companies.

Refuse to Intervene

"It is rank hypocrisy on the part of Mr. Macaulay to criticize us for getting the province out of a mess for which a government he supported was responsible," he said. "He is like the fellow who robbed a store and then ran out into the crowd yelling 'stop thief'."

The premier said R. S. Robertson, counsel for the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission had been instructed to abandon appeal to the Privy Council against a judgment in favor of the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company. This judgment was on the strength of contracts now replaced.

PAPER'S COMMENT

Moscow, Dec. 16 (AP)—The government-owned Izvestia said today that Soviet authorities were seeking a couple posing as Mr. and Mrs. Robinson in the Hotel Metropole in New York.

This Izvestia asserted, the man and woman were suspected of spying on Soviet with intention of arresting them.

"Federal agents in New York investigating for the United States State Department the issuance of falsified American passports to the "Robinsons" pursued a theory the couple were espionage agents allied with an American Communist groupment had imprisoned.

opposed to the present regime in Russia.

Referring to the New York investigation, Izvestia said:

"The declaration of the State Department leaves little doubt we are dealing with some kind of suspicious persons who attempted to pass as Americans.

"Attention is drawn to the fact that Leonid Trotskyists are now suspected somehow with the affair and that the "Robinsons" were not Trotskyists but "innocent American citizens, whom the Soviet government had imprisoned."

INVESTIGATORS SEEKING CAUSE

Poke Through Wreckage in Hamilton That Caused $250,000 Damage

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—Investigators today were poking through the wreckage of the Steel Company of Canada's bonus recovery plant together with the cause of the explosion that caused $250,000 damage and took three lives.

James Osborne, 33, Thomas E. (Sammy) Wickings, 34, and Primo Reginelli, 33, were killed when the blast of undetermined origin sent flame through the 75-foot-high building yesterday. One other workman, Alex Stewart, 30, escaped.

A general alarm brought all available fire-fighting equipment to the scene of the blaze, one of the worst in the city's history. The fire burned throughout the day. Force of the blast carried the explosion from tank to 50 feet.

The three men died after fighting their way through flame and smoke to within a few feet of safety. The charred bodies of two were found close to a door. The body of the third was discovered in the corridor outside the building, two feet from an exit.

Maritimes Deny Participation in Provincial Alliance

Premier Hepburn Does Not Know of Maritimes Joining Alliance

(By The Canadian Press)

Reports of a Quebec-Ontario-Maritimes axis being in formation, Provincial relations—based on public remarks by Premier Maurice Duplessis —stirred provincial ministries across Canad today.

But indication that such an alliance was in the making met quick denial from the Maritime provinces and a statement from the premier of Ontario who said he knew nothing of the alleged pending Ontario and Quebec in an alliance for provincial rights.

Last night at a Shawinigan Falls banquet, Quebec's Premier Duplessis was reported as stating: "We in this province and in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces have decided that we will not be run for the Western Provinces. We are tired of it."

He added: "We are in the way of concluding an alliance by which we will not be run by the West. We are not going to be run by those who wish to do away with the autonomy of the provinces."

Orders-in-council by Manitoba and Saskatchewan to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial affairs, has opened the consideration of existing divisions of revenues and responsibilities.

East Denies Knowledge.

Premiers Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia, Allison Dysart of New Brunswick and Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island, headed knowledge of any impending alliance and of any moves by Premier Hepburn of Ontario. Premier Hepburn said he knew nothing about the Maritime angle.

Ontario and Quebec met in conference in Montreal last Monday and Tuesday, and conferences in Toronto next week, leading up to a joint or closely related stand on the question of power export and in presentation of briefs to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations.

REAR ADMIRAL IS RELIEVED OF POST

Teiso Mitsumami in Charge at Time Panay Was Bombed

Shanghai, Dec. 16 (AP) — Rear Admiral Teiso Mitsumami, chief of Japanese naval aerial operations, was relieved of his post today as a result of the sinking of the United States gun-boat Panay.

Domei (Japanese News Agency), which carried the announcement of his removal, said the Japanese government was acting swiftly to carry out its pledge to punish officers responsible for the attack.

It was explained Mitsumami was recalled because most bombardments in China were carried out by naval planes.

Foreign military and naval observers in Shanghai said they believed the Panay bombing and other attacks may have been made by young officers who had disregarded efforts of commanders to control their actions.

A miniature fleet of British and United States naval vessels bearing the three dead and most of the survivors of the Panay sailed today expected to reach Shanghai tomorrow.

Japanese forces planned a formal triumphal entry into fallen Nanking today, while other Japanese columns continued their push into the interior.

Cache of Arms Seized By French Authorities

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP)—A secret revolutionary committee declared by French authorities to have conspired against the government was linked by police today with a cache of arms found yesterday in a rest on a Paris garage.

The supply included six light machine-guns and eighty army rifles which investigators said were stolen from an army arsenal.

Gaston Jeanniet, owner of the building, was arrested after an investigation directed by Interior Minister Marx Dormoy. Jeanniet was quoted as saying the arms were stored there at the request of Jacques Curreo, who detectives described as one of the revolutionary plotters.

Liberty-Loving British Race Cannot Be Enslaved, Dunning Tells Empire Club

Will Organize in Future as in Past to Defend Freedom

RIGHTS OF CITIZENS

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—British people who have "carried their conceptions of ordered liberty to the ends of the earth, cannot be enslaved from within or without and will organize themselves in the future as in the past, to defend their liberty," Finance Minister Charles Dunning said in an address here today.

Speaking at a luncheon of the Empire Club, Mr. Dunning said the ability of free democratic nations, now united by any continental authority, to maintain their freedom against Fascist or Communist dictatorships was being questioned.

Each Nation Determined.

Answer to that question depended on full appreciation of free citizens of the rights they enjoyed. In all the parliaments of the commonwealth he saw expressions of the peoples' will to hold fast to their own system of ordered liberty. He saw also a determination by each nation of the commonwealth to put its defences in order.

Determination of British Commonwealth Nations that their parliaments have individual rights of decision and action in matters of peace and war "cannot be doubted. I believe we cannot withstand the force of dictatorships," Mr. Dunning said.

Answer Is In Union

"All our history implies the answer. Critics have made the same error in the past by failing to give full weight to the great human values inherent in a citizenship which holds the freedom of its institutions as the most vital of its possessions. Under such a system it lives everything is possible for a

STATEMENT MADE BY M. DUPLESSIS IS CHALLENGED

Three Maritime Premiers Know of No Alliance on Rights

OTTAWA SILENT

Premier Hepburn Does Not Know of Maritimes Joining Alliance

(By The Canadian Press)

Reports of a Quebec-Ontario-Maritimes axis being in formation, Provincial relations—based on public remarks by Premier Maurice Duplessis —stirred provincial ministries across Canad today.

But indication that such an alliance was in the making met quick denial from the Maritime provinces and a statement from the premier of Ontario who said he knew nothing of the alleged pending Ontario and Quebec in an alliance for provincial rights.

Last night at a Shawinigan Falls banquet, Quebec's Premier Duplessis was reported as stating: "We in this province and in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces have decided that we will not be run for the Western Provinces. We are tired of it."

He added: "We are in the way of concluding an alliance by which we will not be run by the West. We are not going to be run by those who wish to do away with the autonomy of the provinces."

Orders-in-council by Manitoba and Saskatchewan to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial affairs, has opened the consideration of existing divisions of revenues and responsibilities.

East Denies Knowledge.

Premiers Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia, Allison Dysart of New Brunswick and Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island, headed knowledge of any impending alliance and of any moves by Premier Hepburn of Ontario. Premier Hepburn said he knew nothing about the Maritime angle.

Ontario and Quebec met in conference in Montreal last Monday and Tuesday, and conferences in Toronto next week, leading up to a joint or closely related stand on the question of power export and in presentation of briefs to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial affairs.

REAR ADMIRAL IS RELIEVED OF POST

Teiso Mitsumami in Charge at Time Panay Was Bombed

Shanghai, Dec. 16 (AP) — Rear Admiral Teiso Mitsumami, chief of Japanese naval aerial operations, was relieved of his post today as a result of the sinking of the United States gun-boat Panay.

Domei (Japanese News Agency), which carried the announcement of his removal, said the Japanese government was acting swiftly to carry out its pledge to punish officers responsible for the attack.

It was explained Mitsumami was recalled because most bombardments in China were carried out by naval planes.

Foreign military and naval observers in Shanghai said they believed the Panay bombing and other attacks may have been made by young officers who had disregarded efforts of commanders to control their actions.

A miniature fleet of British and United States naval vessels bearing the three dead and most of the survivors of the Panay sailed today expected to reach Shanghai tomorrow.

Japanese forces planned a formal triumphal entry into fallen Nanking today, while other Japanese columns continued their push into the interior.

Russian Gold No Threat Says London Mining Engineer

Foresees One of Biggest Mines in Lake Athabaska Area

CANADA'S GOLD

Ottawa, Dec. 15 (CP)—Russian gold is no threat to world markets, Dr. W. A. Mcadam, London mining engineer last night told the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Russia, McCann said, did not appear to have large quantities of exportable gold on hand and if she did sell the market, it would be with gold accumulated over a long period.

Miles Minister Crerar predicted Canada's gold industry would increase production to 1,000,000 annually for many years to come. He predicted one of the biggest mines in the country would be found in the Lake Athabaska district within five years.

McCann, educated in Canada and formerly worked for the Federal Government, said he was convinced Russian gold production figures were falsified. The actual figures were a state secret and visitors to the country were shown only what the Russians wanted seen. While on a trip there last year, McCann saw dredges working gravel for the third time, significant from the standpoint of future production.

Complaints Registered, That Barriers on Certain Streets Removed

Complaints regarding motorists removing barriers that have been set up by the Public Works Department on certain street hills throughout the city, for the protection of children while sledding, were today registered by Chief Constable Chas. A. Mott to the Belleville Police Department.

At a recent meeting of the City Council four hills within the city limits were reserved for sleigh riding certain restricted hours in Belleville, during which the Public Works Department erect barriers for the purpose of stopping motor cars from coasting down these certain streets while biddies are sleighing down hill. City Engineer Mills informed the police today, that motorists, or other persons disobeying these regulations of barriers erected by his department and thereby endangering the lives of children while sledding, Police were asked to investigate the removal of such barriers.

In a letter addressed to Chief Constable Mott, City Engineer Mills outlined the bylaw as passed by the City Council last Monday night, in connection with the hills, stating that the following streets are to be reserved for sleighing, from time to time as may be deemed advisable for children of the city for sleigh riding, namely Church, Sleigh and Bridge south to Turnbull; Octavia Street from Catharine to north; Hider St. from Grier St. to St. Charles and Leighen St., from Pine St. northward.

Persons found removing or tampering with the barriers set at these points will be prosecuted under the bylaw, city officials revealed today.

Lou Myles' Home Destroyed by Fire

Blaze Believed to Have Started From a Faulty Chimney

Fire swept shrieked through city streets a few minutes after two this morning as fire apparatus raced to the home owned by Mr. Lou Myles on Herkimer Avenue that was blazing from the bellmen to have reported to have started from a faulty chimney. The house and contents were totally destroyed.

Fire bursting through wooden walls quickly enveloped the roof, spreading swiftly until the upper part of the house was a blazing inferno.

Hampered by the lack of water, firemen worked strenuously in an effort to combat the flames, but fought a losing fight as fire was powerless to keep ground floor of the structure. Only a few household effects were saved from the flames as heat drove would-be rescuers back.

The house which was insured, was occupied by a family by the name of Lacey.

HUNT FOR HOURS TO FIND BOYS BEHIND FURNACE

Police Hearing Mysterious Sounds Find Three in Store

BOYS ARRESTED

Hearing strange sounds police after midnight made a thorough search of two business houses and discovered three teen-aged boys hiding behind the furnace in the basement of the John Robertson Block, Front Street. For over two hours the trio of young lads evaded the efforts of the police in discovering their whereabouts. C. Arnold had discovered that entrance had been gained into the rear of the premises of Yan E. P. Dickens, confectioner.

Charges of breaking and entering the premises of the Dickens Company and Weaver's Music Store were today preferred against the three who were subsequently permitted to return home by the custody of their parents. The cases will be heard in a subsequent session of the Court. The boys are ranged in age from 13 to 15 years, it is learned.

While patrolling his beat after midnight, the officer found a transom leading into the rear of E. P. Dickens & Son's bakery had been forced open. Constable Arnott heard movements inside of the building and immediately took up a strategic position awaiting the exodus of the unknown persons inside. Later a door was opened, but when the Constable tried to force his way in the door was slammed and locked from the inside. Arnott immediately notified Sergeant Arthur Hannah, night sergeant in charge, who joined the force along with Constables Mills and Thomson. The building was surrounded by officers while Mr. Ernest Dickens, proprietor was notified.

Thoroughly Searched

Mr. Dickens unlocked the front door of the premises and the building was thoroughly searched, but no sign of persons in hiding was found. The police found evidence of all demonstrations strewn about the bake shop, where there were large quantities of candy and chocolate bars were also in evidence, these articles evidently the marauders the building had been rummaged. A search organ found on the floor caused the authorities to search Weaver's Music Store, next door, but, fortunately, no entrance being notified and coming down to open the door found Weaver's store had also been robbed and all the money in the cash register removed.

Still unable to find their quarry the police made a search of the basement of the East Robertson Block and were at last rewarded when they discovered three teen-aged boys hiding behind the furnace in the lower room of the building. One of the boys was found with his pockets filled with samples from the confectionery store.

Charges Preferred

After the apprehension of the three children, P. C. Arnott discovered a window bar outside the rear door of the Dickens and Son's shop. This bar had been used to pry open the transom through which it is presumed the lads gained entrance to the building, police stated today. The boys climbed through a small hole in the heavy wall between the two business houses entered.

Making subsequent search police discovered footprints in the snow behind the McIntosh Bros. Department store. The footprints led to a pile, at the rear of the building. Further investigation revealed persons climbed the pile, but no one had entered the building.

So thoroughly did the police search Front Street and the Red Robertson Block, that no exit was left uncovered, making it impossible for the intruders to escape.

Authorities said they were investigating other recent break-ins and robberies.

and Saskatchewan have urged that the Ottawa conference create a new specialist division of national economic (or of national expenditures) Minister, after which the personnel of the National Employment Commission would be transferred bodily. Mr. Dunning concluded by declaring that Mr. Perry's three direct relief measures would have to end, he believed, if he were all sincere. To continue direct relief means bankruptcy of the municipalities, he said.

Mr. Perrie had said unemployment and relief distribution in the Dominion and noted there was as yet no agreement regarding unemployment offices. As he spoke, Mr. Duplessis interjected that there should be no national employment offices "for we will not be burdened with the task."

Continued Several Times

The premier continued several times during Mr. Purvis' address.

"We in this province, and in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces, have decided that we will not be run for the Western Provinces," he said afterward. "We are tired of it.

"The Premier of Quebec cannot go further in direct relief," he continued. "We are in the way of considering an alliance by which we are not going to be run by Ottawa. We are not going to be run by those who wish to do away with the autonomy of the provinces.

"So-called business men, many of whom do not pay taxes, who settle their own business, are telling us how to run public affairs and that we are over-governed. We in Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces do not like being pestered even to take direction, no matter who it is from, in Ottawa. We do not care as to political direction.

"We in Quebec and in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces are not going to be run by the Western Provinces," Mr. Duplessis added. "And we are not going into any alliance which would mean sacrificing the keys to the door of prosperity."

Opposes Federal Methods

It was the second time during the evening that Premier had protested against federal methods. Earlier he had said, "All Ottawa wants a fight on its hands it can have it," commenting on the declaration of Premier Hepburn of Ontario that Quebec and Ontario were ready challenge validity of Dominion legislation governing power export to the United States.

The Province of Quebec considers that the provincial resources should be administered by the province, and that it is intolerable to permit interference or the general administration of affairs with our natural resources," he had said then.

In his address, given at the 36th anniversary celebration of the Shawinigan Technical Institute, Mr. Purvis said the number of persons on direct relief in Quebec, exclusive of New Brunswick, had been reduced to 98,000. Citing this figure, he asked what was to be done, adding that the federal government had made contributions toward relief work.

"Very insufficient," interjected Mr. Duplessis.

Work on Federal Basis

Mr. Purvis agreed that the government had done insufficient toward youth training and went on to urge means of training unskilled labor. He believed the work should be done on a federal basis, to prevent people from one province flocking into another. He said there had to be 'give and take' in training.

"What about this idea in practice?" asked Mr. Duplessis.

Angered by recent Japanese attacks upon American lives and property in China, to the point where Japan has been boycotted by many Americans, from the flowery kingdom, merchants and laborers of East Liverpool, Ohio, gathered together a huge pile of merchandise in bonds carrying the label "Made in Japan" and set this huge bonfire. The boycotted goods were removed voluntarily from the shelves of the merchandise establishments of 109 Rad Liverpool and district stores by the shop owners, who joined a parade which marched through the streets. Wm. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor urges a boycott against Japan.

Mr. Purvis said he would not go into that matter but another matter of practice had been discussed with Hon. William Tremblay, Quebec Labor Minister. Premier Perrie asked him to repeat the remarks of Mr. Tremblay and Mr. Purvis replied he would 'not so much because he had just "scratched" the elegance of the Premier.

Returning to his subject, Mr. Purvis said there had been an agreement on employment offices.

"They will be provincial," said Mr. Duplessis, telling the speaker he might tell that to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Quebec Not Accepting

"As far as Quebec is concerned we do not accept your plans", the Premier said.

In his earlier statement regarding power export, Mr. Duplessis contended the Dominion had laid down the principle that each province is "master of its natural resources" when control of resources was given back to the western provinces.

Premier Hepburn, accompanied by three of his Ministers, will be in Toronto next Monday to confer with Premier Hepburn and other members of the Ontario Cabinet. It is reported they discussed the power export question and the subject of submission of a brief to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial affairs when they met here Monday.

Stirling

Stirling — The members of the Central Hastings Ministerial Association held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Bridgeford at Queensboro on Monday, Dec. 13th.

Rev. Mr. Ferris, who acted as speaker of the day was Rev. A. W. Harding of Springbrook, who gave an interesting review of the book recently published by the Academy by Clyde Bryson Davis. This publication which was selected as the book of the month by a group of New York book reviewers had enabled within it much of interest to the clergy of today. Written in biographic form it described the experiences of the writer as he sought answers to the question "What is God", Approaching men and women in every walk of life the writer set forth his accumulated answers in a manner which at the same time promotes constructive thought on the part of the reader and delights him with an original strain of humour. It is a layman's view on the religious problems of the day. During the business part of the meeting it was decided that the Association would accept the invitation to meet with other such associations to be sponsored and held in the city of Belleville, within the next few weeks.

The next regular meeting of the Association will be held at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Tristram at West Huntingdon. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Bridgeford served luncheon and a social period followed. Among those present were Rev. A. W. Harding, Springbrook, Rev. W. Hunter, Madoc, Rev. Kennedy, Madoc, Rev. H. H. Lackey, Ivanhoe; Rev. Rosignole, Rev. James, Rev. Michel Stirling, and Rev. Oscar Wager.

St. Andrew's Young People's Society

The final meeting for the year 1937 of St. Andrew's Young People's Society was held in the Church parlours on Monday evening and took the form of a business meeting. President Roy Toby presided over the devotional period. The Scriptural passages were read by Mr. William Dermidy. A prayer of Christmas carols were sung with Miss Whanlrod at the piano. Then Rev. J. A. Koffend led in prayer.

The business part of the meeting began with the presentation of the secretary's report as read by Miss Ward. The president at this time led in constructive discussion on means of bettering the organization. Misses Lenora Ward, Margaret Rosebush and Mr. Wm. Dermody were appointed as a nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers at the next regular meeting, to direct the activities of the organization for the coming year. The meeting was then brought to a close with the use of another Christmas hymn and the benediction.

Two Hundred and Fifty Attend

Nearly three hundred dance lovers spent a most enjoyable evening on Wednesday night at a neighborhood dance held in the Stirling Community Hall Building. Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wicks acted as the committee in charge of arranging the affair. Music was provided by Messrs. Maurice Bell, Boyne Heath, Kenneth Stapley and Lester Rosebush.

Mitts assisted as floor manager. Lunch was served at midnight.

Consolidation Service at St. Paul's

Held in conjunction with the regular morning worship at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Sunday last was an impressive dedication service, when the memorial to the late Robt. Christie passed in the church by Mrs. Christie and his sister, Miss Christie, was formally dedicated. The memorial was in the form of furnishings for the obtain a table a spacious wardrobe and other necessities for the altar. Mr. W. J. Scott performed the interesting service. The furnishings were carefully selected by Mrs. Christie to harmonize with the decorative scheme of the Church auditorium recently completed, is a worthy schrine to the memory of her late husband who passed away about a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Spry, Miss Rose Spry accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ibbs of Tweed, left on Wednesday for Watertown, N.Y., to attend the funeral of the late Eli Spry, former resident of this district and brother-in-law of Mrs. Spry, who passed away at his home there on Tuesday of this week.

Trenton

Trenton, Dec. 16.—(Special)—In all probability the ballots cast in the recent town council election will be recounted. It was learned from a good authority yesterday that S. R. Westfall a member of the present council lost his seat by five votes on December 8, will ask a recount by Judge Deroche of Belleville. Westfall received 54 votes to Henry LaFleur's 540, thereby being elected by five. LaFleur held a position on the council board in 1934 and when he ran against R. R. Cory for mayor in 1936 he was defeated. Westfall has acted as Harbour and Public Works for the past three years and was also Reeve in 1935 by acclamation.

Belleville Body Presents Play

"The Christmas Story" a drama in three scenes was presented by the Bridge Street United Church Young People's Society of Belleville on Wednesday night at a meeting of the Trenton King Street United Church Young People's organization. The play was well received by the audience that filled the church parlours, and a piano solo was rendered by Bill Connor of Belleville after the drama. The program was concluded with a speech by Jack Storr of Albert College. All present enjoyed a game and sing community songs following a lunch served by members of the local club.

Y.O.N. Christmas Party

Mothers and children numbering three hundred in all were entertained by the executive of the Trenton Y.O.N. at the party Christmas party of the organization in the town hall yesterday afternoon. After the arrival of the ladies Santa Claus passed out over one hundred and fifty gifts to as many kiddies. The presents were arranged on a huge tree in the front of the room which was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

Miss Hazlett, local Victorian Nursing Sister, acted as hostess to the guests.

Hermans Society to be Organized

Trenton will have a new Hermans Society after the first of the new year according to Dr. Thomas Taylor S.P.O.A. inspector of this district. The old organization was disbanded some weeks ago when the entire reported it was unnecessary to carry on.

This new portrait shows Lady Anne Cavendish-Bentinck, daughter of the Marquis of Titchfield and granddaughter of the Duke of Portland, who according to rumors might become the new Belgian queen. Decked in Brussels, the rumor arose following an informal visit to the Duke of Portland by King Leopold.

LIBERTY

people, and without freedom nothing can have real and lasting value.

"I believe one of our greatest responsibilities is keeping alive and in full view the conception of human relations which has made the commonwealth what it is," said Mr. Dunning. This commonwealth is an ever-evolving organism, adjusting itself as required to changing conditions and to the progressive development of its many peoples.

Importance of Freedom

"We can sense the basic aspiration of British peoples, throughout their history, that they shall be governed by laws made by their own elected representatives and not by the will of one man or the will of any group not responsible to the people."

Mr. Dunning traced the growth of responsibility for government from the times of limited franchise when the vote was enjoyed by a few until the present, when in most countries of the commonwealth the responsibility now rests upon all adults equally."

In spite of dire prophecies that collapse would follow such widening of the franchise, "we have seen instead that our people have always been equal to the occasion and the orderly evolution of our institutions has continued."

Use of Vote

The one great factor standing against establishment of dictatorships in the British commonwealth, Mr. Dunning said, would be "continued responsible, active, intelligent use of the vote by the people as a whole — this was of particular importance at present.

"British peoples everywhere know all too well the price of liberty," Mr. Dunning. "But is there not a danger that we have become accustomed to the orderly use of the franchise, so much so that we see it as we do the daily wonders of nature, taking it for granted that nobody will disturb their operation?"

Progress Abandoned

In the early part of the present century a world trend toward popular government had been apparent, he said. During the past few years there had been a distinct reversal in important countries, Great nations had thrown aside the hard won progress of generations and abandoned their right to an effective voice in their own government.

History had proven Mr. Dunning said, that while dictatorships had never brought lasting contentment, live in human affairs, "there capable to destroy the liberties and institutions built up by others standing quietly revealed."

Democracy a Dictatorship

Even in British countries there were those seeking to convince their fellows that democracy could not be an effective mechanism and that the people must abandon their rights to government to avoid being overwhelmed by the massed efficiency of dictatorships.

"Those who accept this theory advocate centralization of authority in the commonwealth, and would have us become virtually a dictatorship," said Mr. Dunning. "Such a step would be a complete reversal of our course hitherto and would destroy all of that liberty on which our structure rests."

Since the Great War British nations had labored earnestly for peace and had gone further than the rest of the world in setting an example for disarmament, he declared.

Defence Today

"Rise and trend of dictatorships have rendered our efforts of little avail for the present," the Minister said, "and we have been compelled to give thought to the defence of our whole conception of ordered liberty against possible destructive aggression."

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Next June will see the Empire observance of the birthday of His Majesty King George VI. This arrangement will follow the request of the King so that the public may be able to enjoy a holiday when the weather is fine. On Tuesday of this week His Majesty marked his 42 birthday quietly with a royal family party in Buckingham Palace.

It is just a year since His Majesty ascended the throne in one of the greatest crises in British history and assuming the Kingship which he had not expected to fill, the second son of the late King George Fifth has rounded out a year to the great satisfaction of the people of the Empire. He had been, however trained in an apt school by his late father and the coming of George VI to the throne did not find him all unprepared, for his education and experience fitted him so that he might fill a place in the Empire's life.

In this his first year the monarch has earned the respect of all classes of the people for he sums up the Kingly qualities in a personality which pleases the people. King George Sixth has the highest sense of duty and fills the role of a constitutional monarch.

The King and Queen are maintaining the homely British virtues of the fireside and family to the joy of the people. In the love which the rulers have earned from the people, the two little Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, share.

King George Sixth has an ideal in his father the late King George Fifth, whose memory is revered within and without the Empire.

The correctness and zeal with which King George the Sixth has undertaken the duties of the kingly office satisfy the Empire that in him Britain has a monarch who will serve her well and whose name in history will be remembered for his royal virtues and his keen sense of duty.

A sense of security is thus created by the reign which bids fair to become one of the most famous in history, set as it is in an era of unprecedented world problems.

A UNITED STATES VIEW

The view is expressed in the New York Times that guarantees that there will be no repetition of such incidents as the attacks on United States ships and the sinking of the U.S. gunboat Panay by the Japanese cannot be worth the paper they are written on because "so long as a Japanese army remains in China there will be resistance on the part of the Chinese people as a matter of the former's guerilla warfare—and as long as this state of affairs continues there are bound to be cases in which Japanese troops mistake the identity of their victims. Experience during recent months has been ample to have decided to the contrary. One really valid guarantee that Japan can give in this matter would be the withdrawal of its invading army from the soil of China and the liquidation of this materialistic adventure."

The Times declares that the government of the United States is entitled to receive from its own citizens, a sympathetic understanding of the difficulties of its present problems, says that not even the Neutrality Act (which it calls "craven") "goes so far as to lay down the theory that American ships shall be forbidden to carry on a wholly peaceful trade on the chance that citizens who go to the Orient as merchants, or diplomats or missionaries thereby forfeit the protecting interest of their government." It points out that the administration is attempting to do three difficult things at once in China; protect the entirely legitimate interests of American nationals in so far as this is possible; to avoid being drawn into a war which is not of its own making, and to exert influence in behalf of an early and an honorable peace.

Similar aims are directing efforts and hopes of others of the great Western Powers as they view this extraordinary situation with its baffling place before their eyes in the Far East.

HON. DR. BRUCE HONORED

Hon. Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, who has retired as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, has won a place in the records of public service which will long be remembered. Honors paid him at the banquet in Toronto on Tuesday evening were no more than he deserved. Time itself will no doubt give him further honors as movements which he has sponsored, develop and reach fruition.

Of no man more than of the Hon. Dr. Bruce could it be said that he had assumed and filled the office in service to his country.

STAR-DUST.

I thought that stars could only shine in heaven
Until I chanced upon a deep, clear pool;
And watched entranced, one summer's night in June,
A sparkling gem reflect from depths calm cool.

Uplifting beauty dwells in humble things,
And yet I never dreamed that stars were cold,
Until some snowflakes pure, and chaste and white
Once magnified, revealed new stars untold.

How could I know that stars were ever warm,
Until I saw them light your eyes? How queer
Their glow should spread unto my very heart!
The dearest stars are yours, yet mine, my dear.

BOXING DAY IS IN THE OFFING

Boxing Day is an English holiday the day after Christmas, generally observed in the Old Land. Canada observed the holiday more or less generally one year, and again a question has arisen as to what shall be done about observing the holiday this year if anything. It is expected that the matter will be discussed at a meeting of the Belleville Retail Merchants Association.

THERE'S A RATTLING OF DRY BONES IN THE BRITISH ARMY, as the sayin' is, for there's a new all-highest commanding officer. None other than that much publicised and super-active individual who has shocked the average conservative Englishman out of his lethargy on more than one occasion, Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary of State for War, who was not satisfied with the machine given him to wage war with if necessary. Having served his time as a newspaper man affairs of state came easy to him and he has been making headlines ever since he decided to help govern the Empire. Hore-Belisha is housecleaning the army—tumbling some of the ancients from high places and substituting younger and more modern military men. Under new rules a soldier is due to re-enlist after serving seven years, and reservists can re-enlist and all are given a chance to serve twenty-one years and become eligible for a pension of $180 a year. Soldiers pay was raised by Hore-Belisha, soldiers' food improved, barrack life made more appealing for recruits. Many reforms have already been put into effect, and now he has abrogated the old constitution and authority to revitalize the high command. Hore-Belisha is perhaps best known for his attempt to improve highway traffic conditions in which he blasted old traditions and more than rattled the dry bones of precedent and all that. As Minister of Transport he first attacked the blowing of motor horns and succeeded in making London rather a quiet place after dark. It was charged that his horn regulations would make for more accidents, but the reverse was the case for motorists became more careful when they ceased to depend upon the horn to avoid accidents. Then, he came to the aid of pedestrians and invented what are now called "Belisha Beacons", a black and white post, topped with a big orange-colored china ball. These poles were to indicate both to pedestrians and motorists where the former had a right to cross and where the latter must slow up. Hore-Belisha remodelling and modernizing army conditions is the result of dissatisfaction felt by the government with the army which could keep up its supply of recruits while the navy and air force had no trouble in that regard. Hore-Belisha may be the little leaven which will leaven the whole lump and impart a great deal more efficiency to the British army which has been so accustomed to "muddling through" on ancient lines that it was almost felt the spell could never be broken.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

Obituary of Old Lady

We dislike writing the obituary of an old lady. It seems so futile trying to set down in writing the things she did. She was born, she grew up, joined a church, was married, became a mother and passed to her reward. The dates of her birth, marriage and death are mentioned but they are the least important in her existence. The story of her life is pitifully short.

The life story of her husband would record the facts of his existence and also of his business life. Perhaps, it would tell of political triumphs and of what he had done for the town, the district, the province, and the dominion. The stranger who might read it would understand that the town had lost a valuable citizen.

We cannot tell in writing the obituary of a woman of all the triumphs and disasters of her life. They would sound too petty. When as a bride she and her husband set up a home, she assumed responsibilities that she had never known before. She learned to spend long hours doing toilsome work that was never finished. Day after day the same things had to be done and she became an expert in doing them. But those things she did do, do not deserve mention in the obituary of her life. They were not outstanding.

She risked her life each time a child was born, and perhaps once or twice ventured so far into the valley of the shadow that she almost slipped away, and it was only by fighting with every iota of her strength that she, was able to pull through. Not always because she wanted to live, but because she was needed. There was a family for her to care for. But we cannot give credit for that. Mothers have been doing that since the dawn of time. She bended her children into the world and she washed them and dressed them and loved them, and kissed away their tears. She bandaged their injured fingers and toes, she nursed them through sickness and she soothed their pains through the long years when they were perhaps, everyone else was against them, and all the while she was encouraging her husband and helping him to be successful.

She made his home cheerful and restful. She listened to the stories of his troubles and encouraged him to try again when disaster overtook him. And when success would come and his head began to rise among the clouds she would gently pull him down to earth and continue the process of making a man of him. But she gets no credit for any of these things. It was what she was put on earth for.

At last she comes to the end of her toilsome journey and is laid to rest. Her funeral is attended by many who did not know her but who came out of respect for her husband or her children who are their friends. The minister reads from a slip of paper the uninteresting facts of her birth, her marriage and her death. He names the members of her family who survive her, but he does not tell all of the things that she did, partly because they were too long drawn out. You cannot put all that into an obituary. People might laugh at you for writing it, but that is about the life of the average East Kootenay old lady who has passed on.—Cranbrook Courier.

Bands Help Win Wars

Some of the United States armchair military strategists are saying that the days of the military band are numbered. At the recent army manoeuvres in Texas, there were fewer bands than usual. Now the plan is to do away with all but the bands in an infantry division from eight to one, and there are even advocates of no bands at all. Well enough for eminent theorists, for generals, and even perhaps for Brass Hats, but old soldiers—who never die but fade away—will still have their doubts. If they had said that there would be no infantry in the royal model armies, but only mechanized columns on wheels and caterpillars, and that no infantry, ergo no drum and fife, no bugle call, no trumpet strain, no skirl of the pipes—then it might have passed.

But while the backbone of any army is still the old footslogger, the old footslogger is surely fain to say, you will be apt to breed Yankee Doodle, Dicks out of Nothing, It's a Long Way to Tipperary and the Girl I Left Behind Me.

Why, some of those old soldiers can still remember how the Canadian Corps marched down to the front from Saint Omer, Lillers, the Old Salient, and roundabout through Northern France, down through Arras and the guns of Courcelette.

They had a weary march it might have been, but the infantilion bands returned in front of every unit mostly out of commission, if the men had not organized their own pipe and drum bands, like Little Gray Home in the West and Dicky Perrin's Pups, and Bert Ward, Christian Soldiers, all along the way, beguiling the muddy road to death for so many of them.

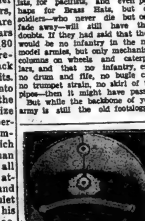
Jewelry Recovered Quickly by Police



Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—More than $100 worth of jewelry, pottery and trays, stolen from a Ford Sedan's car late last night were recovered by police here this morning after notice of the robbery was received. Cecil Brannigan, Cobourg jeweler, reported on a charge of theft. The jeweler left his car unlocked while he went into his store for a few minutes. He returned to find the articles missing. He notified police and Night Constable Gavin Reid was on his way to the scene of the robbery when he noticed a parcel-laden stranger on the main street. He took him to the police station where, it is alleged the parcels turned out to be the missing goods.

That Body of Yours

PERSPIRING FEET WITH DISAGREEABLE ODOR

There are so many individuals who suffer with perspiring feet with a disagreeable odor, that I, for, at least, once a year, to pass on suggestions to new readers, who may be afflicted.

Just why some individuals eating the same kinds of food, smoking at the same kind of work, and wearing the same type of shoes and stockings as others, should have perspiring feet with disagreeable odor, and others be spared this affliction is unknown. It would seem that just as some noses suffer with hay fever, asthma or eczema while others do not, so it is with perspiring feet.

Cleanliness must be over the washbowl, even if it means washing the feet and crying them thoroughly a number of times every day. Where the socks or stockings are removed they should be washed immediately in warm soft soap solution—about a dessertspoonful to the quart of water. Then after the feet have been washed in a boric acid solution of similar strength, rinsed and well dried, these dusting powdings should be put on.

On a previous occasion I mention-ed suggestions offered by the Journal of The American Medical Association:

"1—Bathe feet daily in an alum solution, one teaspoonful to a pint of water.

"2—Use an antiseptic dusting powder two or three times a day. Powder with one part salicylic acid, in powder form, to one, two or three per cent salicylic acid in equal parts of zinc oxide and talcum powder. (Boric acid 10 per cent) in Whitefield's ointment (a non-proprietary preparation) is also effective in curing stubborn cases of ringworm of the feet (athlete's foot).

"3—Wear large loose shoes to relieve pressure. Do not wear rubber shoes daily, airing the used ones.

"4—Xray treatment is best in obstinate cases."

Treatment every year for the past ten or twelve years I have outlined the treatment of Dr. Adolph Berlin:

"The feet should be thoroughly washed with soap and water, rinsed and dried. Then the soles and the skin between the toes are painted with equal parts of 36 per cent. formaldehyde (the commercial formaldehyde) and distilled water. The solution should be kept tightly corked in a bottle. This treatment should be repeated three each week for a period sufficient to prove prompt and lasts for four to six weeks, when the application should be repeated."

ODE TO A NAG

Oh, Horse, you are a wondrous thing!
No horns to honk, no bells to ring;
You're guaranteed for every year,
With plenty to stick on front and rear.

No sparks to miss, no gears to flip;
You start yourself, you're always ready.
No jolts in mounting every day
To steal the joys of life away.

Your inner tubes are full of oats,
And, thank the Lord, they stay that way.

Your spark plugs never miss and miss.

Your motor never makes a cuss.
Your frame is good for many a mile;
Your body's streamlined style.
You wants are few and easy met;
You're something of a gentleman.

TIME MARCHES ON

According to cleaning up an old attic, which newspapers was found, brown with age, but containing a story of the "The Buffalo Illustrated Express" of 1884. Under the heading "Fun" the caption "Some Toronto Comedy" as follows:

It is the custom of the Toronto Lunatic Asylum Patients", and is evidently a humorous one. The Toronto Mail says: "A very short time a test hospital will be established at the Asylum where all the patients will be examined. If it is found that any of them are suffering from consumption hospital cases from half a dozen counties will be sent there. They were willing to donate their services if by so doing they could get rid of having to work. Consumption is the White Plague, without travelling to the South.

The only advantage of the test hospital, Dr. Bryce, it was proposed, would be that the patients would be free of cooking, others for the cooking would have to be brought to be borrowed from the Mimico Reformatory.

This proposal was made in a meeting of the Provincial Association for Consumptives, which was attended by a marked change in the attitude of the Asylum Patients. It is a well known fact that consumption is contagious, and the tuberculosis bacilli are found in the sputum of consumptives. Methods which had been tried by the Association to prevent the spread of infection were slight return of the disease. Dr. Bryce, it was stated, was in favor of the establishment of tuberculosis in Canada.

Within the last few months days when patients were found to be suffering from consumption, they were sent to Muskoka, the beautiful summer resort of the Province, where they were given the best of treatment in their stay there was the cure was effected in a short time.

What will be done with the patients when the Muskoka and Toronto Hospitals are closed is not known. The Provincial Hospital for Consumptive Chronic Cases at Weston is overcrowded. Their great need is for accommodation for early cases. Additional staff, where needed, medical and nursing, for these may be given, accompanied by expert supervision.

Of course, such steps in country and city would be a great help in tackling the problem, but the Provincial Association for Consumptives will put forward five suggestions to the Provincial Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OR BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 16th, 1917

The banner held in the lecture room of John Street Presbyterian Church was a great success; the sum of $1,000 was realized. Belleville's intermediate hockey team is grouped with Peterboro, 2 Mr. H. R. Bradley of Oshawa is the convener. The schedule will be arranged at Port Hope. Belleville Juniors are grouped with Kingston and Cobourg. Mr. J. M. Hazlett is the convener. The meeting will be held at Kingston.

Miss Kate MacBeath of Madoc, joined a party of thirty-two ladies who are in attending to the wounded at Halifax; the rescue of the terrific explosion in the harbor at that port.

Mrs. A. C. Phillips of Arcola, Sask., is the guest of Mrs. W. H. Phillips, Commercial Street.

30 YEARS AGO

December 16th 1907

On Saturday last, Mr. D. R. Oliver of Sidney Township, placed his horse and cutter in charge of a man on Front Street while he conducted a boarding stable and yard. Towards evening he called for his outfit and found to his dismay that his horse and cutter were not in the yard. Upon investigation it was found that a woman from out of town had been given his outfit in mistake. In order to reach home Mr. Oliver had to take the horse and sleigh belonging to the woman whose name is not known. It is hoped that the mix-up will be straightened out eventually.

Old man Ricks struck it correct-ly when he prophesied plenty of snow this year. The goosebone weather prophet said we would have an open winter.

The ice upon the bay is of sufficient thickness to permit light vehicles to cross over it.

40 YEARS AGO

In last Saturday's Toronto Globe appeared a picture of the Yukon Detachment of Mounted Police preparing to go out thirty miles for a supply of wood. Among the number is the familiar face of Dr. Alfred Wills, one of our former residents.

Judge Frankland presided at County Court today.

The possibility of Mr. S. A. Gardner, Principal of Queen Victoria School, was fully exemplified last evening when over fifty of his pupils in his division called at his residence on Octavia Street and presented him with a beautiful marble clock. They did not forget Mrs. Gardner and presented to her a set of dressing pitchers. The children were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and their friends until after ten o'clock and the evening was most enjoyable.

The citizens were given an idea last evening of what Belleville was like in the early days of the town. There were no electric lights on the streets and as a consequence many a lady wandered from the straight and narrow walks and floundered in mud. The cause of the trouble was discovered by the electric light men this morning at the top of the Ritchie store where one of the main arteries was found to be broken. It has been repaired and there will be light tonight. Two ladies were lost on Bridge Street last night endeavoring to find their way to the weekly prayer meeting with the aid of the light from a lantern.

He also stated that he hoped Everett would never forget the Fourth Concession of Sidney and of his friendship to his son. Kenneth Holmes who is now a learner in the New Jerusalem.

A very appropriate address was read by Mrs. F. Jeffrey and a purse was presented to Everett by Mr. Roy Brickman. Everett was very much taken by surprise. He thanked his friends for their kindness and invited them to visit them in their new home. If they came one at a time or all at once. The Stars Say—

By Genevieve Kemble

For Friday Dec. 17

A particularly lively and exciting day is here told by the prevailing astral influences. Stirring events connected with a peculiar, intriguing or mysterious circumstance may divert attention from routine matters. Strangers as well as elders may figure in this, with adverse as well as favorable forces. Business, employment and private adventures call for circumspect management, tact, strategem, or possibly collusion.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in a year of curious, peculiar or mysterious circumstances, changes in employment, business and the private life. Strangers and elders may play a part in these affairs, and journeys in connection with grief. But in all there are auspicious conditions if managed with tact, subtlety or collusion.

A child born on this day may be energetic and progressive but also restless, changeful, desirous of impressionable and adventurous. It may have an unusual career, with fluctuating fortunes.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HIM

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

Dr DAD, the boy friend, husband or brother. It is a joy making gifts for a man who has style and a can of his favorite tobacco and you can't go wrong!

Any hobby how many pipes a real, honest-to-gosh pipe smoker has, is always welcome. He is the same category as the little girl who always wants a new doll, no matter how large a family she has.

Let's consider for a moment the big hobbyist in another thing his smoker would appreciate. This is a walnut and ivory smoking set, fitted with lead and bakie 12 ounces of tobacco. The briar pipes are set in a very attractive leather holder of chromium and mahogany. Which reminds me that a stand for pipes, one that will hold as many as a dozen, is another much appreciated gift.

Well, my fruit cakes are all made ready to serve on Christmas day, and to ship away, for I send some of my cake to relatives with whom I have other Christmas gifts. I am giving you fruit cake and plum pudding recipes today, in case you haven't made your cake or decided on your plum pudding recipe.

Today's Recipes

MID-WINTER PIE — Pour one cranberries, three-fourths cup orange juice, one teaspoon grated orange rind, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter, melted; two and one-half tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca. Grind or chop cranberries, add the juice and rind of orange, sugar, melted butter, tapioca and salt. Mix well; pour into pastry lined pie plate and bake about 45 minutes in hot oven (450 degrees F.)

DARK RICH FRUIT CAKE — One-half package raisins, two packages currants, one and one-half packages citron, one and one-half three-ounce packages sliced citron, two three-ounce packages blanched almonds, two three-ounce packages sliced lemon peel, one three-ounce package cherries, one three-ounce package sliced pineapple, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-half teaspoon allspice, one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half cup butter, one-half cup molasses. Cut dates and raisins in halves. Mix and sift fruit and spices in bowl. Sift flour, salt, soda, and spices over fruit and mix; cream butter; stir in sugar gradually, then beaten eggs. Add flour and fruit mixture; mix well with coffee and molasses. Pour batter into large paper-lined pan; bake in slow oven (275 degrees F.) three hours. This makes four pounds cake.

PLUM PUDDING — One pound raisins, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda, two teaspoons mace, one pound suet, chopped fine, two teaspoons cinnamon, two teaspoons clove, two teaspoons nutmeg, one and one-half pounds currants, one cup melted butter, one pound raisins, one-half pound pulverized dates, cut; three-fourths cup dark corn syrup. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add carrots and shortening and mix well. Add remaining ingredients and blend thoroughly. Oil molds and fill two-thirds full of mixture; screw tightly with waxed paper and steam five hours. Bake plum pudding in little crocks, use for gifts.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Pioneer Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Thinks He Loves Stranger

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Lately I have become engaged to a very lovely girl, whom I love very deeply. She says she loves me. I'm sure she likes me very much, for she is willing to marry me, but she isn't in love in the same way that I am, and this bothers me. What do you advise me to do? Am girl incapable of love?

Bachelor

Girls vary a great deal, my dear Bachelor, in degree of love but also they are capable of love, but so do boys. Sometimes they mistake for romance to feel more than a mild degree of love, for, perhaps, it lacks the ardor of temperament that you yourself possess. If you really in love, you make good her love in return, I do not see why you should hesitate. It will reassure you somewhat to know that the intensity you feel is absent, may develop in her later.

A Lover's Quarrel

Dear Miss Fairfax:

About two months ago, I had a quarrel with a very dear boy friend. I really was to blame, because I said something very silly which I regret very much indeed. I just slipped out. I have seen him since, and have talked to him on the phone but every time we speak, we quarrel. I know he still cares for me, for I love him, and I just feel terrible after every quarrel. What can I do to bring us together again on the old footing?

Puzzled

You know, my dear, it takes two to make a quarrel if you positively refuse to be the party of the second part—the fussing is bound to stop.

Her Actions Not Worth Worrying About

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For two years I've went together "steady" and then for no reason at all simply broke up. I don't know why he has left me so much.

Now, when I see her, she kisses me and wants me, but doesn't want to see me because she throws herself in my head and calls me endearing terms. I'm greatly baffled by all of this. Do you know what to think. Can you solve this riddle?

C. H.

Sounds to me as if she might have taken up with someone else for more worldly considerations than you have to offer. And that when she sees you the old feeling comes back. Her behavior is so unaccountable; I wouldn't lose any sleep over her.

Self-Discipline A "Must" Cure-

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm engaged to a girl of 17, with whom I've been going for three years. We love each other devotedly, but sometimes she flies off the handle and won't speak to me for half an hour. And then she acts like her old self and is sweet and affectionate. I tell her some of the things she says when angry, during, and she tells me what she's "said." I should let her alone and pay no attention to her till she is over her temper fit.

I wonder if something can be done about these scenes.

Mac D.

Yes, something can be done about it, but the girl will have to do it for herself. I think all of us enjoy flying off the handle occasionally and indulging in tantrums, but as we grow older we learn that these fits ruin our looks. Few people wants to be those who lack self-discipline.

Daily Care of Cuticle Keeps Nails Attractive

ALICE FAYE

Gives her pearly nails excellent care.

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" History tells us that when the Pharaohs ruled Egypt, it was customary for women's fingernails, as they are today, to be long, pointed and colored a vivid orange, blue or red. Even way back in those days, manicuring was considered an important rite, you see, and it has increased in importance ever since.

Modern women's hands, on the whole, are far more presentable than they've ever been in any other era. However there is cod step in nail care that a great many women neglect nowadays, and that is the half-moon on each nail. The cuticle, if neglected, tends to quickly adhere to the nails and to cover the half-moons partly or entirely, but it really is possible to develop perfect half-moons and to retain them if they are given proper care.

The secret lies in preserving attractive half-moons on the nails is that the cuticle must not be given an opportunity to adhere to the nails. Naturally, then, only wishes attractive fingertips should not be content merely with manicuring them. That's a great help, of course, but she must give her nails daily care, too, if she's aiming for perfection.

Give Daily Massage.

Give your cuticle a daily massage. A bit of cotton should be wrapped about the end of an orangewood stick, and then dipped in cuticle or warmed olive oil. Then each nail should be gone over with the cotton tip, working the stick from the nail tip up to the cuticle. Next the orangewood stick should be passed over the base of each nail and the cuticle gently pushed back. There should be repeated over each fingertip every single day. Perhaps once is needed to keep the half-moons perfect.

If you haven't time for this daily procedure, you can benefit your fingertips somewhat merely by the manner in which you wash your hands and the way in which you use your hand lotion or cream before retiring each night. When you wash your hands, give them a bit of a massage, rubbing the lather around the cuticle on each nail and gently pushing back the cuticle with your fingertips. After rinsing your hands well, take your towel and go over the cuticle again with the fingertips. Then, when your hands are dry, rub the towel from the tip of each nail up to its cuticle, and finally follow the line of the cuticle with a firm but gentle pressure. After cleaning hands in this manner, a good hand lotion or cream should be used as needed. Sometimes massaging such a lotion in, give your cuticle a final massaging. This fingertip care will not only add to the beauty of your hands, but will also help to prevent hangnails, and will also help to keep dry, colorless school expenses doctor bills taxes insurances and so forth.

Thus they can see for themselves where the money goes; can salary themselves that you and Father are not "holding out" on them.

Naturally it will sometimes promote argument. John and Alice and Mary may disagree with you as to the wisest way to spend Father's salary. But the decision is still yours and if you hear the children's point of view, it gives you a chance to refute their arguments, not vaguely, but in black and white figures. It gives them a chance to learn and at times when you cannot agree, John or Alice, knowing your reason for refusing cash, at least will not resent the refusal in the same way.

Child Should Learn Cost Of Living

When Parent Refuses Children Money, He Ought to Tell Why

(by Lisa Grenelle)

"How do you make children understand that you can't afford to give them something that many of their friends have, like a bicycle or a big doll carriage?" E. A. wrote me recently.

"My children are always asking for this and that, at Christmas and birthday time, and when I tell them I haven't enough money, you can say they believe me, I suppose, or they see me handing money out to the butcher and baker, and my purse always seems full, to them.

"I know one time John tip-toed up and peeked in my purse, as I was paying the vegetable man, and cried, 'Gee, Mary you told me a fib. You've got lots of money.'

"I scolded him for peeking and had to explain to him, too, that I had to save that money for necessities, since it had to do me the rest of the week. But he could not understand.

Hard on Father

"I got angry then, and told him he was ungrateful and all that. But it didn't do much good; it just made him sulky. I guess that's the way I feel sometimes, especially when they're sure they're right, and aren't understand.

"It's hard on the children's father, too, the way they're always begging him for money or for something it takes money to buy. It worries him and he hates to refuse.

"I scold the children for worrying their father, and succeed in worrying him a lot. But you can see, even when they obey me, that the children hate it against us both. You can see they think that we really could give them more if we wanted to, and that hurts both Father and me a lot. Children nowadays seem to think their parents are made of money, and nothing you can say or do seems to convince them otherwise.

"Is there any way you know of to make them understand, Miss Grenelle?

Gives Solution

Yes, E. A., I think I know of a way to make them understand. Why not actually sit down to put the whole business down on paper.

Have a big sheet of paper old your John and Mary are, but I am sure they are not too young to understand that a family budget is all laid before them on paper, and clearly explained. That Father's salary, any on one side of the page, then the food, and will also be listed, laundry, clothes school expenses doctor bills taxes insurance and so forth.

Thus they can see for themselves where the money goes; can salary themselves that you and Father are not "holding out" on them.

Naturally it will sometimes promote argument. John and Alice and Mary may disagree with you as to the wisest way to spend Father's salary. But the decision is still yours and if you hear the children's point of view, it gives you a chance to refute their arguments, not vaguely, but in black and white figures. It gives them a chance to learn and at times when you cannot agree, John or Alice, knowing your reason for refusing cash, at least will not resent the refusal in the same way.

Expert at Sports Wears Smart, Simple Clothes

By LIBERTY

Under 16 the present interest in winter sports isn't a healthy reaction on our part to the prevailing lazy mode of riding everywhere in automobiles and getting practically no exercise.

Whatever causes it, it is a fine thing. Skating, skiing, hiking in the snow, coasting are all good for our bodies and our souls.

The comfortable, sensible and smart costumes designed for these active sports add to their allure. You can get a great deal of enjoyment in the keen air and sparkling cross-ed in any old duds, but any woman gets the maximum pleasure when she knows that in addition to the exhilaration of the atmosphere she looks well and suitably dressed.

If you want people to think you really know something about the sport of skiing, you will wear clothes that are simple in cut and conservative in color—no extremes or gadgets. The young woman under 16 is wearing Norwegian jumping pants in plain navy blue wool gabardine lined with lightweight wind-proof balloon cloth. Her Norwegian ski pants is navy wool gabardine, pranked [illegible] heads, wind proof [illegible] and [illegible] scarf, [illegible] right, black velvet [illegible] dress lined with royal blue jersey. Jersey shorts.

Color Added.

A splash of color is added by a knitted scarf and wind-proof, fleece lined mittens in scarlet. This year it is extremely chic to go hatless when skiing.

If there are an expert skater and can cut figures on the ice, you will be thrilled to have as flattering a costume as this one of black velvet. Under the zippered-up jacket are delectable accordion pleating on the full, circular skirt. When the skirt blows up as you skate, the wide royal blue jersey facing of the hem and the little blue jersey shorts may be seen. The Hungarian head wrap trims the jacket and suspenders is in blue velvet. Write to Miss Dorothy Lathrop design.

If you are not an expert on skates, maybe it would be better not to have a contrasting color to line your skirt. It undoubtedly calls attention to you, and this may be undesirable. Until you grow more expert, eh, what?

Poems That Live

LEAVES

One by one, like leaves from a tree,
All my faults have forsaken me;
But the stars above my head
Burn in white and delicate red,
And beneath my feet the earth
Brings the sturdy grass to birth.
If who was content to be
Set a silken-singing tree,
Such a rustle of delight
In the wistful heart of night—
I have lost the leaves that know
Touch of rain and weight of dew,
Blinded by a leafy crown.
I looked neither up nor down—
But the little leaves that die
Have left room to see the sky;
Now for the first time I know
Stars above and earth below.

Up to that time there was only linen thread, and if Washington never could have had spools to play with. And George Washington never ate ice cream in the summer time and ice in drinking water on the Fourth of July. He did have a well filled with ice from the Potomac river when he lived at Mt. Vernon, but ice cream soon melted. Nobody knew how to store ice for the summer in those days; and, of course, no one dreamed of a refrigerator.

How Heart Malady Is Diagnosed

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M.D.

THE FORM of heart disease which kills chiefly due to affection of the small blood vessels of the heart muscle itself, variously called "angina pectoris" or "coronary thrombosis," is probably increasing more rapidly than any other form of heart disease.

People are easily frightened by pains in the heart, however. Of about sixty patients who complained of heart pain, over half of them were not found to have any real angina, and even with real angina, the psychologic attitude has a great deal to do with the attacks. In the same series of cases 31 of the people were subject to mental attacks and disturbances and psychologic upsets, such as anxiety states and anxiety hysteria. I have heard that angina pectoris is practically unknown among the Chinese, although they have every other form of heart pathology. Physicians who have practiced there state that they have never seen a case of angina in a Chinese person. This interesting observation shows that the unemotional character of the Chinese mind probably keeps them from worrying about angina, if it occurs, and therefore they do not complain about it.

Our methods of diagnosing and treating angina are improving regularly. A patient may have very severe heart pains and yet have no change in the size of the heart or in the blood pressure or in the sounds of the heart as examined by the stethoscope, but if the disease is really present it will show up in a heart tracing—electrocardiogram.

Another method of diagnosis which has been developed is the observation of the reaction of the patient to exercise. True angina can usually be brought on by exercise. False angina, due to tobacco usually, on the contrary goes away with exercise.

Activities Should Be Limited

In treatment, the most important thing is the limitation of strenuous living. If the patient with angina will bank his fires and be content to reduce his activities, he may continue to live comfortably for many years. This specter of the national life (for contrary to the Chinese, angina is particularly an American disease) will probably continue to be with us. It is a disease of middle life or late middle life, and the fact that it is increasing is, therefore, really a depressing problem. The fact that we have on the side for optimism the decrease as pernicious anemia and diabetes is well simply because that means people are saved from their dangers and live into the angina period. In fact, when we can say pernicious anemia was an absolutely fatal disease, it is rare to see any body dying of pernicious anemia if they have been put on liver treatment, and the experience of a large clinic has been that most of the patients who have pernicious anemia and are under treatment, die of angina.

Young Relative Makes Home Crowded, Shows No Gratitude

By VIRGINIA LEE

MY FRIEND, the child psychologist, states that a properly brought up child will respect others' rights and show consideration for them.

That is to say that if a youngster is trained from his earliest years to wait upon himself when he is able, to respect the possessions of the rest of the family, and to do his share in the household chores, he will be a popular member of any circle, and a good citizen.

Maybe I exaggerated a little, but that is the gist of his theory.

Now what is wrong and, fully grown, goes to live with a relative in a very small apartment where his mere presence is a inconvenience, when he expects and retires to pick up after him all the time, to cook his meals, whether he is ready for the other family members of the family or not; often he refuses to lift his hand to help in any way, or to show any appreciation for things that are done for him. I am sure the good psychologist would say he had been improperly applied when he was young.

But what I am sure you have been thinking, my dear Mrs. L. A. I can see no reason why that should prevent mother from up your small place and make such a hero of herself. If he was a little child that you could hope to correct or show the error of his ways, with some hope that he would reform, it would not be so bad. He is, however, of age, capable of taking care of himself, and there is needs the training he would get in fending for himself and taking his chances at a regular boarding house.

I think your husband shows very little affection or consideration for you in his attitude. Couldn't you leave the two alone for a few weeks—go for a visit—and find out how they get along? Maybe your brother will get a glimpse then of what you have been enduring, and he would back you up in asking that young relative to move elsewhere.

Recently in this column I answered a letter from YOUNG WIFE. Her husband was perfectly satisfied with his job and his home, with his wife and children and did not want outsiders in his home. It was too bad, as the husband who works has associates on his job and can easily be entertained to stay at home when he gets home. But the wife is at home all day and does need a change.

But why make yourself miserable about it? I suggested to the wife? Do your best to help your husband to be sociable, but if he cannot overcome his shyness or whatever it is that makes him that way, have your friends in during the daytime. Women can join Parent-Teacher associations, spend occasional afternoons with special friends. She will be happy that you have a good home, a kind husband and children.

UNDECIDED: It seems evident that your first love friend who went away has cooled a bit toward you. It is apt to be the way when two people live in different cities. Nothing arise which a good talk would straighten out, but letters just naturally things up more.

I don't think you should marry this boy who is younger than you. The difference in ages would not matter if he was of age, but I think any man is better off to wait until he at 21 or over before marrying. He knows his own mind better.

In fact, that is what he will have to do—marry for him. He probably does not love you because he is afraid he WILL be held responsible for her trouble. Sorry you fell in love with so unworthy a young man.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—Promoter Jack Kearns, who has tied more tin cans and diverse them in Dempsey's direction than any other three men, has picked a new prospect to succeed the Manassa Mauler as champion of the world.

"Adamick is the boy who's going to bring the title ALMOST-ING back," said Kearns today. "He's the greatest prospect to come along since I have been in the fight racket. He'll be champion just as soon as I can get him after Schmeling or Louis."

Louis Runs Away

What caused Pollo to listen is the fact that Kearns still is a smart operator. That also explains why Joe Louis the other day made a particular point of saying he positively was not going to meet Adamick in one of his "warm-ups" this winter.

Kearns has brought Adamick, a former Golden Gloves champion, along slowly and carefully. Under Jack's wing he's piled up knockouts like 80 knockouts, including a quiet one over Maxie Rosenbloom.

"So Detroit they think he could stop Louis in a couple of rounds?" Kearns declared. "I think he could, too, but there's not a chance of getting Joe into the ring with him next year nor Schmeling either. Adamick is in a class by himself at present, of course, but he's not as much general interest as Louis or Schmeling."

Although the Anti-Nazi propaganda adverse to Schmeling is rampant in the States, Schmeling himself made the unforgetable error of telling most of them last June: Schmeling emphatically said he would beat the heavyweight champion back in Germany, if he won it again, and all challengers would have to come the Atlantic to get a crack at him in the Fatherland. Ernie Whelphey, employee of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, was in Toronto last night attending the annual meeting of the referees and coaches of the O.H.A. During many years of quibbling the three major harness horse societies got together in New York and passed rules that will have a long effect on the harness racing game. Most important to the public is the standardized system of scoring that has brought harness racing into line with a large degree. The governors of racing have passed a resolution to the effect that every horse instead of coming to the wire on the fly, for the first time in the history of their racing after they leave the wire instead of the first of the grandstand. The same system of classification has been in force and the satisfactory operation have all been put under one head. Before a horse could be entered it could not compete on a track of another society. Without holding a horse to the classification under that society. This has been changed to have a horse registered under any society but eligible under that classification at all courses. The harness racing is coming fast and Eastern and Ontario should form an association the same as the one operating in Western Ontario and have the star meet on a regular circuit.

HORNETS RIDING ON A WIN STREAK

Pittsburg Wins Over Ramblers to be Undefeated in Several Games

That caustic complainer Jack Adams can get a little consolation by reading in the newspapers these days of the way Pittsburgh Hornets are doing things up brown in the International-American League.

Adams hasn't had much happiness from the shooting of his world champion Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League this season. But while their "puppy" club is slicing Hornets, the Detroit farm team, are riding now on the crest of a seven-game undefeated streak.

The figure, as the hockey world calls Adams, has the knowledge. Hornets are being helped greatly by three former Wings, Kilrea, Johnny Sorrell and Pete (Shell) Kelly. In fact, since Sorrell and Kelly were sent to Hornets at the first of this month when Adams shook up his team Hornets have won three and tied one of four games.

Kilrea and Sorrell did their bit last night as Hornets humbled their match with a 5-1 victory over Philadelphia Ramblers. In the only other game of the night Providence Reds whipped New Haven Eagles, 5-3, to go into a first place tie with Hornets for the lead in the league's eastern section.

GOMEZ CAPTURES COME-BACK ROLE

Voted Most Outstanding Individual Come-Back During Year

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)— Story of the year's outstanding individual come-back in any United States sport, by expert vote, is Vernon Gomez, slender southpaw of the world champion Yankees, who took a big salary cut last winter and then proceeded to vaporize No. 1 rank for effectiveness among American League pitching hurlers.

Gomez who climaxed the end of a two-year slump by pitching for Giants on their cars twice in the World Series, gained a decisive margin over all rivals in the seventh annual poll of leading sports writers by Associated Press.

His tally today showed 19 first place votes for Gomez and a point total of 68 tabulated on a 3-2-1 basis for the trio of come-back choices posted by each contributing expert. A total of 23 votes was polled.

Ralph Goldsall, who topped off a wonderful golfing comeback by capturing the United States Open Championship, that heavyweight champion Joe Louis for runner-up honors. Goldsall collected nine first-place votes and outpointed Louis, 40 to 34, to add proof for his rise to title heights after being knocked out the year before by Max Schmeling, the 1936 winner of the comeback poll.

6 TEAMS ENTER TRENT VALLEY

Activities Will Start on December 29th With All Teams in Action

Stirling, Dec. 16 (Special) — A meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League was held in Stirling on Wednesday evening for the purpose of drafting a schedule of the season's play and to receive the entries of teams and the sanctioning players. As a result of previous meetings held it had been reported that eight teams would take part in the play with the district being divided into two sections, north and south. With two sections, north and south. With only six of the eight teams represented last night it was decided to draft a double schedule for one group of six teams: Madoc, Tweed, Stirling, Campbellford, Trenton and Belleville. Sailors of last year, all being represented at the meeting, and keenly interested to get things under way.

President Earl Fox of Stirling presided over the meeting and Secretary C. A. Wells presented several reports during the business period. Difficulty encountered in arranging dates for the schedule which were satisfactory to the needs of all clubs resulted in Dec. 29 being selected as the date to begin the season's activities and a committee composed of the president, secretary and T. W. Solmes of Stirling being appointed to draft the schedule for the remaining games of the season.

The revival of interest in the old Trent Valley League with the return to the battle of Campbellford should be welcome news to supply the brand of hockey for which the league has always been famous. Madoc, Tweed, Trenton and the Belleville Sailors, semi-finalists of last season, will complete the aerielist which starts things going on Dec. 29.

LEADING SIRE IN THE PORTER

Placed Three Sons And One Daughter Among 30 Leading Money Winners

New York, Dec. 16 (CP)—Down in Kentucky's farm country, far removed from the acclaim of a racing public well aware of such track stars as Seabiscuit and War Admiral, John Ray Whitney's the Porter ranked today among the leading sires of 1937 as the year's leading sire.

The 23-year-old son of Sweep placed three sons and one daughter among the 30 leading money winners of the United States turf during 1937.

Seabiscuit and War Admiral were the progeny of Hard Tack and Man O' War, respectively. They perhaps gained for their sires more prominence than the Porter attained but not as much general racing success.

With War Admiral's retirement from racing for 1937, Man O' War's best any chance of overtaking the Whitney stallion which, up to early December, had 34 sons and daughters that finished first in 39 races. Their final monies alone amounted to $242,022.

Wrestling Last Night

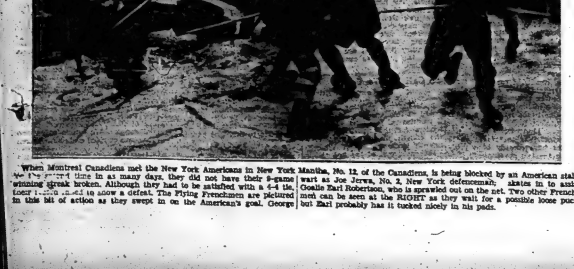
By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J.—Dano O'Mahoney, 223 Ireland, defeated Gino Martinelli, 202 Italy, 19:17 (Martinelli dove out of ring and broke thumb).

Milwaukee, Wis.—Gus Sonnenberg, New York defeated Ray Steele, Omaha, Neb., decision. Referee halted bout when Steele, claiming injuries, refused to wrestle.

St. Louis—Jim London, St. Louis, threw Johannes Van Der Walt, Johannesburg, South Africa, 40:56.

With a scoring splurge punctuated five goals in two games, George Mantha, fast-skating forward of the Montreal Canadiens, has risen rapidly in the scoring race. He is in second position, with only Gordon Drillon, of Toronto Maple Leafs, ahead of him. George is one of the veteran Canadien players, and is also probably the most hatless-headed player in the National Hockey League. So far this season he has been void of injuries, but that old nemesis of hockey players may catch up with Mantha before very long, considering the speed with which he is patrolling his side of the rink.



Hunting is the winter diversion of many ball players, among them Slade Ferrell, catcher for the Senators. Here's Slick with a couple of his assistants at Troy, N.C.

Between stanzas of the Miami Biltmore $10,000 open golf tourney, held at Coral Gables, Fla., Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee, Pa., obligingly poses for Mrs. Thomson as she measures him for the pair of new she's knitted. Thomson shattered the course record with a 68, which brought him to within a point of Johnny Revolta, the winner. Thomson and Ellsworth Graf tie for second to split the second and third money.

That's some wing-spread being displayed by Joe Duddick, of Canisius College, of Buffalo, N.Y., one of the tallest centres ever to play basketball, with the help of Joe Masterson (LEFT), forward, and Herb Levine, guard, both of whom stand at 5 feet 10 inches, a foot less than their ceiling-scraper companion. Of course, the rule changes take away some of the giant pivot-man's usefulness, as the Griffins no longer can control the tap through him except at the start of each half, but his size makes him valuable retrieving balls off the backboard.

When Montreal Canadiens met the New York Americans in New York Manitha, No. 12, of the Canadiens, is being blocked by an American stalwart as Joe Jerwa, No. 2, New York defenceman, skates in to assist Goalie Earl Robertson, who is sprawled out on the net. Two other Frenchmen can be seen at the RIGHT as they wait for a possible loose puck, but Earl probably has it tucked nicely in his pads.

Redmen Tie for Second Place In VanHorne Memorial Series By Defeating Kingston 4-0

"Wink" Wilson And Clayton Jackson Score All Goals

NEW UNIFORMS USED

Discounting the old adage of defeat lurking in new uniforms, the Belleville Redmen not only sniffed at the superstition, but proved it unfounded last night when they defeated the Kingston City pucksters 4-0 in a regular Van Horne Memorial series game at Kingston. The Redmen's victory elevated the local puckisters into a tie for second place with the vanquished Kingston squad and only a notch out of the top hole.

The Redmen scored in every period and were minus the services of Bill Jackson, their shifty centreman who was confined to his home by illness. Walter Gerow, Jr., of the Napanee junior team, was pressed into service and used at left wing on the initial line to an advantage. Gerow teamed splendidly with Wilson and Clayton Jackson, the latter scoring from left wing to centre for the night.

Slow Checking Game.

The first two periods saw torrid checking throughout the entire 40 minutes of play, "Wink" Wilson leading the first counter in the last few seconds of the initial period. The Redmen played a stellar type of defensive hockey, the forwards checking back nicely while the rearguard stood its ground superbly. Wink tied the score shortly after being given the necessary protection by Referee Edwards and Murphy.

Clayton Jackson sank the Belleville counter No. 2 and only a split second before the bell sounded to terminate the second period. Gerow in the third period Jackson banged his second counter as he beat Grosselli, the Kingston goalie, from close in. Wilson rifled goal number four later in the period from a difficult wing position. Bill Skorna, Freddie Baines and Jimmy McIntyre starred to make up the Redmen's second line and played fine defensive hockey to keep the Limestone City snipers off the scoring sheet. The Redmen can still better their position in the Van Horne Memorial series by winning over Kingston Clarence next Wednesday night.

FALCONS, HAWKS QUALIFY FOR CAGE FINALS

Spirited Basketball Seen in City Semi-Final Games

Winning their semi-final games in the Y. M. C. A. house basketball league, the Falcons and the Hawks qualified for the city basketball finals by winning their semi-final tussles last evening. The final game between the Falcons, who have gone through the entire league schedule undefeated to date, and the Hawks, who have lost only one game, to the Falcons, the champions will be played next Wednesday evening.

The Falcons were forced to the last ditch in winning over the Eagles 4, their semi-final game that proved no pink tea party however, the players becoming rather personal in their checking as the game progressed. The Falcons finally won by the score of 13 to 14.

Trailing 12 to 8 at the halfway mark the Eagles made a determined stand in the last half, led by Herb Burley, but their efforts went unrewarded. Cole Rowards and Kerr led the Falcons in scoring while Tobe, Muir and Burley were the best marksmen for the losers.

In the second semi-final game Art Martin's Hawks romped home to a rather one-sided 40-10 victory over the ultimately eliminated and youthful "Nite Y" squad. The fast-moving and more accurate playing of R. Wickerson and Jack Dickens, who led the victors in scoring, proved the difference between the squads. The Hawks carried too much experience. Kerr Carve led the losers with six points.

Completing their regular schedule in the league the Rainbirds registered their first win of the season, defeating the Falcons by a quintette of cagers by the score of 15 to 14. The issue was always in doubt and saw some thrilling basketball, despite the fact the result had no ultimate bearing on the standing. The line-ups for this game were: Rainbirds — McBride, Clapp, Cowan, Vichter and Bradley. Falcons — Goalie, Fitzpatrick, Wannamaker and Lough. Referee Semple.

The box score of the semi-final games were:

PAUL MARTINEK

With a record of 23 victories in 100 amateur fights, Paul Martinek, 22-year-old Kenosha, Wis., heavyweight, a senior journalism student at Creighton university, has turned professional. He will continue his studies, however, with a view to graduation in June. Martinek won the Golden Gloves heavyweight title in Chicago twice in a row, and was a fullback on Coach Clarence Schwartz's football eleven at Creighton.

After 31 years of competition in the grunt and groan game, Ed. "Strangler" Lewis, ABOVE, has definitely decided to retire. He has wrestled in more than 6,000 matches and has grossed more money at the gates than any other one athlete in the history of sports. Apart from this, he's saved enough cash in five a life of peace, comfort and pleasures at the age of 47.

R. C. A. F. TO ENTER 2 TEAMS IN LOOP

Junior "C" O.H.A. Team to Suffer From Raids by Carrying Place

Trenton, Dec. 16—(Special)—The executive of the Trenton and District Hockey loop were smiling from ear to ear yesterday after they learned that the R. C. A. F. was entering two teams into the league. The double entry will make up for the loss of Willis Lakour's champion Carrying Place crew from T. and D. competition. It looks as though the Canal Village outfit will be playing in two divisions this season. They have definitely joined the Wellington circuit and their application has also been accepted by the Trent Valley League Board. One hockey manager, who is suffering a headache these days is Clyde Hartley of Trenton who had sponsoring the local junior "C" O. H. A. team. And is there any reason he shouldn't be? Only a few days ago Hartley was told that the Carrying Place team manager had signed Bob Johnson, Ingles and Hobbs three of the town's ranking packsters eligible for class "C" O. H. A. hockey. What a shock the news of that deal must have given Hartley for he was figuring on using Johnson, Ingles and Hobbs as a front line. Carrying Place move then probably is what is the Trent Valley loop will not be able to ice an O. H. A. player according to the rules of that league and from the reason for the three lads mentioned above just being available for Hartley.

Gains of 10 to 20 cents were boosted by Osisko, Chibougamau, Home Oil, Pioneer-Hollinger, Nickel featured the base metals with a gain of more than a point and by the close Dome Mines had with an advance to a new high for the year at $31.

Brazilian was in demand on an advance of two points to 16 1-2. Utilities and senior oils posted more gains than losses.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—Industrials, led by steels, pointed the way for a fairly firm stock market today, and at the best, gains ran to 4 or more points.

The principal flaw in the otherwise pleasing picture was that volume was still relatively small. Transfers were at the rate of about 1,600,000 shares. Occasional profit-taking put brakes on the upturn, but fractions were around top levels near the final hour.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 16.—(CP)—Decines approved at all reporting bacon hog markets today. Losses of ten to 15 cents were registered at Barrie Hill, London, Peterborough and Stratford. Chatham firmed and rebounded 25 cents from Wednesday's big drop but dranselweights were sharply lower.

Liveweights: Hull $8; Peterborough $7.90; Chatham $7.90; Stratford $7.75; London $7.75 flat.

Dressedweights: Barrie $10.85; Hull $10.50; Chatham $10; Stratford $10.35; London $10.35 (no sales); Peterborough $10.60.

MARKET COMMENT

Despite the fact that the market in recent weeks has not been moving ahead, it is heartening to point out that it also has not been moving toward liquidation. The market has been drifting lower more from lack of demand than from appreciable selling. The consensus in the Street has been relatively moderate and demand would be necessary to bring about a good rally.

Many readers are looking for a better market immediately after the turn of the year. The recession of the past few months, it is felt, has discounted any and all unfavorable factors in the present situation and consequently any change from prevailing prices should be upward.

Speed on Broom Shagged Since Mid-Week

The decline in the volume of industrial production in the nine months from January to September, 1937, the year, in the United States, has proceeded at a pace which has outstripped the downward trend in the initial nine months of the previous business recession in thirty years, with the single exception of 1907. Obviously this cannot be accepted as adequate basis for the conclusion that the present recession has run its course, even though it may indicate some moderation of the pendulum which has dominated the business community since early 1934.

Ayres Predicts Recovery From Low Point Will Be Slow

The first of a flood of year-end forecasts, Ayres' Yearly prediction which will soon inundate the reading public, came to hand yesterday. Leonard P. Ayres, president of Ayres, the Cleveland prophet, declares that industry has the capacity for prosperity but that definite forecasts for 1938 are uncertain as to time because of political rather than economic. Mr. Ayres expects no new era due to the present slump in industrial production during the first half of 1938 and declares that business lines already exceeds production he declares, will not be maintained as the recovery front the low point to be slow.

Rise Lead Outlook

Production at this important Long Lac property should be in full swing by the end of 1938. It is now expected to be $10.00 or better which on an output of 200,000 tons would mean a $5.00 per ton should yield net profits equivalent to very close to $1,000,000 on the present issued capital. MacLeod is in the happy position of having plenty of money and making net profits with this mill all paid for in full, no liability whatever and with ample investments and cash in the bank. On such a basis dividends are soon going to quickly accumulated and the way made clear to inaugurate dividend payments in a relatively short time.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal Dec. 15—Top grade set fruit held a firm undertone today and while small sales were made at 35 cents for large, 31 cents for 1-2-inch and 29 cents for A-culls, one in the trade were not moving under one cent higher. Storage grades held about steady for all sizes. Unclassified storage quoted at 23 to 26 cents; A-medium or grade 1 into about 29c at 31 to 32 cents per dozen. Prices depend on quality of holdings. Pack was relatively unchanged at 21 to 21½ cents per dozen.

Canadian Cooking apples were reported in poultry cries today, and while the quality was the equivalent of last year, heavy chickens, fowls and geese were moving better at steady prices. Turkeys, however, were slow. Supplies of fowl, heavy chickens, capons and geese were quoted at 26 cents, while chickens, milkfed A-quality, 5 pounds and up, were quoted select A's at 25 cents pound. Fowl were quoted 19 to 19½ cents for 5 pounds and up, and 18 cents per pound less.

On the Produce Exchange, Canadian Creamery Extra change no transactions "on spot" were recorded and prices remained unchanged at 30 to 30½ cents pound. "Futures" were steady with no sales. On the open market this afternoon No. 1 grade was quoted nominally at 30 to 30 1-2 cents pound. Jobbers prices for creamery solids in retail trade were 31 cents for No. 1 solids and 31½ cents pound for No. 1 prints.

HOME AND SCHOOL CLUB HEARS TALK UPON RECREATION

Mr. Beach of Albert College, Mr. Hicken of Y.M.C.A. Are Speakers

The singing of Christmas Carols opened the December meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club on Tuesday evening, December fourteenth. Mrs. G. H. Stobie with Mrs. Ross Hamlin at pianist led the singing and later in the programme Mrs. Stobie sang very feelingly an appropriate Christmas solo.

Following the business part of the meeting Mr. Beach of Albert College spoke on Adult Recreation. He defined recreation as that which the creation of oneself in body, mind and spirit. Recreation as entertainment is not work but is the re-creation of self. Too often exercise means wreck-creation. The speaker then pointed out that in Toronto in one day 30,000 people play rugby and hockey games, to watch 22 men exercise. According to statistics within five years, 2,000 of the 30,000 spectators will be dead of causes directly attributable to over-exercise while 6 of 26 participants in the game will be dead or over-exercised. Most people have been trained to be spectators partly because it is the easiest thing to do and also because in our schools and colleges, there has been no special training of a few leading athletes and not enough time spent in the physical training of all. For instance in a western city was quoted where students at the high school of body of 1,200 were on all the school teams which took 75 per cent. of the instructors time.

Boys in school are particularly interested in team games.

The average life of an amateur in the rugby, baseball or hockey game is four years, when he has either finished with an athletic career by the age of 24. Between 24 and 60 no training in recreational exercise to fill the rest of their lives.

What activities then should be taught children? There are four main areas in which we get recreation.

First—Social including bridge, dancing, bowling.

Second—Individual, as skating, swimming and walking.

Third—Competitive such as tennis golf and badminton.

Fourth—Cultural, art, music, hobbies.

Each individual should have one activity in each area.

Recreation should be carried on and developed in the homes and not in commercial organizations. The family as a whole should seek recreation together. The family time is the time for recreation will find that it will strengthen the ties and make it happier.

Mr. Fred Hicken of the Y.M.C.A. staff spoke particularly of games as recreation. He outlined a number of games and activities suitable for groups of all ages and led in a practical demonstration of some of the amusement and great enjoyment of the audience Mr. Hicken stressed the value of a form of recreation which in many instances is replacing gambling. He gave also a number of practical suggestions for party games for the Christmas season in his talk.

Appreciation for the two fine addresses was voiced by Mrs. Hamlin, Mrs. W. H. Pickle and by Mr. O. Anderson, principal of the school.

POLICE SEEKING FOR AUTO DRIVER

Provincial Motorcycle police today are looking for an alleged hit-and-run driver in the Bay Bridge and disappeared into the darkness of Wednesday night. Mrs. Harrow, Carleton Road, was proceeding northbound when a southbound car collided with her automobile on the left front fender. "The driver of the other car skidded slightly, straightened up and drove speedily south," Mrs. Harrow informed Motorcycle Officer Sam Brown upon his investigation. The damage was small however.

RECEPTION TO BE HELD

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Though Chorley Park, Tory Hill residence of Ontario's Lieutenant-Governor, is closed, the traditional Christmas Day reception by the Lieutenant-Governor will be held in Toronto, Hon. Albert Matthews, recently appointed as the King's representative in the province said today. The reception will be held in the legislative chamber according to the Ottawa precedent.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—The small cattle supply on the Toronto livestock market sold at steady prices today. Choice hogs and lambs moved at previous levels while no sheep were offered. There was a dull tone to holdovers from Wednesday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 30; calves, 20; hogs, 330; lambs, 60; butcher cattle and calves were 5 to 10 with one load of good weighty steers selling at $8.50.

Veal calves ranged from $6 to $10 cwt.

Off-truck bacon hogs closed at $8. A few truck lambs sold at $6 to $7.50. Cloding trade was slow and dragsy and one carload was unsold.

TURKEY PRICES SHOW INCREASE OVER YEAR AGO

10 to 12 Pound Hen Turkeys Sought After by Small Families

OTHER FOWL HIGHER

Ole King Gobbler is strutting around his native habitats these days with an air of superiority, a look and manner becoming to one in general appearance of supercilliousness. For the price on the head of Thanksgiving Turkey Number One is the second only to that of his humble relative.

A general survey of a number of the Toronto markets today elicited the information that general prices of hen turkeys will be from two to three cents per pound higher than those quoted on her preening strutting male counterpart. More important however, was the fact that prices in general will range from three to five cents per pound higher than those of a year ago.

The price advance demanded by the female of the species, whose table attractiveness ranks as qualities of meat is concerned is said by those in the trade, to be the result of the fact that the price of the gobbler, is attributed to the fact that a greater demand for hen turkeys from those in the richer section and twelve pounds is in vogue. Twelve pound hen turkeys will cost a head from thirty-three to thirty-five cents. "That's one prosperity ailment meal-dealer said today. "People with small families are the ones who are buying hens and that's the result that the prices of the smaller birds are higher than those of the heavier gobblers."

Prices ranged today will price from thirty to thirty-two cents and these quotations are for those birds which are dressed. "Of course, lower prices will be quoted for those birds which are undressed with the quality and size of the bird."

No Scarcity Turkeys Here

"There is no scarcity of turkeys in this district," he also added, "and in my opinion, the average price per pound will be the same as last year quotations for the entire supply, the thirty-three cents per pound. This price is a few cents over the price of a year ago."

Old Mother Goose will be supercseded in price by her smaller counterpart, the duck, it was predicted. Prices geese will sell at from twenty-five to twenty-seven cents per pound, an increase of three cents over prices of last Christmas. Duck's natural relatives will command prices in the vicinity of twenty-two cents and also an increase over 1936 quotations.

Chickens are higher and will demand even higher prices for the Xmas Christmas rolls around, it was forecast by the majority of the dealers interviewed.

No Further Diplomatic Moves

No further diplomatic moves were believed planned until Japan replies to the protest British diplomatic sources said.

Concurrently, Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the government, in the protest, wished to make clear that it had not taken of such incidents which, as the Japanese government pointed out, had occurred in the relations between the two countries."

Mr. Eden added nothing further.

The protest cited previous British-Japanese incidents in China which occurred.

"It is clear that steps hitherto taken by the Japanese government to prevent such attacks have so far failed to afford adequate protection and the government must now ask that they be informed of the measures which have been taken of a character which will put a definite stop to the indiscriminate attacks complain."

In strong editorials the press warned that Britain's patience may be exhausted.

"Today will not be far wrong," said The Times (Independently) "in assuming that the publications in this document, nor minded it is attaches importance to the Japanese government co-operation surrounding the dispatch of British warships to Chinese waters."

Testing Rosetter' Perhaps

"This incident will test the Chinese attack on British and American ships, may test Japan's ability to keep a deliberate attempt by responsible military and naval officers to drive Europeans and Americans out of China, possibly by way of testing the reaction of the powers. Whatever the other hand, the incidents were not deliberate, then it is clear that Japan has yet to learn the rudiments of international courtesy and good faith."

The fact Japan has for more than 13 apologies have already been proffered to the two governments concerned and to their various representatives is a sufficient indication of the state of mind of the responsible statesmen in Tokyo."

The prohibition calling for a worldwide boycott of Japanese goods to begin Jan. 1 was passed last night at a meeting of the executive committee of the International Peace Campaign presided over by Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for 1937.

lation. "Mr. Dupuis might have been in touch with the Maritimes but I don't know anything about it," Mr. Bracken said.

Maritime Declaration

Maritime declaration on the relations between the government of this province and that of any other province with regard to inter-provincial relations or Dominion-Provincial relations.

Premier Dysart: "There has been no move by the New Brunswick is concerned for such an alliance and I know nothing whatever about it."

Premier Campbell: "Prince Edward Island has not been approached in any way. We feel a certain interest in common with the other Maritime provinces but have no intention of entering any union."

The Progressive Conservative party called the picture yesterday when the House leader Lapoint and other House leaders of more provinces should "gang up" on the Commonwealth Party. The Progressive Conservatives will be invited to hold nothing to say at the moment."

"Nothing to say at the moment" was the reply of cabinet ministers when questions were started on Mr. Duplessis' announcements of an Eastern Canada conference on provincial control and western influence.

Premier Hepburn of Ontario was expected to make whatever comment would come from the government today. Premier Hepburn said: "It will be his first meeting with his colleagues since Premier Duplessis returned yesterday from a vacation in Florida.

Premier Has No Knowledge

Premier Hepburn of Ontario, commenting on a speech by Premier Duplessis of Quebec, Thursday, said he had no knowledge of the Maritime Provinces joining in the Quebec premier's move to protect provincial rights.

"Mr. Duplessis might have been in touch with the Maritimes but I don't know anything about it," he said.

Mr. Hepburn said Ontario and Quebec had no intention of "ganging up" on the rest of the Dominion. "We have the right to the Dominion government to invade the provincial rights," he declared.

A meeting this week with Mr. Duplessis, Premier Hepburn said, "mutual problems and joining together to protect the interests of our provinces." The Ontario and Quebec Premiers are scheduled to meet again next week.

To Guard Succession Duties

Particular reference will be made any proposal to divert to appropriate succession duties.

Ontario has collected $28,000,000 in succession duties and this year will collect $27,000,000, Mr. Hepburn said. "Without such revenues how are we going to meet the social legislation which the people desire. Ontario is not in a position to lose this source of revenue."

The Ontario Premier maintained there was no break in confederation and that the Quebec joining together to protect common interests.

Live Stock Numbers On Canadian Farms

As compared with 1936 the number of cattle in Canada in 1937 is practically the same. Sheep increased by 111,000 to 3,811,000 head. The number of horses is also practically the same as last year. Swine, chickens, turkeys, and ducks also showed increases of 1,284,400, 44,000 and 16,100 respectively.

The total number of farm live stock in Canada in 1937 are estimated as follows with the corresponding figures for 1936 in brackets: Horses 2,982,990 (2,981,540); Cattle 9,845,000 (9,902,000); Sheep 3,939,000 (3,827,100); hogs 3,963,300 (4,146,000); hens and chickens 46,000,000 (45,999,900); turkeys 1,997,900 (2,044,700); ducks 1,954,600 (1,910,500); geese, 1,854,900).

Proving between horses and cattle in the Maritimes, Quebec, Manitoba, and British Columbia, and between cattle and sheep in Ontario, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. The number of sheep have increased in all the provinces except New Brunswick and Saskatchewan. The decrease in the Prairie Provinces like other provinces showed a gain in 1936 over 1935. Increases in the number of poultry decreases are registered in all the provinces except British Columbia.

Christmas Concerts

Tabernacle Christmas Concert

A Christmas selection of musical merit was held at Tabernacle United Church, when members of the church choir took the capacity of the auditorium. From the opening hymn, the largest Sunday School scholar, those taking part performed their various roles with distinction, reflecting credit upon those who had spent much time in the preparation of the programme.

Following the opening chorus "Silent Night", a welcome was extended the parents and visitors by Mrs. A. D. Archibald, superintendent of the Sunday School.

An Indian drill was given by primary boys, resplendent in Indian costumes, carrying bows and arrows. In the interesting drill work, Lairr in the evening, the primary boys showed that they were not to be out done by the boys when they presented a "Parade Drill," making a very dainty picture in their white dresses, and summer sun bonnets.

Three lengthy items were featured on the programme which varied in interest and interest. The first of these was "The Night Before Christmas," given in a pleasing manner by Miss Templetown class. Here, before the delighted eyes of the little ones, the

Hepburn Declares Ontario Bearing Lion's Share

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Premier Hepburn said today Ontario's position regarding relief costs could be discussed at a conference to be called the relief question would be discussed at a conference to be called tomorrow.

The Premier said "the attitude of the Federal government has been one of steadily withdrawal of interest in relief matters and of assumption of their responsibilities under a growing spirit.

Ontario had borne the "lion's share" of the costs, being "handicapped between a reluctant Federal government and increasing demands from the municipalities."

Municipalities are believed to be due to fractures caused by the breakage of bones in the skull.

TORONTO — 240 JARVIS STREET

Hurricane House

by BRUCE HENRY

Sonny thought, "I won't be mistaked until I see her, until I know she's all right." He had been a difficult subject. Less than twenty hours ago as he left his old New Hampshire home in Maple Village, he had told himself that he would never, never seek her to marry me.... Thinking of Sandra Bryant, even through these cold, fast flying hours had resolved fifty times—at least—that if he ever found Sandra alive again, he would walk up to her and say, "I love you, Sandra. What are you going to do about it?"

It was David who spoke first. "I hear our Sonny's here, he said, "You're well brought up, lad."

Rest had swept through the house and it wakened, fit, but gripped.

The Waldemar had doubled before they brought Sandra off the Sparkling Bay. Sonny had carried her tall man in the green shirt ahead. Then the two men had lifted Sandra in his arms. They both shivered as they suddenly heard her babbled, staring at the fine face of the man bringing Sandra. Brooks saw him, too, and gasped. It was unbelievable, the face of Stephen Mole.

INSTALMENT 9

Sonny stepped back to the shadows of the fireplace and left the man on with his blanket-wrapped burden. David Bryant would decide now and though Stephen was answering David's questions, he was listening to the voice behind.

A corner of the blanket brushed Sonny's arm. Neither Stephen nor David heard Sonny's quick gasp as the flaming glimpse of Sandra's white throat and wet homecoming re-lighted.

The captain of the cutter, Waldemar came along. "Good thing you didn't have to wait for us out there," he said as he had just sighted through the glasses as the storm lifted a bit. It was up to a member of the crew—somebody else, anyway."

"Thanks, David answered. "And what would you have done, Sonny, I guess you'd have gone back for Bryant."

"No," David said, smiling. "You see, Sonny, Stephen's in love with Sandra.... and he didn't tell Bryant..." His wide shoulder rose. "Bah."

"You don't know how much you're being," Sonny said, earnestly, looking back for Wilton, as a professional hero's job. Stephen Holly did a swell piece of work when he went after Sandra."

David and Sandra again that afternoon. Chet and Hold were there, but nothing in Hold's face indicated a confirmed attitude.

When their parents had gone, David asked, "Mother standing a home-coming party for the prodigal daughter, San?"

The sister smiled, teasingly. "What do you think?"

"Sure" said David. "I've never been accepted of thinking before." He said, soberly, "I wish you could be there, Sandra, to get things straightened out. San. It's no fun living at the three dots."

"Things will straighten themselves out, in time," Sandra replied. There was a brief pause in the talk, her voice: "Perhaps not the way you would like, Dad—I mean, if some any definite arrangement is better than this suspense. She looked up to get away from Hold as Chet. She said, "Did you give Sonny a drink?"

David said he had had breakfast with Sonny. He did not mention the fact that Sonny's voice was temporarily missing.

"He said he was hungry."

"He said he was pretty badly shot up at the shindig." David frowned and sa... the edge of the bed. Sandra seemed paler than she had been. "Stephen," he said now, "I've made a discovery. The greatest thing in life is work for you, San—and you're too dumb to do anything about it. I'm almost sorry I found it, and then you say you're going to get married and—"

She smiled at him. "You're frightfully young, David. Sometimes I forget it and then you say something like that. I'm not so clearly. "She reached out and patted his hand. "Never mind, darling. You'll be married some day."

"It's always a safe rule," said David, "to say that. Sometimes it can't think of the right answer... You're not in love with Stephen, Sandra, are you?" He saw her smile and you're engaged to him and Stephen's the finest man in the world. But all that doesn't add up to love."

Five smiling, Sandra said, "And adding that to the fact that 'the greatest in the world' is about the dumbest member of mankind, I'm afraid I can't suppose to get for an answer?"

"I'm not sure," David hedged. "I've noticed little things—and asks from that, I sort of figure it's that Stephen has never suspected that Sonny wouldn't be doing carbon copies for you if he hadn't been encouraged from time to time."

Sandra said: "The day I leave this place, we'll get the Misses, Stephen." No long-er thinking of that new life she was to make for herself.

BUILDING FOR BETTER HEALTH

Each year at the Christmas season we are painfully reminded that there are still those who are less fortunate than we are, who are being treated in the cold, grim, white light against tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is a social disease. It gains entrance to the body, in the form of germs usually absorbed into the lungs. Once there, it may lie dormant for years with tuberculosis and it is not until the body's resistance is lowered by overwork, worry, poor food, or disease, introduced from cattle can be transmitted to human beings by means of diseased animals. Therefore, when milk is pasteurized it is safe to drink from healthy cows, it should always be pasteurized. Tuberculosis is a disease of poverty and filth. Its victims are the unfortunate poor and all those unnecessarily exposed to infection. Fresh air and sunshine are all about us, if we lead healthy lives, we can withstand the attack of the germs. Those who are ill with tuberculosis are more susceptible than overweight, than those who are underweight. In addition, tuberculosis can be carried by dirty hands, by dirty food, by careless habits of personal hygiene. Tuberculosis is curable and preventable. Modern medical science has developed a successful treatment. It cannot be cured by drugs or medicines, but by rest, by proper food, by treatment to-day, while there is hope of recovery. The Two Mental Millionaires

By COBINA BENNINGTON

McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

When Wynnen went to buy china at Jessop's, the salesgirl at once stopped 'I look at the girl who was with him.

"What a sweet child," they said. "She can't be a day over fifteen!" (She was actually nineteen.)

"And how her dress matches her eyes!" (Blue-green.)

It was a knack Lucy Madison had, of making friends. She could put on a plain little gingham frock, and somehow in seconds it accentuate her loveliness and make her simple beauty more rare in its side day or evening dress and make-up. A soft little thing of curves and dimples she was. Men instinctively wanted to protect her and fight for her. She was a darn sweet little kid, they agreed, but she needed somebody to look out for her. As for Lucy, she had to fight for herself. Each man who met her would think, that when he tried to make a "date" with Lucy, she only gave him a look and dropped her eyes.

"Not a steady!" he would set then.

And Lucy would nod shyly, the dimples deepening at her cheeks, her eyes dancing with happiness.

So Lucy had never been a long between evenings to be invited through to delicious meditation while she mechanically wrapped up cups and saucers for tired, bored women customers, and then leaned across counter with a radiant smile to assure them that nothing in spite of the fact that it was impersonal and unconscious. When the shop sounded at 5.30 Lucy would rush to the cloak room, pull on her cheap little blue hat and hurry out into the throngs of the street. She seemed to have no time to think as she sped along and the evening found her tired and anticipated as if it were only the beginning of the long day. She would hurry through supper, then wait eagerly for the doorbell to ring. Then would perch, quick, steady, they crossed the boot space in a twinkling and the wooden table was set with the wooden utensil sent her flying to the door. Jim a quick little fist it was open, and she was standing on tiptoes to reach the giant who stood there.

"Oh, Lucy, sweet." Big Jim Nelson never could find words which Lucy's soft lips were always under neck and her long black eyelashes brushing his cheek.

"Butterfly kiss," she whispered. "That, that ain't no kiss for a he-man," he laughed, finding her lips. Then she led him into the living parlor and sat together and plan and plan and plan.

"I swear it ain't right," he said after awhile on this particular evening. "I feel with Jessop nearly two years and I'm still just lookin' for. They ought to give me a route. It pays four dollars a week more."

"Oh, Jim, if you were to get it," she answered breathlessly. "We'd be rich."

"We wouldn't be rich," he grumbled, "but it sure would make a heap o' difference. We could think about—gettin' married then."

"And we could rent us a little bitty house and live all to ourselves," she hurried on, her eyes bright with excitement. "Oh, Jim, I want you to get it worse'n anything. Why don't you ask 'em for it?"

"Suppose they was to fire me? What then?"

Lucy paled. She knew how difficult it was to get another job and that a steady position at low wages was better than a chance at one and than an occasional job.

"If you say so Jim, though, I'll do it," he ended.

Lucy kissed shook her head. "Reckon we better not," she answered.

But somehow, after he had left, the idea kept haunting her and she turned it over and over in her mind. If only she could do something about it.

Afterward Lucy never quite knew how she got the courage but at lunch time the next day she found herself standing at the door of old man Jessup's private office. Once inside her courage failed entirely and she wanted to turn and flee but Mr. Jessup had looked up and escape was now impossible.

"Well, come in, child, and sit down. You look scared to death, I won't bite."

Lucy laughed a little and smiled, then in an outburst she told him all about it.

"Jim's grand," she ended, "and he's steady."

"And he's in love with a little girl in a blue frock," Mr. Jessup laughed.

Lucy flushed. "But if he was to know I came here, I expect he'd quit and he'd be so mad."

"He shan't know it, child," he answered, rising and patting her on the shoulder. "You run along home and get your trousseau ready."

That evening when Jim came to call he didn't wait to knock, he simply bounded in the door and caught Lucy to him.

"Honey, it doesn't seem possible. Old Jessup's made me foreman o' the delivery department. I have to see all the trucks is loaded right. Fifteen dollars a week! Yippee!"

Lucy exclaimed very aghast, "I bet we'll be the richest people on earth!"

And really they were—that is, if you could add up dollars and happiness in the same column.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Breakfast For Two"

Dealing in merry fashion with the determined efforts of a wealthy Texas girl to make a man out of the playboy with whom she has fallen in love, RKO Radio's "Breakfast For Two" brings Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall to the Belle screen today and Friday, co-starring Glenda Farrell, Eric Blore, Donald Meek and other favorites are in the cast of this gay romance, which opens in Marshall's sumptuous Long Island home one early morning to disclose Miss Stanwyck as an unexpected guest following a tour of Manhattan night spots.

Attracted to Marshall for his gaiety and likeable ways, Miss Stanwyck soon learns that he is about to lose the big steamship company that his family has owned for generations, and also that he is in love with Miss Farrell, gold-digging actress.

With these circumstances displease Miss Stanwyck, and she sets about changing them. Thanks to her money, she has little trouble in getting control of the steamship company, but when it comes to breaking up Marshall's romance with Miss Farrell, and to making Marshall take an interest in the affairs of the firm, complications arise that lead to the many hilarious crises of the story and to its whirlwind ending.

Marshall's anger at what he considers Miss Stanwyck's trickery and double-dealing, the loyal efforts of Eric Blore, Marshall's valet, to serve his master's best interests, and the laughable results of Marshall's two attempts to marry Miss Farrell all add to the comedy of the fast-moving film, which is said to be one of the funniest and most tuneful offerings.

The story offers exceptional opportunities to both its principals, who, while brilliant in strictly dramatic roles, have achieved their biggest success in mirth-making portrayals, and the comedy is greatly enhanced by the work of Miss Farrell, Eric Blore, Donald Meek and the oldsters in the cast.

Where Great Sheets

Three feature films have been assembled for exhibition on the same program, probably the best of this year, including Edgar Kennedy in an exceptionally funny picture, "Mandarin Mixup", Ted Lewis, Dancing Wonder in a smart musical-comedy singing and fun shows "Up and Downs" and a very interesting travelatk in colour "Mount Vernon".

Two Bits Saturday

Two smart features are announced for exhibition at the Belle starting Saturday. Clarence E. Mulford's famous character "Hopalong Rides Again", a thrilling story of the great outdoors with Bill Boyd in the title characters.

The comedy King of Comedy, Joe E. Brown is appearing on the same program in a very funny feature comedy "Fit to Be King" featuring Helen Mack and Paul Kelly.

According to a recent traffic survey, 15-foot roads are too narrow for modern traffic, 20-foot roads are too narrow for a road frequented by many wide trucks, whereas 22-foot roads are quite adequate for modern limited traffic.

Gene Autry and Ann Rutherford in a scene from "Public Cowboy No. 1" at the Capitol Friday and Saturday

AT THE CAPITOL

Public Cowboy No. 1"

No more fitting title could be chosen for Gene Autry's current picture than "Public Cowboy No. 1". This feature comes to the Capitol tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday and presents Gene as a ultra-modern cowboy who uses streamlined techniques in detecting and apprehending modern cattle rustlers.

Mere horseflesh has to contend with airplanes and high powered refrigerator trucks in the cattle war, but it's not difficult to guess which emerges the victor, even before one sits through an hour of absorbing and highly dramatic entertainment. "Champion" Autry's horse receives means of fast mail, and this is very easy to believe in view of his fine performance.

The story deals with a controversy between the local newspaper run by a slip of a girl—and the old time lawmen on the proper procedure in catching lawbreakers. Gene and his pals believe that the old time methods are still good, and across the idea of trailing the rough ragged in a motor car. Then they discover that the criminals are operating by means of direct, low flying wave from an secret place. Meanwhile, through the influence of Helen, the lively young newspaper editress, city slicker detectives are imported to solve the mystery. In direct defiance to these city men, the rustlers stage a gigantic raid. Smiley Burnette, Gene's comical stooge, picks up the clue and they are soon on the trail of the arrests of the entire gang, by old fashioned, straight-from-the-shoulder methods.

TALMAN SWEET TREE OLD ONE

Believed Planted at Latta At Least 70 Years Ago

Plainfield, Dec. 16 (Special) —A few days ago Mr. Fred Hall, who resides a short distance from Latta village cut down a Talman sweet apple tree that up until two years ago had been yielding from three to four barrels of fruit each year. The rings on the tree numbered about seventy-five, which would seem to show that the tree had been bearing apples for over seventy years. Friends say that the tree must have been planted either by the late Mr. Andrew Hall or his father the late Mr. James Hall, who with his family of five both came to what is known as Hall Street east of Latta.

Mr. James Hall came from Scotland one hundred and fourteen years ago and settled near Latta. Three years later the farm now owned and occupied by Mr. Fred Hall became the home of Mr. Andrew Hall son of James Hall, who was born in Scotland. The apple tree in mind have been planted in those days by either of these men.

Annually, more than 400,000,000,000 tons of mud are carried into the Gulf of Mexico by the Mississippi River.

The earliest evidence of beer in ancient Egypt is a picture about 6,000 years old, showing two workers stirring contents of a brewery, vat with long poles.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was hurry up walking home on account of not wanting to be any later for supper than what I was already and somebody caught up to me on account of walking even faster. Being Ghasses Major, and I said, What's a matter, are you late for supper, too?

Sure, and the worst of it is this makes the 2nd time this week, and if there's any way my father hates to see me walk in, it's late, Ghasses said, and I said, Well how about me, I wish I had a dollar for every time I been late for supper this week. I'd even had a half a dollar for every time it would make a dollar and a half, so I'd be satisfied with a quarter for every time O boy maybe I wont catch it, I wish I had a good excuse, I said.

I bet's both try to think of one and whichever one thinks of it the other one can use it, Ghasses said, and I said, Sure, only the main trouble is, I was told to be in the house by dark, and it's dark and we're not still out, so it's pretty hard to make up a good excuse for that.

Good idea, that's just when I was suppose to be in too, so if we can think of a good excuse it will do for us both, Ghasses said. How about anyone we aren't sure how dark they actually meant by dark? he said, and I said, That's a idea, I said. I know. O, I know. Look, there's the moon. We can say we was just looking shot going home when the moon came out and kept everything so light, how's that? I said.

Swell, Ghasses said.

And he went in his house and I went in mine, and pop and me was both mad and I told them about the moon and it made them still madder and I wasn't aloud to have any dessert, only being rice pudding lucky for me, and after supper I called up Ghasses and he said his father and mother was mad too but he changed his mind about combining the moon, so they didn't get any madder.

RAIN AND SLEET

Cars Abandoned

Ont. reported many motorists abandoned cars when a glaze of ice covered roads. Bus service was disrupted. Sand was scattered but driving was still risky. Numerous minor accidents occurred.

St. Catharines reported traffic moving cautiously as light rain fell on ice-covered streets, but temperatures were moving up above the freezing mark. Heavy snowfall in Woodstock yesterday was followed by sleet and rain in the night. Snow today wasn't helping. Temperature was above 32.

Roads Quite Slippery.

Light snow fell in Kitchener area leaving a glassy ice coating on the pavements. Traffic was slowed down to five and ten miles an hour. No serious accidents were reported although collisions were numerous. In Kitchener gangs of men were clearing the streets.

An ice storm that caused hydro-electric and telephone officials much worry passed off without doing much damage in the Stratford district. A heavy downpour of rain that froze as it fell brought the threat of trouble yesterday afternoon and last night but snow followed it.

Roads in Perth and Huron Counties were hazardous, being coated with ice. Provincial Traffic Officer Norman Lever at Clinton today warned all motorists, except those having to travel absolutely necessary, to stay off the road. It was raining and road conditions were bad.

At Guelph traffic moved carefully over coated roads after an ice storm had paralyzed it for more than 12 hours. Little damage was done to power, telegraph or telephone lines.

Two Cancer Hospitals Planned by Department

Regina, Dec. 16 (CP)—Two small cancer hospitals for intensive diagnosis and treatment of cancer by a closed staff of specialists are projected by the Saskatchewan department of health, similar in operation to its tuberculosis sanitariums.

The province has been so eminently successful in its campaign against tuberculosis—now having the lowest tuberculosis death rate in the world—it was felt desirable to apply it's same methods to cancer, Hon. Dr. J. M. Uhrich told the Rowell commission yesterday.

Cancer was now second only to heart disease among death causes in Canada, and tuberculosis had been reduced to 12th place, he said. Research would be left to the great institutions in eastern Canada, the United States and Europe, but the desire was to scientific treatment both by radium and surgery, in excisative hospital units.

Dr. Uhrich attributed the province's success against tuberculosis to the fact every case was accommodated in a sanitarium, without any charge to the patient.

Cleanliness Matches On

Proof of progress in matters of cleanliness is to be found in comparing modern record requirements with those of a boarding school patronized by French nobility some 200 years ago, says a pleasantly published list of Cleanliness Maxims. In his catalogue to parents of prospective female pupils it included the following astonishing information:

"Pupils are entitled to have one set of underclothing, one pair of stockings and two handkerchiefs per month. Towels: Pupils, one every week; nuns, one every two weeks. Foot baths: Pupils, one a month; nuns, only by special authorization of the superiors. Complete baths: Three a year (May, June and July). Pupils unable to take their baths on the appointed day must wait until the following month."

A bride at 14 and a mother at 15 Juanita Aragon, of Los Angeles, is preparing now, at 16, to return to the world of hair ribbons and school books after arranging in a divorce court for termination of her life of cooking, housekeeping and matrimony.

Her marriage was a "big mistake," she said, claiming that her 23-year-old truck driver husband blocked her eyes, swore at her and treated her like a slave. Aragon was ordered to pay her $25.00 per month.

HEPBURN ATTACKS POLICY OF FEDERAL GOV'T

Says Agreement Exists Would Force Ontario To Support Waterways

Hepburn Gives This as Reason Ontario Cannot Export Power

TO WAIT AUTHORITY

Premier Says Prime Minister Following Line of Least Resistance

Toronto, Dec. 17.—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario charged today that "Ontario-Washington" section of the Dominion government, designed to force Ontario into supporting the St. Lawrence waterways development scheme, was responsible for the province's inability to export power to the United States.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King asserted the Premier, was "still kicking his wounds from personal defeats suffered in Ontario." His charged an agreement existed between Ottawa and Washington that Ontario would not be allowed to divert more water at Niagara Falls until the Province became a party to the St. Lawrence development.

Hepburn declared emphatically that he decided to equally vigorous terms that the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission would export power to United States without consultation and consideration from Ottawa.

Ontario would make formal application to the Dominion government for power export permission. (Continued on Page Three)

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

How shall stiff Prometheus fashion materials to preserve heats materials: libraries a release of pressure cools. Snow is heated by friction and melts. It is cooled when a boy makes a snowball: when he releases his pressure, ice is formed. Likewise, the air in the snow by a sled. The weight of the sled causes a slight melting and refreezing behind it immediately after the pressure is released. The slight melting also lubricates the runners and makes it easier to it glide more easily. The ice skater also produces a liquid film under his skate as he glides along.

Protests Pile Up Over 'Garden of Eden' Broadcast

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—As the protests piled up today, the advertising company responsible for the radio broadcast with "Garden of Eden" broadcast with Don Ameche last night defended the program.

"It was a mistake, and we own up to the public at large the same mistake will not be made again."

The broadcast, first comedy was planned enough when read the advertising way, National Broadcasting Company officials said, but they insisted, that the volume of correspondence received after the broadcast nothing that it didn't come out of the garden and into the family circle that way.

CONVICTED UNDER ANTI-TRUST LAW

Union And Five Officials Found Guilty at New York

New York, Dec. 17 (CP)—The International Fur Workers' Union of the United States and five officials were congratulated in the members for having "struck a strong blow for honest unionism."

Terror Reign Charged

Seventy-five witnesses were called in an effort to show the industry was ridden by a reign of terror from 1931 to 1932.

Dressers, dealers and manufacturers were described as having been slugged, bombed and drenched with acid when they refused to knuckle down to the defendants.

In addition to the 25 defendants in 1935, those convicted were: Nat Rosse, General Manager of the Fur Dressers Factory Association; Local 2 of the Fur Workers' Union; Local 3, of the Fur Dressers' Union; Pietro Lucchi, former President of the International; Irving Potash; Herberg, Morris Reiss, Morris Hertzberg, Morris Reiss, Morris Gittleman.

Two Are Acquitted

Joseph Ackerman and William Cohen, whom the government cited as "strong-arm men" for the industry's racketeering elements, were acquitted.

The verdict marked the latest in the long series of victories for John H. Amen, special assistant to the Attorney General and acknowledged "trust buster" of racketeering and racket-buster. It brought his record of racket convictions to 126.

The unions are subject to fines not exceeding $50,000 each and for the individuals, jail terms of four years and fines up to $30,000.

STRIKE SENDS SHIP TO PASSENGERLESS

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A last minute strike on part of its crew sent the Monarch of Bermuda southward today past its pier.

The Furness Bermuda line cancelled reservations of 450 passengers originally booked after 200 of the 420 members of crew went on strike. The liner sailed as scheduled but carrying only freight and mail.

Officials said there was enough crew members remained aboard to operate the Monarch as a freight ship.

LEON WALMSLEY DIES SUDDENLY; WIDELY MOURNED

News of Death Shock to Citizens of Every Walk

BELLEVILLE NATIVE

Will be Long Remembered For His Unselfish Work in Many Organizations

Leon Walmsley is dead; a native son of Belleville has passed from the life of the city and many close personal friends mourn his loss and remember with tender memories the sterling qualities of regard at his decease. The announcement came as a great shock to all who heard it early this morning, and the fact that the news was authentic and expressions of regret were universal, was proved by the city hall flag flying at half mast on Thursday, as usual in the case of the passing of a citizen. The deceased was formerly of the firm of Walmsley and Co., grocers, and J. E. Walmsley and Co., wholesale grocers, and was a prominent member of the firm's customers with all of whom he was popular, and recognized his dependability in looking after the business which they placed with him.

Made Many Friends

"Friends met him yesterday and enjoyed brief conversations with him little thinking that these would be the last time and that their friendship was no near an end. Many acts of kindness he quietly performed during; he attracted and held friendships in his unselfish and friendly manner and by his willingness to do a kind act or some helpful service when it was most needed. To him may be applied the quotation, "He lived, Mankind and the Gentlest Heart." He was a good citizen and gave of his time and ability for the furtherance of all worthy objects in the city and he exercised an influence second to his close association with fraternal organizations, church and social activities. For a long time to come Leon Walmsley will be greatly missed and those who remained to him will be long retained by those who knew him best and called him friend.

Delivery Boy Retains Change When Man Won't Give $20 Bill

Fights Off Thief Who Tries to Snatch Change

THIEF AT LAST FLEES

Hamilton, Dec. 17.—(CP)— When a thief tried to work the $20 change fraud upon a delivery boy from Carroll's, Limited, he met more than his match. Last night William Sawbridge, a lad in the employ of the grocery firm, was asked by an apparent customer over the telephone to bring groceries and change for a $20 bill to a Connaught Avenue address.

When he reached the spot, a man was waiting for him outside the house, but the lad's suspicions were aroused and he would not hand over the change until the $20 was forthcoming. The man then attempted to seize the money, but Sawbridge fought him off. Wrapping a heavy rubber boot, the thief beat the boy heavily over the head. The boy struggled so gamely that the man was forced to flee without the money.

Japan Stirred Over Arrests of Japanese in Russia

Japanese May Drive War into South China

"Lasting Peace in The Orient" Aim, Say Japanese of Their Undertaking in Present Situation in China

Shanghai, Dec. 17 — (AP)— Chinese-Japanese warfare threatened today to spread to the south China coast in far-flung attacks of Japanese forces "not satisfied" with the capture of Nanking.

The Japanese communique proclaiming the formal triumphal entry into the fallen Chinese capital declared the "armed forces of the Empire are determined in their endeavor to carry on to a conclusion of the purpose of the present expedition—establishment of lasting peace in the Orient."

Japanese army expected a Japanese attempt to invade southern Kwangtung Province and attack Canton, 60 miles northwest of the British crown colony of Hong Kong.

Japan Still Unsatisfied

Vice-Admiral Hyoshi Hasegawa's communique said the Japanese government was "not satisfied with the success of its arms with the capture of Nanking. The aim is far from being settled."

It added that Japanese efforts to the second very powerful protection to third powers had been marred by "a most unhappy incident between the Japanese and British warships which was deplored from the bottom of my heart."

Victory Parade at Nanking

Japanese army and navy forces staged their victory parade into Nanking. Other Japanese warriors were arrayed on a victorious front stretching into the village area of Kiangan, Province, south of Shanghai and Nanking.

General Chiang Kai-Shek earlier today had declared in a broadcast appeal to the Chinese people to continue the fight against the invaders that the back of China's resistance would be broken "only when the last man in the chinese army has left our China."

Other reports were that the General had ordered military authorities in Kwangtung Province to prepare for war in view of anticipated Japanese invasion of southern China.

Press reports were that three Japanese warships had passed above the Yangtze and exchanged fire with Chinese batteries at Nanking, capital of Anhwei Province.

U. S. Taxation Issue Rises; Countess Yields Citizenship

Heiress to Woolworth Millions Pays Short Visit to New York

DANISH TAX ISSUE

New York, Dec. 17—(AP)— Renunciation of United States citizenship by the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, heiress to the Woolworth 5-and-10 cent store millions, set tax authorities in motion to determine whether she will escape heavy taxation in her native land.

Albert L. Greenbaum, Director of the Audit Bureau, said "the treasury stands to lose millions" by the action, pointing out that, unlike Canada, Denmark, Britain and other places no restriction on export of American capital.

Persons familiar with Danish law observed that although taxes in Denmark are higher than those in the United States , the former Barbara Hutton, who was formerly married to Cary Grant, has been automatically a Danish subject since her American citizenship was lost.

The second sailorings and had little opportunity of escaping taxation there. Their wealth is estimated at her 32-month-old son, Lance, could have been complicated under her natural citizenship.

Now in her second day at sea on the Swedish liner Gripsholm, bound for London, the 37-year-old Countess remained in her stateroom for the greater of her one-day visit here. She appeared before a federal court yesterday to renounce her American allegiance to the land of her birth and to the government by her former husband, Count Haugwitz-Reventlow. Later, former Ambassador to Germany, who dined with her in London last summer. Both she said, to live abroad permanently to escape American criticism and publicity.

The swollen torrent reached a crest stage of 56 feet, seven inches at noon and still was rising. It was the highest in 67 years.

King Vittorio Emanuele, the Queen and Premier Benito Mussolini toured inundated sections of the city and watched troops helping families evacuate threatened homes.

LINE OF DITCHES ACROSS FRANCE

Hope Defence System Will Prevent Any Army From Invading

Paris, Dec. 17.—(AP)— Across Flanders Fields now is a line of ditches France hopes "no modern army can cross or even approach."

The ditch system on the Franco-Belgian frontier, built by French soldiers, extends from the concrete Maginot Line to the English Channel.

Defence Minister Edouard Daladier decided although Belgium would defend her neutrality the excavations were made "just to be sure" that an army never again could enter France from Belgium as the Germans did in 1914.

A large part of the $67,000,000 francs (about $1,210,000) earmarked for the Engineer Corps in next year's budget will be met on the Franco-Belgian frontier defences.

Million Soldiers Face France

The Defence Minister, addressing the Chamber of Deputies recently, explained the border defences and declared that Germany has 1,000,000 soldiers on the frontier facing France in the northeast and Italy "more than 300,000" in the southeast.

He asserted the French army must be constantly strengthened but warned that it is "ready to attack from its territory to fulfill the nation's mutual assistance treaties."

France has only 250,000 troops in Europe, he said. Although millions would be mobilized instantly in case of war, they would not meet the already deformulated but undefeated demands of Washington.

"The Japanese note was an expression of apology, regret and promise of indemnification, and I consider that the matter had found 'strict orders to the authorities on the spot with a view of preventing recurrence of a similar incident."

DRESSES STOLE!

Hamilton, Dec. 17. — (CP)— Thieves today broke into a ready-to-wear shop operated by Blanche and Pearl Knoble at 232 King St. East and stole about 300 women's dresses, valued at $1,000.

Soviet Union Charged With Acting in Manner 'Utterly Unthinkable'

'Responsible' Answer is Desired by Japanese Government

UNDERGROUND AIRPORT

Strengthening of Russian Forces at Vladivostok is Reported

Tokyo, Dec. 17—(AP)—The Japanese foreign office today formally charged the Soviet Union with acting in a manner "utterly unthinkable in any civilized country" in connection with arrests of Japanese in Russia.

The foreign office protested to the Soviet Embassy, citing what Japan called numerous cases in which Soviet authorities had arrested Japanese and held them without trial.

A memorandum accompanying the protest said Japan wished a "responsible" answer.

Westerners in News

Almost simultaneously, the Tokyo newspaper Yomiuri charged that Russia was continuing to strengthen her military forces at Vladivostok on the Russian far eastern seaboard.

Russia, it said, has two cruisers, 18 submarines and six destroyers to the Vladivostok area, it asserted. The newspaper added the Moscow government moved 600 pilots and 110 planes to Vladivostok last week.

MAY REFRAIN FROM A DIRECT REPLY

Japan Takes Stand Apology Made Before U. S. Not Received

Tokyo, Dec. 17 (AP)—Japan may refrain from a direct reply to the United States protest in the Panay incident, the Foreign Office spokesman indicated today on the ground the government had apologized before the American note was delivered.

He said the question was still being weighed but pointed out:

"The Japanese note of apology was handed to U. S. Ambassador Joseph C. Grew before the United States note was handed to Foreign Minister Koki Hirota.

"Therefore what some other nations have given has not yet been decided."

Also on Tuesday—two days after the United States gunboat Panay and three United States-owned commercial vessels were attacked on the Yangtze River with four Britishers killed—Hirota forwarded to the United States Ambassador a note which he had received from the already deformulated but undefeated demands of Washington.

"The Japanese note was an expression of apology, regret and promise of indemnification, and I consider that the matter had found strict orders to the authorities on the spot with a view of preventing recurrence of a similar incident."

Believes Alcatraz Escapees Drowned in San Francisco Bay

Ralph Roe And Theodore Cole, Desperadoes, Were "Lifers"

SEARCH INLETS

San Francisco, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Warden James A. Johnston said today he believes two southwestern desperadoes who vanished from Alcatraz Island's "escape proof" prison on drowned in racing waters of San Francisco Bay.

The men, Ralph Roe, 38, of Duncan, Okla., and Theodore Cole, 37, Stroud, Okla., escaped yesterday from the bleak penitentiary for incorrigible federal prisoners.

"Barring terms that amount to life imprisonment, it is my belief they decided to take a desperate chance and that they had no outside aid," Johnston said. "I believe they drowned and their bodies were swept out toward the golden gate."

The escape recalled to Warden Jess Dunn of Oklahoma McAlester penitentiary that when Cole was ordered to Alcatraz he boasted to fellow convicts:

"I don't think I'll like any island and doubt if I'll stay there long enough to be bored."

More than 600 are expected to attend short courses at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, on Friday, after Christmas and continuing to January 7. Regular O. A. C. students will resume classes January 10.

POLICE COURT

Christmas was exemplified throughout today's local Police Court proceedings by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., when several accused persons were requested mercy in the matter of sentence imposed to permit them to their family prior to the festive season. After careful consideration His Worship granted all such requests and one group of those convicted in the court their terms would expire before Christmas Day, thus permitting several to join their families on that day of religious commemoration.

John Redmon, truculent, readily admitted he was found in illegal possession of intoxicating spirits. Redmon pleaded guilty to the illegal possession of liquor was sentenced to serve one month in the common jail. "There is no alternative in the case', explained the Magistrate.

A Marysville resident was given time in which to raise the money for a fine, or serve after he entered a pleaded guilty to reckless driving. "Have the fine here before December 20th," warned His Worship.

William Murphy, Albert Lindsay and Walter Carragher, three young tenants, entered pleas of guilty when charged with drunkenness. Lindsay the first of the trio to appear, stated to be himself in time to join his family for Christmas, after all three had signified they could not afford to pay the fines imposed under the L.C.A.

"Could you make it so I could get out and go home for Christmas? I was on my way home when arrested," pleaded Lindsay.

After glancing at the calendar His Worship replied in the affirmative. "Ten days from the time of your arrest will let you all out on December 24th", concluded Magistrate Butler.

Chief Kidd and Crown Attorney R. C. Donovan K.C. were both present from Police Court today owing to illness. Sergeant Arthur Harman opened the proceedings and presented the case as court clerk.

Police Blotter

Found in a semi-conscious condition and lying along the curb on Jane street, a transient who police say is Walter Carragher, was taken into custody at midnight last night. Police say Carragher was intoxicated when found. The man was badly injured and complained of internal injuries. Police summoned Dr. O. S. Cronk, who administered medical aid. A charge of intoxication was preferred against Carragher today. He still complained of pains after being arraigned today. Carragher stated he did not remember what happened last night, when questioned by police.

Early last night police were called to the Canadian National Railway station, where it was reported that a man was intoxicated and causing a disturbance. Investigations revealed a man, who gave his name as Bert Lindsay, no address given was preferred against Carragher today. He still complained of pains after being arraigned today. Carragher stated he did not remember what happened last night, when questioned by police.

LEON WALMSLEY

Street, was in the prime of life, being in his 41st year. He was born in Belleville, and all his life was passed in his native city which he loved. He was the eldest son of Edward J. R. Walmsley, and Mrs. Walmsley, who are worthy and prominent residents of this city.

He was educated in the public and high schools of Belleville and upon graduation he entered business life in the service of the J. R. Walmsley wholesale grocery firm, of which, his father is the President. His connection with the Tabernacle United Church had been since childhood and he commenced at an early age to take an active part in church work. He was a regular attendant at the services and had filled numerous offices in the management of the church. At the time of his death he was the secretary of the Tabernacle Sunday School. To the members of this congregation his sudden passing has brought deep sorrow.

Active in Masonry

Leon Walmsley was closely connected with the work of the Masonic fraternity in Belleville, being a Past Grand Lodge officer and Past Master of the Riverside Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 382, G.R.C. For the past five years he has been Secretary of Quinte Chapter, R.A.M. No. 7. He took a keen interest in the labours and entertainment of the various Masonic organizations throughout the year, and during past years when he was in charge of entertainment for the Hurwitz Lodge, Always ready and willing to lend a helping hand, Y. Wor. Bro. Walmsley's many friends had a high esteem by all members of the craft.

Leon Walmsley was appointed to the Belleville Parks Commission, upon the death of the late Thos. F. J. Power and he has served faithfully in the interests of the city and its beautification ever since. He was a keen follower of Belleville sporting interests and was always willing to lend a helping hand whenever called on in connection. He commenced his band activities as a drummer boy in the old XV Regiment Bugle Band years ago.

He was for many years connected with numerous musical enterprises throughout the city, more especially in connection with band work, having played for some considerable time in many local band organizations. He was an active member of the Belleville Rowing Club society and vice-chairman of the Entertainment Committee. He was in charge of all music at the Belleville Fairs, a duty which he performed with acceptance, and the city was inclined to do in all walks of life's social activities.

Surviving to mourn his loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are his widow, who prior to her marriage, was Georgina Purdar, two daughters, Miss Leona Walmsley, Bay St., Kingston; Miss Corinne Walmsley at home; one son Bruce Walmsley at home; his parents, Edward J. R. Walmsley and Mrs. Walmsley, Belleville; two sisters, Miss Hazel Walmsley, and Miss Marguerite Walmsley, both of Belleville; one brother, Mr. James Walmsley, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Sympathy and Appreciation

Mr. Charles J. Symons, Chairman of the Belleville Board of Parks Commissioners, in an interview this morning expressed himself as greatly shocked by the news of the sudden death of his colleague, Mr. Walmsley, member of the Parks Board, and a close and valued friend for years. Mr. Symons wished to express his deepest sympathy with the bereaved family and felt he was speaking for a multitude of friends when he said that Leon Walmsley would leave a kindly memory of a beautiful character, a staunch friend and a valuable citizen in every particular. Mr. Symons said that he felt a deep sense of personal loss in the passing of a valued colleague as well as close personal friend, a feeling which was shared by every member of the Parks Board. .

SAYS AGREEMENT

not grant a loan Mr. Hepburn interviewed Mr. King at Ottawa recently.

Recently-negotiated contracts between the Power Commission and Quebec power companies were necessary because of the Ottawa-Washington agreement, the Premier said. Ontario was prevented from obtaining more power at Niagara and had turned to Quebec.

Fears Peak Load to Fade

Announcement by Prime Minister King that the question of power export authority would be referred to parliament was following "the line of least resistance," Mr. Hepburn said. By the time parliament could deal with the matter, the time of peak power consumption might be passed and Ontario might be unable to make contracts to export 110,000-horsepower surplus at $14.50 a horsepower.

The Premier quoted a letter dated Sept. 11 and written by T. Stewart Lyon, until a few years ago Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission. The letter, addressed to Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, commented on a letter Mr. King had written to Mr. Nixon.

One paragraph of Mr. Lyon's letter read "the letter (Mr. King's), as I understand it means neither more nor less than that Mr. Roosevelt will give us no additional rights on the Niagara, even for the use of water originating in Canada, unless Ontario gives immediate consent to the immediate inauguration of the St. Lawrence power work."

The Noble Grand also drew attention to the fact that this was the birthday of Mrs. Orser and the National Anthem was sung.

Mr. W. J. Barlow was thrown from the top of a stack car to the ground on Tuesday afternoon of this week when the brake released suddenly while he was working with it. He sustained severe injuries to his hand and arm and his hip was also bruised.

Mrs. Tom Black of Deseronto spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. Elias Stafford.

DUCK DINNERS DEAR

Some of our local sportsmen may have had a similar experience with the high cost of duck shooting as a Winnipeg man's report of one day on the marshes. This himself fired seventy-five shells, costing $3.75. His gasoline for the trip cost $2.35 and his hunter's license $2. He bag was three ducks at $2.00 per duck. As there was no evidence of pellets in the birds, it is believed they died of heavy failure, caused by the barrage.—Vancouver Province.

TUNEFUL TOPICS

Now the radio is crying
In the manner as above,
Where a baritone is braying
Of his everlasting love;
And the awful cantatrice
In a set across the street
Trying some new foreign station
Makes the medley more complete.

And a gramophone is churning
Out a melody below
With a crooner's croon a-yearning
For a place where melons grow;
And a hurdy-organ dimly
Tinkles out some ancient song,
While a cornet adds grimly
Blares forth notes both long and wrong!

Yes, there's music in the ether,
You can hear it everywhere,
And I long to get a breather
Of less musical fresh air.
So I'm off to be a diver—
In the depths I may be drowned,
But I shall not care a stiver
If I cannot hear a sound!

Editor's Reflection

Consider the editor! A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in town. The physician getteth 25 plunks. The editor writeth a stick that the child tippeth the beam at nine pounds. Yea, he lieth even as a cigar dealer. And the father giveth him a cigar. Behold the young one groweth up greatly. And the editor putteth in the paper a small piece. Yea, a proud 4 x 4 notice. He talketh of the wisdom of the young woman and of her exceeding cuteness. And when the rose of Sharon is she, and her sweetheart is plucked from her home. And the groomsmaker getteth two score and three more. And the editor writeth a note of thanks from the sweet girl graduate. (Maybe!)

And the daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the neck of the travelling party. He runneth a column solid. And the first one knoweth this from afar with a picture postal card that costeth six for a limey.

Years go by silently, and the youth of the town falleth down and breaketh his pitcher. One and all, she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our providing young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto the editor a bid to the wedding, and behold, the bids are fashioned in a far city.

Flowers are sent by the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth his bit.

The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cabinet of photos and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to charge for it. Then and only the darned thing cometh out "Gone to Her Last Roasting Place".

Yea, all these are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with unseeding great lungs. And they pulleth out their ads and cancelleth their subs, and they seeing the banner even unto the third and fourth generations.—The Eagle (Delano, Minn.).

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

Santa Claus is busy again. To countless festivals his ambassadors of goodwill come with joy and delight for children who attend "Christmas trees" which are so much a part of the social life at this season of the year. Santa who appears at these assemblies of children of Sunday Schools and other gatherings, is sure of a welcome. No ambassador of goodwill ever met so happy and expectant a crowd as awaits him.

In a business establishment in the United States they went so far as to modernize Santa, making him a comely young man wearing something of the attire of the saint, though lacking his flowing beard and bringing in Mrs. Santa as a lovely girl. That was fine for a novelty, but children have grown used to the fat ruddy fellow, he is a tradition they will not allow to pass. He lives and he takes a real part in their lives whatever the tradition-smasher would say in decrying the use of the Santa Claus tradition in the lives of children. Indeed if Santa as they know him did not come they would create a Santa who would fulfil all the requirements of their dear little hearts and imaginations. Has the kid-smasher been seen children acting? If he has, he ought to know the power of imagination in the lives of the youngsters. So the parents are content and the children require that the old style benevolent Santa come this year as year after year in the same style with the great sack of toys and sweets and articles of apparel.

HAPPY CHILDHOOD!

Symbols of the joy which come into the hearts of the children in wintertime are the city hill slides which have been set apart for the use of the youngsters in certain localities. Such a slide is the last gift of the council of 1937 to the boys and girls and is one which they will not forget. Precautions have naturally been taken to barricade the approaches to the hills so that there may be no menace from traffic.

First the storm king came bringing gifts to the countryside and to young and old and now the city fathers have added their gift to the joy of Belleville.

This will restrict the sledding to use of the four hills. Everyone knows that in other years children have taken the risk of sliding down slopes near the streets and that is a wonder that not more have been injured. Now there will be none of this and there will be a sense of security on the part of parents and guardians that the children will be safe.

In the age which gives itself to winter sports, sledding is one of the happiest and brings the ruddy glow to the cheeks of the boys and girls and gives them large appetites which last at every meal of the day and may add a fourth meal at the end of the night's pleasures.

WINTER SPORTS

Winter has got off to a good start in the Canadian way. The great outdoors has its winter call and is being met and every sport is being indulged in, even though the holiday season is near. Though some of the sports are newer to some than others, such as skiing, they all fill the needs of healthy manhood and womanhood and youth.

The Oak Hills and Wallbridge hills have their claim now on ski-fans and the bright days find many indulging in the winter sport. Snowshoes are a little more slow in arriving on the scene but they will add to the great company which seeks recreation and health in the winter air and sunshine.

Thus the snow is an asset of health and pleasure while it serves a great purpose in nature as well, containing the nourishment which the soil needs in the early spring days.

Skating as in others past when there has been plenty of snow, never fails to have his devotees. There is yet the skating on the open, as well as on rinks, there are private rinks and the public rinks of children gather, rinks draw their crowds.

What is more bracing than a Canadian winter's day when the pulse beats healthy music with the exhilarating exercise in play and game, the pure air fills the lungs and sends the ruddy warmth from head to toe! Others may talk of their great winter resorts but every part of Canada is a playground for the joy and the process of nature sleep, the people do not rest.

If it is essential to drink in the pure air in summer, it is health-building to drink in the copious draughts of Canadian winter air.

The writers against religion, while they oppose every system, are wisely careful never to set up any of their own.—Burke.

WINTER

How varied an appeal to us thou makest—
Some see in thee a mender of highways;
Or after snow thou art like one who shakes off
O'er earth-his handkerchief, till it o'erlays.

With white all her defects; thou dust appear
A weaver, too, whose busy loom will ply,
Providing beauty for the coming year—
So Nature lives when it but seems to die.

In thy "tumultuous privacy" I ween
Are those who "converse with the mighty dead"
Before a hearth whose home-made cheer is seen
O'er an "uninterrupted evening" shed.

And, virile friend, with health our faces glow,
When in my company we walking go.

PREVALENCE OF MASTOID AFFECTIONS among young men has been ascribed by some observers as probably influenced by the modern habit of going bare-headed in cold weather. Seems as though that marvellous machine which directs the movements and thoughts of man should be protected by more than a light covering of hair when the weather turns from salubrious to inclement. In tropical climates it is said to be almost certain fatal for members of the white race to travel in the heat without a helmet. Bareheaded habit has been excused on sanitary grounds that it is good for the hair and all that but observers fail to see that such an effect has been achieved.

BELLEVILLE IS BRIGHTLY BEDECKED FOR THE CHRISTMAS SEASON in green, gold and scarlet. The brilliance of the many colored electric lights in the evenings makes a very attractive scene and the streets are lined with Christmas trees in honor of the season. Folks living at a distance have been heard to say that it is worth driving many miles to see Belleville in its Christmas finery, particularly at night when all the lights are on the special Christmas lighting, the store windows and store interiors with their special showing of gift suggestions. Thousands of readers of this Great Family Journal are also receiving suggestions for gifts which are advertised by the progressive advertisers, thus making their shopping here easier. Belleville merchants have excelled themselves this season by providing larger and finer stocks at attractive gifts than ever before while the stores are more attractively arranged and decorated than ever before. Christmas gift shoppers in Belleville this year can be assured of wider variety, quality, reasonable prices and complete satisfaction all along the line.

BULLETIN

One of the most important phases of Great Britain's war preparedness is the instruction of children in the use of gas masks which will be issued by the government to every Briton.

Some children are too small for the regulation mask and a special respirator has been devised—FOR BABES.

Racey's caption reads: "Spirit of the Children's friend—Shade of Tiny Tim!—What sort of devils are loose in the world that force a nation to take such protective measures as this? Would that I could rewrite 'A Christmas Carol' to suit these ghastly times!"

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Read

The Buoyant Mongrel

How many of us have ever considered the no-account mongrel dog that romps about the cities, villages and farm yards? True, there's not so much to found for the mongrel in character or the bearing of the Boston bull, but there is something about him which crosses in us all more than the average measure of affection. The mongrel is generally recognized as being more devoted than all the fine breeds, for a brag you can shake a stick at.

Perhaps it is his humble birth which seems to have tempered his nature with something warm, fine and sensitive that makes him love over one of the crowd. When he is so informally introduced by you, his tail wags with glorious abandon; his eyes glow with a degree of happiness that is not a pose and, if there is the slightest reciprocation by you, he will follow you to the land or place his paws on your clean shirt front. "Charmed! Let me be friends," he seems to say.

No! There's nothing aloof about the mongrel. Never would he stand statuesque like an Airedale, gazing coldly at some distant point. Cosmopolitan—that's the word. The mongrel is downright hospitable. He lives up to the best traditions of a "continually-on-the-go" set of people.

Perhaps it's his philosophy of life. Whatever can you find a mongrel that is not an incorrigible optimist? He may chase rabbits all day, or all week after week, without ever making a catch, but buoyant hope, ever springing within, carries him on. He never loses confidence in himself; he never acquires an inferiority complex. His tongue may be hanging out of his mouth and his sides heaving like a miniature bellows, but he remains cheerful and trots away through the brush, but the gay manner with which he tears off to other affairs is a splendid sight to behold. Defeat—Yes! Even more—he is telling himself that the rabbit was probably a tough old customer, anyway, not fit for anyone to eat. That's the kind of philosophy that makes life endurable for folks who find a trifle short of their ambitions.

Again, perhaps it's the wonderful adaptability of the mongrel to share his joys and sorrows with his friends. Over his head, what a storm may be in thinking about. He yawns or he sings at you; perhaps he moans about you in a most friendly manner. If by chance he is dejected, every line of body tells you so. Watch his eyes and you can read his every thought. Sympathetic concerning life and things in general, he is the friend of the friendless, with the inscrutability of a Great Dane or the dull demeanor of a Pekingese. Yes, sir, you can be convinced that the mongrel always has the depth of character common to the mastiff or the intellectuality of a German police, but he has personality and a warm heart. Poker faces may be useful, but people do not like them in dogs.

Thus it is quite easy to understand why there are so many mongrels in those about him. All of us welcome affection from those around and to certain degree, and a mongrel—just a plain dog—has a certain type of affection to lavish upon those of us who will accept it.—Rotarian.

Britain's Gem Room

The visitor to the "Gem" room at the British Museum is filled with surprise at the vast wealth of gems and objects in pure gold crowded into one case. Even the window is so cram-full of gold that there seems to be enough treasure there to fill a whole hall, and the building in which special interest is attached there is enough material for many years' research. Where did they come from? To whom did they belong? Where have they been hidden for so long? are all questions which the "Gem" room can answer, and all be answered. Yet many of those beautiful objects are personal relics of the people whose names are well known and whose surroundings can be traced.

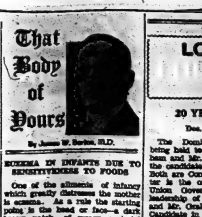
This vast assemblage of gold and personal relics represents many periods and covers a wide area. Being, too, of altered tastes and customs, and of the most varied kinds, some and gone in art. It points, too, to a sequence in the history of art, as it can be traced through the different countries through which it has filtered, as trade developed and races immigrated. These jewels which date from the earliest times include some of the rarest gems, some of the unique. Perhaps most among the objects on view is the celebrated Portland vase, which although not of gold is of such exquisite and widely known. It represents a test art. Found in a Roman sarcophagus in the Monte del Grano, in Italy, the treasure was later formerly in the Barberini Palace in Rome. It is a wonderful example of cameo cutting as practised by the ancients. The body is of dark blue glass and the surface into which the figures are cut is of opaque white glass . . . .

The finest collection of gold there are pieces from Ancient Greece and Rome and from the tombs of the Etruscans. Many of these are from the Celts whose gold jewellery and personal adornment fill a whole room. The chief attraction to the home student in the "Gem" room is the glass pieces of jewellery such as necklaces, bracelets, rings and hairpins. There are many things from Crete, and ornaments from Cyprus, Mycenae and Egypt. Quite apart of the best workmanship, much of it dating from the Middle Ages to 250 B.C. The rare figures made by Etruscan artists in the precious metals, and the filigree work of the ancients have already been referred to. Here, too, are many examples of the various pieces of Celtic gold, which after the Romans left the Late County, as they had been discovered in England and are now on view in the National Museum in Dublin.—From "Antique Jewelry and Related Arts," by Fred W. Burgess (New York: Tudor).

How to Get Publicity

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh returned to the United States Sunday after two years voluntary exile in Britain. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh.

In order to avoid publicity they travelled under the assumed name of Gregory and also left ship by the third class passenger way. An expert newspaper photographer identified them, and as a result, they obtained a priceless quantity of the publicity which they sought to avoid.



Actually much of the publicity with which they are now surrounded in the United States is due to their efforts to avoid it.

They would not only travel as ordinary persons they would probably get along with much less newspaper story. The reporters would have had a hard time to get material for story and sensation if they had returned as ordinary passengers in the ordinary way. They would have been Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, and, save for some special mention, that would have been about all. As it was there was a big story in the reporting and it is their use of an assumed name in their efforts to leave the ship by a third class passenger and in their hurried trip to the home of Mrs. Lindbergh's parents that will be more glorious in their confinement effort to evade hidden and the newspapers and reporters will make a feast of them.

If the Colonel and his wife were to travel as themselves, give a reasonable explanation to the newspaperwomen who asked for it, if they told the newspapermen that they were going they intended to stay, the matter would be ended and they could get on about the normal practicality as they wished.

It is publicity and notoriety which they profess to resent is largely of their own creation.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

ECZEMA IN INFANTS DUE TO SENSITIVENESS TO FOODS

One of the ailments of infancy which greatly distresses the mother is eczema. As a rule the starting point is the head or face—a dark brown patch of greasy material often seen soon after birth. From the head or face the disease spreads downwards, generally in the middle line of the body (front and back) and sometimes on arms and legs. The little red pimples break down forming the so-called moist yellow-ish crusts which give the hair together, while from underneath them frequently wells up a sickly smelling liquid—the discharge.

In former days eczema was looked on as a constitutional ailment or child might develop all types of treatment was used; baths, powders, ointments about three hundred different ointments, and lotions, and many methods of treatment. Latterly the face that foods may be partly or wholly responsible for the trouble.

Dr. N. A. Foerster, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma State Medical Association Journal, says, "The treatment of infantile eczema, of course, usually depends upon that is, local soothing treatment and internal medication, but attention is directed to finding the cause. The three most important things to look for are sensitiveness to milk, egg, and wheat, as these are the foods most commonly at fault.

"An infant genuinely sensitive to cow's milk cannot take boiled, modified or any kind of canned cow's milk without keeping up the eczema. It may get worse."

Breast fed infants are usually sensitive to eggs through the mother's milk. Eggs should be kept out of the mother's diet and those of the infant or mother does not get wheat. Rice, corn, potato, oats, bread, proteins and the like."

"Often milk sensitive infants are also sensitive to wheat and the soya bean milk preparations contain barley, which may explain failure of some soya bean milk substitutes to help the eczema."

Dr. Foerster describes another interesting fact in that more than half the children with this type of eczema (due to sensitiveness to foods) commonly develop "hay fever sensitivities as they grow older and as more foods are added to their diet and each develop not only skin conditions but asthma and hay fever.

THERE'S A REASON

Everybody hates a backseat driver, but it has remained for science to suppose that "backseat" eating can't answer her back." Britain used to be a generic sense. Of course it may be possible to find a few male offenders ensconced in the kitchen, but investigation by science hasn't investigated that yet. Dr. Fletcher Watkins Munson of the Bell Telephone Laboratories have revealed their studies by many tests that the human ear is not a good judge of pitch. Instead, it is the vibrations of the head or face—a dark brown patch of greasy material often seen soon after birth. Poppys the Sailor and the Empress Eugenia may seem, at first sight, unlikely to have much in common, yet each is credited with adding to the average diet one important vegetable. When a fashionable physician cured Augustus of Prussia's gout by feeding him fresh leaves of lettuce by the bushel he added new vitamines, but the emperor got well just the same, and Romans ate lettuce forever after, and the gout still does today. In more recent times Poppys the sailor, a well-liberal with having multiplied by many times the world's demand for spinach, which years of medical propaganda had failed entirely to popularize. Popeye's heroes, even imaginary ones, still have the world some power, and only trouble is that now, when spinach is firmly established, the doctors begin to have doubts.

The original idea about spinach as in the vegetable best supplied with iron, an element deemed necessary for the making of healthy blood. Unfortunately, iron is now less esteemed for this purpose than once it was, some tiny constituents of the soil and certain complex compounds of copper having been found closer to the secrets of blood-making than any kind of iron. Even worse for spinach fans is a recent pronouncement of the council on foods of the American Medical Association that the iron in spinach is not well-absorbed by the human body, especially by the weak digestive systems of young child-

Tonic.

Retreat from Spinach

Still worse misfortune has befallen the theory that spinach was a good source of calcium, an element needed for sound and healthy bones. Calcium does exist in spinach leaves, but recent chemists find that it is combined with certain acids in the vegetable, making a compound so completely insoluble in the body alkalinity of spinach calcium is almost quite out of the question. It even is suspected that spinach may be a food which may make insoluble and useless some of the calcium from other foods eaten at the same time.

Even if spinach does not take back everything that Popeye has stood for, Spinach still may be regarded, it says, as a good source of vitamine A, and as a contributor to roughage, and as a food supplying a modicum of iron and a good deal of the heavy pot-herb roughage which provides dentrals bulk. It is not strikingly rich in any of the strikingly valuable food" if not, quite the magic once ascribed. Perhaps the greatest value of spinach has been read as well from Augustus and Popeye. Like other animals, man seems to need occasional, almost any kind of green food, even without much difference between kinds. One reads Napoleon's cook, who made a point of having a lot of better, of leaves from a nearby tree. Even with vitamins, when physicians are feeding their labourers every shoots of alfalfa, but neither Napoleon nor sailor yet has arisen to popularize that.—New York Herald Tribune.

The Horse's Prayer

To thee, my Master, I offer my prayer. Feed me, water me, groom me, for me, and, when the day's work is done, provide me with shelter. Clean, dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort.

Always be kind to me. Talk to me. Your voice cheers me as much to me as the reins. Pet me occasionally, that I may learn to love you more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins, and do not whip me when you are angry. I do my best, sweet or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I refuse to obey your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet.

Do not check me as that I cannot have the free use of my head. If you load that I may have an unnatural position, or if you force me to pull more than my share of the load.

Do not overload me, or hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Regard my needs when I do not eat, I may have an unbalanced tooth and that you know, and I cannot tell you. Do not jerk my head in an unnatural position, or tie it away my best advantage. Flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

Do not tell you when I am thirsty, so give me clean, cool water often. Do not hit me in the face, or shout in your power, from that fatal disposition to shy. I cannot tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, that by signs you may understand my needs. Feed me at all possible shelter from the hot sun, and pats of dislike, and tell me when I am working but when I am standing still for a long time. Examine my feet frequently, for I cannot tell in my mouth; they first by boding it a necessary to your notice.

I try to carry you and your burdens without a murmur, and will patiently for you long days of the day or night.

Without the power to choose my shoes or path, I sometimes fall on the hard pavements which I have often prayed might be softened. Good-bye, my friend, I have to give me a safe and sure footing. Remember, Dad I am but a horse.—Exchange.

FULL DEBATE

Until parliament approves of the policy of licensing by order-in-council for the export of power, Mr. Mackenzie King said the government was not disposed to grant any further permits. This was not a new attitude, he added, for it was adopted last April when request for such a licence was made by the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Consolidated.

Making public his correspondence with the applicants at that time, the Prime Minister said the same answer had been given Premier Hepburn now. If when the latter's claims pertaining to Ontario to erect a license for the export of 130,000 horsepower to the United States.

No Details Given

While he would not give details of Mr. Hepburn's application or of the latter's argument, the Prime Minister discussed at length the federal government's attitude toward this question.

Referring to the reported statement of Premier Taschereau of Quebec, who has also aligned himself with Mr. Hepburn in the move to export power, that "if Ottawa starts a fight on its hands it can have it," the Prime Minister said the only fight would be on the floor of the House in accordance with British parliamentary procedure.

His colleagues were convinced, the Prime Minister said, that enactment of all parties in the House of Commons against measures for power export without the approval of parliament. It was possible that parliament would be found to have altered, but he doubted it.

Question of taking to the courts a test of the federal government's power to prevent the export of power could be considered, the Prime Minister said, if and when parliament ruled against such export.

Thinks Act Supported

If the question were taken to the courts, as suggested by Premier Hepburn, he was confident the British North America Act, which gave the Dominion jurisdiction over trade and commerce, would support the government's action.

Refusal of Mr. Hepburn's request for a conference over the day Mr. Mackenzie King left for his Florida vacation, followed by a flood of speculation was left without official confirmation until Wednesday when Mr. Hepburn announced that if the federal government refused a license he would send a wire to the courts to fix power to prevent power export.

Yesterday Mr. Mackenzie King was back on his cabinet council again for the first time since Mr. Hepburn's visit. At its conclusion he gave an interview in which he declared this and any other question of national policy would be decided by parliament.

Cabinet council will meet again next Tuesday, probably for the last time until after the Christmas holidays.

The Rillito mining town of Dowlerville, Calif., was literally swept off the map by flood of the Tuba river, which burst its banks when melting snows and unprecedentedly heavy rains poured torrents of water into the stream. The post-office, telephone exchange and scores of homes and business buildings were swept away or undermined and the entire population of over 800 was reported homeless. This picture shows the still swollen river the rear of practically the entire town, with the remains of wrecked buildings and debris. One man was believed drowned in the flood.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Speaking Cassidy Rides again"

"It's a King"

Fleming action, breath-taking beautiful scenic shots and a tender romance with peppy comedy combine for a long time to come, combine for a long time to come, combine to make "Speaking Rides Again" memorable. The picture, filmed in the wilds of Western distillers from the fertile pen of Clarence E. Mulford, comes to the Belle Saturday and Monday and features Cassidy, and George Hayes and Russell Hayden again cast as "Windy" and "Lucky" respectively.

The outstanding "different" angle of "Speaking Cassidy Rides Again" is that for the first time in any film, Hopalong Cassidy is in love.

The fight scenes climaxed by a second explosion, must definitely be some of the fastest-moving action ever brought before the camera, and at the conclusion, Hoppy has cleaned up the action of the worst gang of thieves the west knows, and knows that the girl he loves is worthy of the present cups of a villainous brother.

Jas K. Brown Verso

The new Joe E. Brown feature comedy, "It's a Great Life" announced as the second feature on the same program, presents the comedian in one of his funniest pictures.

The story follows each other so rapidly that it is difficult at times to trace some of the lines are provoked by both situation and dialogue.

A cast of talented excellence supports Brown in the film and in addition to Paul Kelly includes Helen Mack as the Princess Harry Davenport, Russel Hicks, Hallwell Hobbs and John Qualen.

The Belle Latest World News Events will be presented on the program. The first from the closing chapter of "Dick Tracy" will be presented on Saturday matinee. Performances start daily on Saturday and Monday at 2:30, 7:10, 9:20, but complete show starting at 2:30. "Speaking Cassidy Rides Again" begins at 2:40, 7:30 and 9:50. "Pit For a King", begins at 1:40 and 6:30.

"Breakfast for Two" Funny

Brought together by the time in co-stars in the sparkling comedy-romance "Breakfast for Two" are Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall. They are supported by a quartet of fun-makers including Eric Blore, Glenda Farrell and Donald Meek.

"Breakfast for Two" will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last three days along with a very funny Edgar Kennedy comedy. A smart and lively Saturday and Monday program is offered with "Pigskin Parade" featuring Hal LeRoy, Jack Haley and Betty Jane Graham. "Mount Vernon" showing for the first time the interior of George Washington's beautiful colonial home, completes the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Public Cowboy No. 1"

The Great West is coming to town this week. Not the "wild" west, but the new modern and west, but a new, modern a break the law by means of short wave radio and high powered cars.

Gene Autry's current musical western, "Public Cowboy No. 1" at the Capitol today and Saturday, and promises to be a big entertainment. The Autry fans in Belleville are numerous, and they will not be disappointed in this latest musical-action treat, according to advance reports.

Gene Autry is the champion of the old-time Sheriffs in the picture. He defends their means of apprehending cattle rustlers, in direct opposition to the local public opinion, molded by lovely Helen Morgan, the editress of the newspaper. Through her influence the local city slicker detectives are imported to solve the cattle rustling mystery, and the Sheriff, Gene and Smiley Burnette are all opposed ignominiously. But they don't stay down for long. Autry, with the aid of Burnette, concocts an ingenious method of beating the rustlers at their own game, and the plot is brought to a skillful and entertaining climax.

Ann Rutherford is cast in the role of the militant newspaper gal. Autry fans will recollect that she was one of his early heroines, and will applaud the reuniting of this romantic pair.

William Farnum, an old-time favorite, is cast as the sheriff who disproves the efficacy of the city detectives' methods of catching the badmen.

(Chinese Press reports received at Shanghai said Russia had completed an underground airdrome at Vladivostok and assembled 150 planes and had reinforced her armed forces there by more than 85,000 men.

Strategic Position of Port

(The Russian port, at the southern tip of a peninsula jutting into the Sea of Japan, is the terminus of the Trans-Siberian railway that curves around the eastern frontier of Japanese-dominated Manchukuo, lies about 600 miles from the nearest Japanese coastline and about 4,000 air miles from Tokyo.)

The Foreign Office statement to the Russian Embassy said in part:

"On Nov. 4 an unknown woman named Dalil Takahashi, disguised as a Japanese company at Vladivostok, left envelope on the street, immediately several officials who were evidently lying in ambush arrested him and took from him a letter declaring he would be indicted for 'espionage.')

Case is Cited

"Takahashi was placed in detention. His trial has not yet been held. Japanese authorities have been conducting negotiations in order to learn the results of the investigation and also to gain access to the citizen's condition of Takahashi's health. Soviet officials failed entirely to furnish any information on these points."

The protest listed other similar cases, asserting that Soviet authorities accused Japanese consuls of "military espionage" but failed to furnish proof. Foreign Office declared the Japanese Embassy held incommunicado at Habarovsk.

Several Protests

The protest said the Japanese Embassy at Moscow had protested several times, contending that the Japanese either be tried or freed but the note received, Russian officials evaded the issue.

"The Japanese government takes the position it is impossible for peaceloving people while its nationals' safety is so imposed upon," the note said.

"Such uncertainty is utterly intolerable in any civilized country.

"In this connection the Japanese government wishes hereby to present to the Soviet government another protest which the Soviet government will reflect upon its attitude and immediately take steps to release the Japanese now detained illegally."

HEPBURN DOUBTS HE'LL BE ASKED

Premier Makes No Representations to Ottawa

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)— Split between Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, both Liberals, was accentuated Thursday by Mr. Hepburn who said: "I'll keep out of Federal matters unless I'm asked."

He added, smiling: "And" it's extremely doubtful that I'll ever be asked."

Mr. Hepburn mentioned his relations with the Dominion government when reporters asked him about reports that W. H. Schwenger, Liberal member of the legislature for Hamilton Centre, and R. S. Colter, K.C., Liberal member of the last legislature for Haldimand-Norfolk, were slated for county judgeships.

No Representations Made

"I have not made any representations to Ottawa," the Premier replied. "I have retained Colter doing so and I'm continuing that policy. Mr. Schwenger and Mr. Colter are both very excellent lawyers, if that should be asked."

Rift between the Liberal Premiers developed during the strike of automotive workers in Oshawa in April when Mr. Hepburn expressed resentment over Federal police assistance. In early June Mr. Hepburn declared in a speech: "I am no longer a Mackenzie King Liberal."

Power Export Refused

The breach gave signs of healing on Mr. King ordered the Hepburn government on the eve of Saturday Oct. 2 general election and later visited Toronto with the United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull. The Premiers conferred in Mr. Hepburn's office.

Only recently Prime Minister King refused permission to Ontario to export surplus electric power and Mr. Hepburn asserted Wednesday that Ontario and Quebec were prepared to challenge validity of Federal legislation prohibiting power export without Dominion approval. He hoped, however, court action would not be necessary.

Minerva Chapter Christmas Concert

The Tuesday atmosphere prevailed last evening when Minerva Chapter, O.E.S. No. 138, entertained at their annual Christmas concert following chapter in the Moose Auditorium. A large number of guests were present and with the members thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

Rev. Allan Pepper, Worthy Patron of the Chapter acted as chairman. In welcoming the gathering he spoke of the significance of Christmas, its deeply spiritual side and told the story of Bethlehem and the spirit of giving which is associated with the season.

A delightful concert opened by Miss Anna Hogle, talented young elocutionist, who gave two amusing readings, "The Opening of the Mission Boxes" and "An Irish Concert" which were very cleverly done. An instrumental quartet composed of Mrs. Jobson, Miss Nacoli, Hinchley and Wardle gave a number of selections during the evening which was a feature of the program was especially enjoyed.

Mr. Bell contributed a group of Christmas, accompanied by Mrs. Harris, and the other soloists to whom numbers were greatly appreciated by the gathering were Mr. and Mrs. F. Whitney sang "Sweet Mystery of Life", "The Old Refrain" and "Indian Love Call", Kenneth Bray Mrs. A. Singer, "Alice Blue Gown", and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and Mr. H. P. Weldahls "My Task" (Mrs. Gilbert acting as accompanist for these two soloists), and Mr. Harry McCoubre "Sweethearts" and "Garden of Memories" (Mrs. Singer accompanying). These beautiful songs were thoroughly enjoyed by the artists and received warm applause from the audience. Mr. J. H. Kennedy's selections, in which he alternated a soprano with baritone, delighted the gathering. Mrs. Gilbert acted as accompanist for the soloist. Miss Lulu Lalire was also a guest artist on the program, contributing a touching story in the form of a reading, which also met provoking encore.

Some happy appreciation of the Chapter to those who had taken part in the program was voiced in a vote of thanks moved by Sister Hyde and seconded by Brother Sweeny, the latter adding their thanks of the guests. The Worthy Matron, Sister Hyde conveyed the motion to the artists, and extended to all, greetings of the season.

Following the concert the lights were lowered, and the beautifully decorated Christmas tree, glowing with lights, at the front of the room, commanded the attention of the gathering. The appearance of Santa Claus, tugging a cart on which was a life-size doll, brought a storm of laughter. The doll in white and pink costume proved to be able to walk, talk and even dance, and caused endless merriment. The doll was presented by Santa Claus brought candy to all present. Mrs. A. Wonnacott and Mrs. A. Cooper were responsible for this interesting gift. Following refreshments, brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

The toys and gifts heaped about the Christmas tree will go to Minerva Chapter members and to needy families in the community.

Coast guard cutters and police boats, however, prowled the murky inlets of the bay on the chance the men had reached the island, believing the current would be safer than one of its many caves or hollows.

Cole and Roe, convict pals at Mc. Neister prison, made their sensational escape from a fortified prison that was considered the most escape proof federal government had operated the island prison.

The only other prisoner who attempted to escape was Joseph Bowers, a stout Negro, who was shot by guards as he neared the wall.

However, there are several recorded escapes from Alcatraz during the days it was a military prison.

None Attempted to Swim

In none of these breaks, however, did the prisoners attempt to swim to shore.

One escape occurred Nov. 13, 1912 when two cavalrymen disappeared. The commander at Alcatraz at the present the belief they fled on a raft that had been lying on the shore of the island.

Several years previously a prisoner escaped by forging papers effecting his release. He had been employed in clerical work in the prison office. He walked out to a boat plying between the island and San Francisco, and disappeared.

On March 3, 1917, three soldiers escaped from the island in a launch, a pistol at the pilot of a newspaper delivery launch. The launch was stored at Sausalito, across the bay.

How to Do Christmas Shopping

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

KINGSTON SUCKS added advice as to "Do your Christmas shopping early" is solicious followed, most of the shopping will be done this week, and will be followed by an inevitable and perfectly typical set of casualties next week, ranging from bad colds to nervous prostration, unless something is done to prevent it.

Therefore—and logical, and why not? You start out in the morning with a list of everything that is to be obtained, but drop down in your heart is a haunting conviction that nothing suitable will be found. So in that state of mind you look at the weather and it's the everything else, is doubtful. So you decide to be on the safe side and you bundle up so you will be good and warm, including overshoes. In the condition, you go into a heated store and crowd around without taking off your coat, as extra clothes. Then you go out in the cold air. And you repeat this several times. And your nerves are frayed and your temperature regulation some shrunken, and to the misery in your nasal mucosa either dried to a parchment or saturated with everything.

Nobody really needs any advice anyway about Christmas shopping, I said. First, don't try to do it all in one day. Do a little and a time and take it philosophically. Second, when you go into a hot building or store don't go out and come in nearly all American buildings in the winter time take off your overcoat or cloak and overshoes and your rubbers, and check them somewhere while the work is present selecting is being done.

Beauty Is Needed

When you get home, douche out your nose with some warm water, add gargle with some hot water, an ointment nose and throat specialist of my acquaintance is thoroughly convinced that most of the winter colds and coughs and troubles are due to the drying out of the nasal mucosa in the heated, underventilated American houses in the winter. Let some moisture-laden air into your system.

Next, rest your feet. And really rest them. Take off shoes and stockings and soak the feet in hot water, dry them thoroughly, giving them a good massage as you do so, and then elevate them on a chair. Rest with your feet up and give your veins a rest.

Or, best of all, lie down and take a nap in a room with the window open.

As time goes on, there is nothing that is so thoroughly satisfactory as a long, deep nap. There is about right, but four is none too many. One short two hours after breakfast, and one after dinner. The idea—that there is just so much sleep good to be doled out to you and that you mustn't use it up in the middle of the evening. Sleep breeds sleep. The more you have, the more you get. "Naps for the Christmas shopper" is the motto of this column.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She Paid Crowded Up With Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 26 years old and folks say I'm handsome. I've been taking out about every girl in my vicinity, and none of them seemed to appeal to me particularly. About a month ago I was introduced to a young lady, and it was love at sight with me. We've been going steady ever since, and I had decided she was the one for me, and was going to get her an engagement ring for her birthday in a couple of months.

One evening when I came to her home to take her out, she seemed very indifferent, and when I asked her what was wrong, she hesitated, but finally told me she was disappointed in me. Someone has been talking about me, and she said she didn't like a boy friend who has taken on every girl in the neighborhood, and that's about when they all have something to say.

I tried to tell her that I really care for her, and don't intend to take out any other girls now that I've met her, but she won't listen to me.

If the young lady persists in carrying you down, I'm afraid the best things will be to charge it up to experience and in the future be less of a Dear Brummel among the girls. Perhaps you'll be more careful there, though. If you keep on and show this girl you really are in earnest this time, she will relent and will be restored to her good opinion of you.

Jealous Girl Friends Broke up The Couple

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last year I became acquainted with a very nice young man, and we were very happy together. I became very jealous of me complaint. Then two girl friends of mine said I ought to quit him and start going with them instead, and I'd have a better time. My parents advised against this, but I wouldn't listen to them.

Finally when he came over evening, I told him we'd better break up, and when he asked why, I said "Soon people will tell you things about me, and we'd better quit now." His heart almost broke, he really love him very much, and when I told him I'd meet some one day I asked him to come and see me, but he said: "If you gave me the air once, I won't get a chance to do it again". I'm very and over 21, my two girls, and I've left my sweetheart at their suggestion, left me flat. What would you suggest I do to make up.

Broken-Hearted

You haven't been frank enough with me, my dear. Did you go on dates with him and with two girls while you were engaged? Or did you think your best friend meant little enough to ask about you? Or did you tell that to him just to get rid of him? If you were really hopeless that anyone could be so easily influenced as to leave you, and then she were about, just because two silly girls suggested it.

If you had tried again to make up and the young man still won't, there's nothing to do. Suffering a little more independence of character in the future—the two girls were probably jealous of you.

After Three Years He Writes He Hasn't Forgotten

Dear Miss Fairfax:

About five years ago, I met a young man at college. We went around together to school affairs although I was a year ahead of him. I left school ahead of him, and he still kept on seeing me at home. Once he asked me if I could wait until he was old enough to marry him, and I was willing. I can't imagine what happened, because we never came near the matter again.

While on his vacation last summer, he wrote me a card telling me he hadn't forgotten me. Should I have written him and thanked him for the card. I haven't seen him now for almost three years. I still love him, and am asking you, Miss Fairfax, how can I win his friendship again?

Miss Eye

Answering your question, I think it would be quite all right to thank the young man for the card, by something to the effect that you still remember the good times you had at college, but not looking too far into the future, and I'd have a letter then. My parents advised against this, but I wouldn't listen to them.

I know you would like Sunday Flowers on the day before the wedding or the morning of the wedding, is the perfect thing to unite these different occasions. You send the flowers, a gift of some kind, wedding flowers, not a corsage, to the bride-to-be, and you have nothing to do even if you don't know her. If you wish to write "Best wishes for your happiness", if you haven't a visiting-card, the florist will give you a little white card with your name and message on this. This type of gift will also take the place of the good wish you mention.

Gift to Young Man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have to buy an inexpensive Christmas gift for a young man who neither smokes nor drinks. Can you suggest something that would be suitable beside a tie or handkerchief?

Elizabeth

How about giving the young man a wallet? Get him a genuine-sized one, and, if you wish, have his initials imprinted on it, or have a small gold or silver initials applied to it in an upper corner.

Why Teas are Blended

Many Factors Must be Taken Into Consideration

Montreal, December 16th.—Good teas, like good whiskies, are blends. And tea like whisky is blended because the resultant product is better than would be a tea made from the leaves from only one garden just as a whisky from only one still is inferior to the blend of several.

Tea, it was learned in Montreal in the early 80's, to reach its greatest quality must meet many requirements. It must have delicate flavour, good body, aroma and strength. Obviously a leaf cannot be grown to meet all these demands. But it is possible by careful tasting to determine a formula by which tea possessing the various qualities may be combined to produce the desired result.

In India and Ceylon slight variations in the flavour and other qualities of tea plucked from the same bush are noticed in different months. By blending with teas grown at different altitudes and in other districts a level year-round consistency is obtained.

There are main requisites for a satisfactory blend and teas are specially grown for these qualities. Thus the product of one garden or district will be noted for aroma, of another for delicacy of flavour. A third will be noted for body and a fourth for strength. Blending experimentally the result is the high quality tea with which we are familiar today.

QUINTE BRANCH W. I.

The December meeting of the Quinte Branch W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Parrott, Front Road.

The meeting was opened with the Ode and Lord's Prayer led by the president, Mrs. Arnold Carscallen. The president asked for a silence of two minutes in memory of the beloved member, Mrs. Robert Garbutt, who was one of the first members of the Women's Institute. Mrs. Parrott then sang a favorite piece of music of the deceased, entitled "Where the Roll is Called up Yonder." Mrs. James Garbutt spoke and thanked all for the great appreciation that their mother enjoyed every gift that was sent her during the long years of her illness. The Quinte W. I. for nearly thirty-five years.

A Christmas Carol was then sung by all. Mrs. Harry Cornell gave a splendid paper on the Area Convention held in Picton, which covered every topic in detail which was well appreciated.

Dr. Noble of Belleville, gave a talk on "Health and How to Keep Well." Many interesting subjects were given on and were well worth remembering.

A vote of thanks was given Dr. Noble for her beneficial and helpful talk.

Christmas Carols were then sung by the members. Mrs. Arnold Carscallen gave a paper on Health Station Clinics showing the vast improvement in the Province of Ontario. In the year 1909 typhoid caused the of 462 deaths and in the year 1935 only 38 deaths. Diphtheria death toll in 1895 was 1,000 and in the year 1935 it was reduced to 23 for the whole Province. This is truly a wonderful record. Tuberculosis has been on the decline, 2,000 less and engaging a decoration on the dining table at Christmas time as could be desired or imagined.

There has been in recent years a great improvement in Canada in the methods of marketing poultry. Farmers, in community groups, in order to get the best prices, NOR not only better finish and dress but properly grade and attractively pack their birds, six or eight to a box, according to quality and weight. The housewife would be well advised when going to buy the Christmas turkey or other poultry to ask for a bird that has been graded according to Government standards and which has been tagged according to grade. There are three principal grades, A, B, C. Grade "A", indicated by a red tag denotes the highest quality of bird, well fatted and well fleshed, clean plucked; free from deformities, bruises and discolorations; fairly well developed in appearance, with the breast, back, legs and thighs well covered with fat. Grade "B", indicated by a blue tag is a reasonably well finished bird, but is not so attractive in appearance or finish as Grade "A". Grade "C" marked with a yellow tag, is a lower grade bird. The grade, identified by the tag, is the indicator of quality. Grading takes the guesswork out of buying. A buyer has only to ask for the grade to be certain of getting the quality of bird desired. Where poultry is offered for sale on government graded, the grading must conform to the standards required by the Dominion Department of Agriculture or dressed poultry. The grading is done by qualified employees of producers' organizations, wholesalers or distributors of dressed poultry, and is subject to Government inspection.

After the graded bird has been bought, the next important consideration is the preparation for the table meal. Roasting is generally the only way in which turkey is served in the main household and it is by far the best. The preparation of roast turkey does not differ materially from the method for the preparation of roast chicken. When the turkey is drawn and cleaned, rub salt and pepper on the inside of the cavity, then stuff with dressing, and here is a recommended recipe for sage and onion dressing, one that Charles Dickens favoured and still is as popular as ever in England:—

2 cups soft bread crumbs
1-2 cup melted butter
1-2 cups scalded milk
2 eggs slightly beaten
3 onions (medium), finely chopped
2 teaspoons powdered sage or poultry seasoning
2 teaspoons Worcestershire Sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
1-4 teaspoon celery salt

Melt the butter in the hot milk, add the onions and sage mixture, pour over the bread crumbs. Add the onions and other seasonings. Mix lightly with fork. Then fill the cavity with this dressing and sew up cavity under the skin of the neck, where the crop was removed. When completed sew up the opening being sure to draw the skin over the back and tie it. Truss the turkey by forcing the tip of each wing back of the first wing joint triangular shape and tie both ends of the legs to the tail. When thus made ready, place the turkey in a roasting pan so that the back rests on the pan and the legs are on top. Season with pepper and salt, dust pepper, and place in a hot oven. Then reduce the heat to moderate and let every 15 minutes until the turkey is cooked. This will usually require about three hours, depending, of course, on the size of the bird. For basting, melt four tablespoons of butter in enough water to a half cup of boiling water. Pour this into the roasting pan. Add water when it evaporates so as to keep a sufficient amount for basting. Turn the turkey several times during the roasting, so that the sides and back, as well as the breast, will be browned. When it can be easily pierced with a fork, remove it from the roasting pan, pour the strings and pull them out, and when garnished, is ready to serve.

To make gravy, pour off some of the fat from the roasting pan; it is considered there is an excessive amount, sprinkle the fat that remains with dry flour one tablespoon to each cup of liquid that is to be used, which may be milk, cream or water, or any mixture of the three. Stir the flour into the hot fat. Heat the liquid and add this hot liquid to the fat and flour in the roasting pan. Stir rapidly so that no lumps will form, and if necessary, season with more salt and pepper to suit the taste. Very often the giblets, that is the liver, heart and gizzard are used in making gravy, but personally, giblet gravy seems to belong to Christmas as nearly as Santa Claus. They make it by thickening the fat in the bottom of the roasting pan with a flour and water paste, the proportion being one tablespoon of flour to three of fat, then the paste is blended with the fat and the liquid in which the giblets were cooked, and the giblets are then cut into bits. When the mixture begins to brown, stir in one cup of whole milk for each two tablespoons of flour; then cook it gently and it will cook up thick and smooth. Season it with salt and pepper, and Dickens loved a cup of current jelly added.

No Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My employer's son is going to be married and I have received an invitation to the church. I know the young man, having met him two or three times in the office, but I do not know the young lady he is going to marry. What I would like to know is: Does the invitation to the church mean that I am supposed to send them a gift, and if so, should it be sent inasmuch as I don't know the young lady?

If I am not supposed to send a gift, will you please tell me whether it is necessary for me to write a note, sending them my best wishes, and if so, to whom it should be addressed, and when should it be sent?

W.

Under the circumstances you and thank you for making them so clear and definite . . . it is not at all necessary for you to send a wedding gift. The fact that you haven't met the bride-elect doesn't make any difference in this judgment. But since you know the young man so little, and since you are invited only to the ceremony (for there probably is also a reception following the ceremony), a gift really isn't called for.

However, if it was a most courteous and friendly gesture that your em-

Hints on Buying and Preparing Christmas Turkeys

The most suspicious day of the year—Christmas—is almost here. For such a festal occasion the principal item on the menu is poultry, usually turkey. Shampoo Often Enough To Keep Hair Lustrous

By GLADYE HALL

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

"THERE IS a famous French detective, I am told, who considers a person's hair as much a matter of identification as fingerprints. He has a system by which criminals can be identified solely by means of their hair. And he insists that no two heads of hair are exactly alike.

In my opinion, however, there is one respect in which all heads of hair are alike. That is in their reaction to improper shampooing. And you'd be surprised at the number of girls who have shampoos are careless and haphazard affairs!

However, what seems to puzzle me most is the frequency with which the hair should be shampooed. That, of course, is a debatable topic. Some hair specialists advocate very frequent shampoos. Others claim that shampooing the hair too often will prove detrimental rather than beneficial. But personally, I have always found that the best prescription for the average woman is to shampoo her hair whenever it seems dirty.

Most Spoils Hair Beauty

A dirty scalp is detrimental to hair growth and loveliness. The dirt and the excretions of the perspiratory glands all accumulate on the scalp. If these accumulations are not removed, they grow rancid, and their poisonous odor tends to destroy the health of the scalp and hair.

The problem of how often hair should be shampooed is an individual one. As a rule, a normal scalp needs shampooing only every ten days or so. The dry scalp, of course, must not be shampooed too often, as the natural oils must be conserved. Once every two or three weeks should be sufficient for extremely dry hair. Oily hair, however, can stand a good number of shampoos and even a weekly cleansing is usually not too much for it.

An aid for promoting hair health and beauty is a massage and shampoo brush. The best kind of brush is about three inches in diameter, with a slightly domed head that fits into the palm of the hand, making it easy to manipulate. There is a rim of rubber knobs between the fingers, so that they may be held securely while you are using it.

The brush is designed for use both before and during the shampoo. Before shampooing, your locks, place the brush at the nape of your neck and move it in circles over your entire scalp. Continue this massaging until your whole scalp feels loose and tingling. Then wet your hair and proceed with your shampoo, using the brush as the scrub brush. Give special attention to your hairline, using the brush vigorously to remove dirt and grime tend to collect more heavily about the hairline. This brush, if properly used, will not only help to remove all dirt, oil and grime from the hair and scalp, whether Santa Claus was a real person. Santa Claus was a real person. We frankly answered he was not, but that we were playing he was, and then we went on to pretend with the kids as long as he chose to do so. After the oldest had disbelieved, we asked him if we should "tell" his sister. "No, no!" he shouted, and he went on playing there was Santa Claus and hanging up his stockings. Years later she finally grew "wise" we asked both the older children together whether the baby sister should be told. Children Said "No"

"Oh, no," they yelled in concert. It means so much to him, so much that they kept on dramatizing. Old Saint Nick and appeared to have as much fun at it as their baby brother. Don't you and I still like to see ourselves in a story or a drama?

The youngest now is 16. We have asked all of them whether our way of pretending about Santa Claus was wholesome. In every one is sure it was and sure, moreover, that his or her children will enjoy in Santa Claus.

But some educators would assimilate them to Santa and fairies, too! Thanks to such, these precious years when the imagination will be denied many children.

The magic to the child about fairies and Santa Claus comes only, it seems to me, when we try to force them upon the child after he has outgrown them: when parents fail to be candid, the child wants to know if they are real. And most children on entering school will make such inquiry.

Santa Myth Puzzles Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

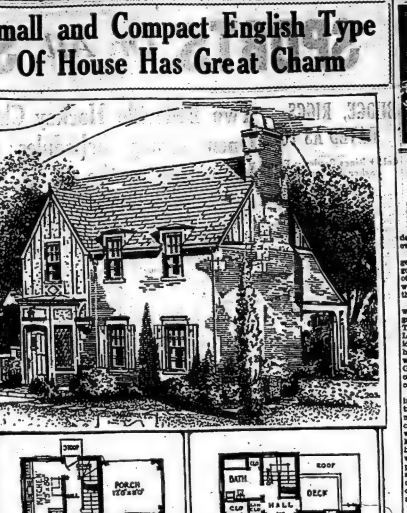
SOME PARENTS are puzzled over the matter of Santa Claus. Some, indeed, believe that they should not pretend to the little child that there is one. They suppose that after the child is disillusioned he might have doubt about their truthfulness when they tell him other things. They are very eager to have him always believe.

But it does not work that way. In those where parents exercise little or no imagination themselves in relation to the child, or where they have employed unfaithful ways in helping him adjust himself to the Santa myth. If only an occasional child believed in Santa Claus, the problem obviously would be different. We need to remember that this myth is a part of our folk ways.

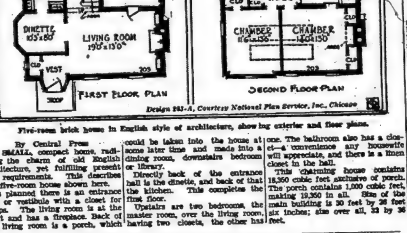
For the normal child whose parents understand him and how his fancies work, Santa Claus is psychologically sound. He fits into the youngster's normal life of make-believe. He's real to the little child. He can just take Santa Claus for granted and the little child will, too.

So we did in our home with our children. Each, in turn, at the age of five or six, asked us whether Santa Claus was a real person. We frankly answered he was not, but that we were playing he was. And then we went on so pretending with the child as long as he chose to do so. After the oldest had disbelieved, we asked him if we should "tell" his sister. "No, no!" he shouted, and he went on playing there was Santa Claus and hanging up his stockings. Years later she finally grew "wise" we asked both the older children together whether the baby sister should be "told".

Children Said "No"



"Oh, no," they yelled in concert. It means so much to him, so much that they kept on dramatizing. Old Saint Nick and appeared to have as much fun at it as their baby brother. Don't you and I still like to see ourselves in a story or a drama?



The youngest now is 16. We have asked all of them whether our way of pretending about Santa Claus was wholesome. In every one is sure it was and sure, moreover, that his or her children will enjoy in Santa Claus.

But some educators would assimilate them to Santa and fairies, too! Thanks to such, these precious years when the imagination will be denied many children.

The magic to the child about fairies and Santa Claus comes only, it seems to me, when we try to force them upon the child after he has outgrown them: when parents fail to be candid, the child wants to know if they are real. And most children on entering school will make such inquiry.

Small and Compact English Type Of House Has Great Charm

Five-room brick house in English style of architecture, show ng exterior and floor plans.

Design 281-A, Courtesy National Plan Service, Inc., Chicago

A SMALL, compact home, radiating the charm of old English architecture, yet fulfilling present-day requirements. This describes the five-room home shown here.

As planned there is an entrance hall or vestibule with a closet for wraps. The living room is at the right and has a fireplace. Back of the living room is a porch, which could be taken into the house at some later time and made into a dining room, downstairs bedroom or library.

Directly back of the entrance hall is the dinette, and back of that the kitchen. This completes the first floor.

Upstairs are two bedrooms the master room, over the living room, having two closets, the other has one. The bathroom also has a clothes closet, a convenience any housewife will appreciate, and there is a linen closet in the hall.

This charming house contains 18,550 cubic feet exclusive of porch. The porch contains 1,000 cubic feet, making 19,550 in all. Size of the main building is 30 feet by 26 feet 6 inches; size over all, 32 by 36 feet.

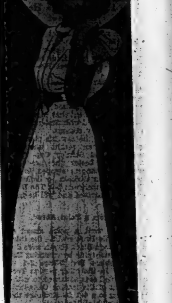
WHITE IS PREFERRED BY CURRENT DEBBIES

By LISSETH

WHITE IS the choice of the debutants this season—that is, for evening.

White tulle and other sheers are general favorites, sometimes with gold or silver, sometimes with other colors, sometimes all white, with fresh flowers, maybe, to give the accent.

Well, nothing is lovelier than white for the debutante or her grandmother for that matter. This white crepe dress worn by Louise Campbell, film player, is ideal for any winter evening. It has a draped bodice, short sleeves, wide skirt and a sash of gold net. Gold jewelry and possibly a hair ornament in either white or gold, completes the costume.



The white evening dress printed in bright colors and modestly trimmed with flowers in colors to match the print design, is another charming fashion to watch this winter, especially in resort frocks. Many young misses, too, are wearing dark skirts for formal affairs with light bodices—an eminently practical fashion for occasions such as concerts, the theatre, restaurants and dancing, etc., where one doesn't have to be strictly formal and yet must be dressed up".

Style Whimsies

Nothing in fashion circles is going to be more popular than the bolero this coming spring. A bolero may complete any evening shopping suit, supplement your afternoon frock, and accompany your evening gown going out.

With any skirt—at the shoulders, slim lines in the skirts, high necklines and interest at the waistline, are three sure enough stylings for spring.

A knitted or crocheted hat should be included in the cruise wardrobe.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HER

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

HERE WE are, with jewelry the subject of our gift suggestion for her—jewelry that is new and very smart right now!

Schiaparelli, that "mad genius" of the Paris fashion world, creates things like that. Here is performance—that immediately become the rage.

Her "gold serpent" jewelry which Alberta, American jewelry designer, has adopted for American women, is her latest. The gold serpent has a high splitter, and there is a huge clip, pictured here, resembling a Christmas mark, which reflects each gleam or light because of this construction. Possibly this is just what the girl friend would like to complete her new dress.

The clip is made of overlapping square beads, and there is a bracelet to match made of three flexible strands of the square beads, fastening with a row of coin-like disks.

Mixed, of the jewelry of the season is massive looking, but surprisingly light in weight.

There are many new necklaces to wear with the suit that call for this sort of jewelry instead of the clip or pin. Necklaces are very stylish this year, and you can't do better than give one for a gift.

Perfume is another thing that never fails. One perfumer is putting out three different scents all hidden under a brass Christmas bell that really rings a sweet peal. That would appeal to a young girl, an older woman, or grandma. In fact for the latter the bell might be a very useful as well as pretty gift.

THE PRAYER OF BEATEN MEN

From "The House of Broken Swords"

We are the fallen, who, with help-less faces
Low in the dust, in stiffening ruin lay,
Felt the hoof's beat, and heard the rattling traces
As o'er us drove the chariots of the fray.

We are the fallen, who by ram-parts grey,
Awaiting death, heard the far shouts begin.
And with our last glance glimpsed the victor's glory
For which we died, but dying might not win.

We were but men. Always our eyes were holden,
We could not read the dark that walled us round,
Nor deem our futile plans with thine enfolden—
Yet thought, not knowing God was on the ground.

Give us our own; and though in realms eternal,
The potsherd and the pot, bellie, bane,
Make our old world to know that with supernal
Power we were matched, and by the stars overthrown.

Ay, grant our ears to hear the foeman's pealing
Of men—old voices of our lost home-land,
Or else, the gateways of this din world raising,
Give us our swords again, and hold thy hand.

—William Harvey Woods.

THE WHITE PEACE

It lies not on the sunlit hill
Nor on the sunlit plain:
Nor ever on any running stream
Nor on the murmuring main.

But sometimes, through the perfect peace
Of Man,
Slow moving o'er his pain,
The moonlight of a perfect peace
Floods heart and brain.

—William Sharp.

WE SUGGEST FOR HER AT CHRISTMAS

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

IF YOU are puzzled about HER gift, how about luggage?

Women are always taking little trips. If it is only for a night or a week-end, and what woman is there who doesn't like good looking luggage?

Saddle-stitched luggage of tawny pigskin is shown here. The hat box goes odd-fashioned with a handsome shape, and is fastened with a very up-to-date zipper that locks.

The overnight bag, right, is leather lined and has glass and enamel fittings. It is small enough so that it may be carried as a travelling hand-bag.

Or travel gloves — how about them? The handsome pair shown here are brown and chamois colored doeskin. A pair of these skin gloves would be an acceptable gift, too, as they wear beautifully and are washable. Get them in a large size. By the way, some smart shops included little cards of folders in their first of December statements, with blanks to be filled out by the girl friend or her mother to show her size in gloves, hose, etc.

New airplane luggage would also please the girl friend or mother. It is light and smart, and a wardrobe bag to replace that old suitcase she has carried for so many years would be a fine surprise.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, Dec. 18

A lively and prosperous day is presaged from the ruling planetary configurations. Contacts in travel is imminent, probably in connection with new business or contracts. All matching to writings, publishings, advertisings or promotional schemes should thrive. Private matters may have some slight anxieties or perplexities.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of change, with removals of journeys, probably in connection with new business or contracts. Writings, publication, publicity and promotional work should be lively and profitable. Keep conscious in speech and writing as there are certain anxieties or inharmonies of a private nature.

SOCIAL WORKER FEELS NEED OF SLUM FIGHT

By Central Press

"DISGRACEFULLY little has yet been done to clear out either our urban or our rural slums, and the housing fight has just begun in the United States."

This is a statement made by Miss Helen Hall, of New York, before the National Conference of Social Work. Miss Hall is president of the National Federation of Settlements, and head worker of the Henry Street settlement in New York City.

Miss Hall refers to better housing as one of the chief concerns of social workers. Young people today face a world in which hours and wages, skill, advancement and the right to organize and bargain collectively are current realities. Against these are fighting slums, and youth needs to know about them if they are to take a responsible part, she states.

Britain's balloon anti-aircraft barrage project is being actively developed, according to Lieut.-Col. Moore, secretary for Air.

Vienna, Austria, reports that its mint has sufficient orders for coins from foreign countries to keep it operating at full capacity for at least eight months.

Where Dates Come From

Romance, adventure and vitamins—a peculiar combination but they're all found in dates. Ripened in full maturity on the palm-waved banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in Irak, (formerly Mesopotamia) dates are harvested at the peak of summer. Shipped from the old world to the new, the dates are unloaded in New York in bulk. The best fruit is then packaged by the process discovered by the famous French scientist, Louis Pasteur, assuring the utmost in cleanliness and purity. Next packaged, they are then ready for "home consumption."

New York Rangers Heading U. S. Section of N. H. L. by Defeating Inter - City Rivals

Win Over Amerks 2-0 And Will Be Hard to Dislodge

LEAFS WIN 4-2

Canadiens Fires Two Goals as Habitants Are Handed Defeat

From now on the rest of the National League can worry about how to match with Lester Patrick's Rangers for who made headway in the season—with capital R's—in New York.

It will take more than a few shots in the arm to keep any team abreast with Patrick's Rangers. To three years he has organized a system of play developed around a defence that the clock strolled with first-rate material for many years.

Last night he saw his pieces begin to produce results when his team defeated Montreal Cup finals. Last night Lester the far-seeing smiled as Ranger stepped in the ice for their division by defeating head of their division by the Blue-New York Amerks 3-0. The Blue-Coats have arrived and will be hard to dislodge.

Rangers a Point Ahead

Rangers went a point ahead of the Rockets in the standings while the third place Chicago Black Hawks were doing their bidding by thrashing the Detroit Red Wings 2-1 in Chicago. In the other game of the night Maple Leafs advanced to within a point of the leading Canadiens by an easy win over the Habitant club at Montreal.

Which both showed the experience of the sentient American boys on the ice. It didn't count for much when Rangers scored their fifth straight win and Dave Kerr, one of the few who didn't climb the ladder to get where he is, recorded his fifth shutout.

Another crowd of 15,000 watched as Lynn Patrick's men took over the Amerk power play to score the first goal while Rangers were short-handed in the second period when Colville capped the contest with a score in the last minute.

Canadiens Scores Twice.

Charlie Conacher was prevented by close checking from getting away many of his famous blazing drives but at Montreal, he barged through the defence twice to push the puck past Wilf Cude.

Aurel Joliat got both Canadiens' goals, breaking the score at 1-1 in the second. But Red Horner put Toronto ahead to stay in the third and Conacher got his second goal before Joliat bagged his second. Nick Metz added the thorough trimming of a team that was handicapped through the absence of Hooley Smith, George Mantha, the league's No. 1 goal getter.

Bill Stewart has composed a Chicago line of Pete Palangio, Cully Dahlstrom and Gordon Brydson and they clicked for two goals against Detroit. Wedged between those two efforts was the counter. Detroit did not reply until the third period when the North Dakota flash Marty Barry-Larry Aurie line scored through Lewis.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

By Geo. H. Corsar

Rumor has it that genial Jim Hegarty of the Sno' Shoe of the city is one of the county and mines the odd bit of fishing with his official duties, he is a member of the Rotary of the Anglers' Association of Genial Jim. It will be recalled landed a one and one-half pound pike of beauty from the waters spot on Sno' Shoe Hill last summer....But the inside story of the catch was never told until we heard James doing a spot of story-telling in between sessions of the Deseronto Council last week.

Chucking in the line, James felt a tug almost immediately....His eyes nearly bulged out of his head when he saw a beautiful trout swiftly disappear in his direction. He flip its tail in a parting salute and disappear in the shadows of the deep....Again the line sang through the air with the greatest of ease, and for the time in the way James' lady to smile....For he had the big fellow securely hooked. Then the sharp jerk on the line and the fish leaped clear of its water....and a beautiful smile spread over the Reg. arty feature.

But that grin was shortlived.... The fish in a final desperate effort jerked itself clear of the line and lay flopping on the ground, but a scant six inches from the water's edge.....But James was nothing daunted....setting his feet in a beautiful flying tackle that would make Bronko Nagurski look like a sandlotter, he nailed the fish before he got back in the water....The fact that James was mud up to his ears was nothing compared to the fishy beauty he held securely in his hands.

Maude Schmeling, the Black Uhlan of Germany went through the usual act of his ring career....a comeback drawn-perfect and without the semblance of a groggy spell....he landed the stuffing out of a certain Mr. Thomas, whose only claim to fame limelight came when he was matched with Max Schmeling, by satisfying the stage director and the hands who painted him as the fighting fool of the Nazis....He was matched with Joe Louis.

The varying sport sheets carry the story of Maxie being nipped in the financial bud for unpaid George Mantha, the league's No. 1 goal getter.

Bill Stewart has composed a Chicago line of Pete Palangio, Cully Dahlstrom and Gordon Brydson and they clicked for two goals against Detroit. Wedged between those two efforts was the counter. Detroit did not reply until the third period when the North Dakota flash Marty Barry-Larry Aurie line scored through Lewis.

BUDGE, RIGGS RATED AS TOPS

Bobby Riggs Replaces Frank Parker in Number 2 Spot

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Two tennis success stories with J. Donald Budge and Bobby Riggs as heroes are indicated in the recommendations of the rankings committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, which place Budge at No. 1 and Riggs at No. 2 in men's singles.

Budge easily retrieves his status in the throne, which will go to the U.S.L.T.A.'s 57th annual meeting at Atlantic City, Pa., Jan. 15 to 18. He's a year ago, he is No. 1 again on a series of smashing victories in Davis Cup, Wimbledon and National play, the greatest American player since Bill Tilden.

Riggs, who raised his ranking two notches from No. 4 to No. 2, couldn't match Budge's grand slash but he did oust Frankie Parker of New York from the secondary spot and force Parker and Bitsy Grant of Atlanta, third last year, to No. 4 and No. 5 on the ranking list.

Although she did not enjoy the glittering victories with which Budge succidered American Tennis laurels, Alice Marble of Beverly Hills, Calif., kept pace by holding her place as No. 1 in the women's ranking.

Just behind the blonde stylist is the No. 2 and No. 3 spots are the veteran Helen Hull Jacobs and Kay Stammers. Miss Mary Hardwick two other Californians who helped retain the Wightman Cup this year.

Two Belleville Hockey Clubs Open Group Schedules on Home Ice in the O. H. A.

Double Schedule Adopted by All Senior 'B' Clubs Except Queen's.

JUNIOR SCHEDULE

All Games in Which Queen's Participate to Count Four Points

Belleville O.H.A. entries pry off both senior and junior O.H.A. group schedules with opening games on the home ice this season, the Belleville Redmen inaugurating the current O.H.A. season with a senior 'B' fixture at the Belleville Arena on Dec. 21 versus the Peterboro' seniors, while the Belleville Juniors make their first appearance before the home crowd on Dec. 30 versus Harvards. The R.C.A.F. follow in line at the Belleville Arena however, with a scheduled senior "B" game here on Jan. 4, 1938, versus the rejuvenated Peterboro' club.

With Conveyor F/O. Cecil Kelly in the chair the two district groups convened at the Belleville Arena last evening and drafted the two district schedules, Belleville, the R.C.A.F., Queen's and Peterboro' being represented in the senior "B" series, while Belleville, R.C.A.F. and Havelock were represented in the junior "B" series of the O.H.A.

In the senior group all clubs in the group will play double schedules series each meeting a team with the exception of Queen's University, the latter club only participating in a home and home game series with the other three clubs concerned. It was agreed during the meeting that two points should be given for a win in all games played, except in the cases of matches played by and with the Queen's club these points should be awarded to the winner in all such games participated, thus balancing the group in the matter of the point system adopted.

In the senior "B" group, Conveyor Carling-Kelly announced that the play-off series would be played by the O.H.A. would be as follows: 1s. at the conclusion of the regular schedule played, the two clubs ultimately finishing first and second will play off, home and away series with the winner entering the provincial O.H.A. senior 'B' semi-finals with the two remaining clubs, finishing third and fourth, would play in the similar series with the ultimate

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken L. Calling

"What is it that Eddie Thomas has on the ball? We come amusingly to O.H.A. group meetings with views and convictions, only to have Thomas sit back and always come out on top, despite our pre-conceived plans to assume our clubs of the league, but Thomas simply refuses to get them," bewailed Harley Weir, secretary of the Belleville Intermediate club after last night's senior "B" and junior O.H.A. group meetings here.

After glancing over the schedules adopted last night, Thomas' two Belleville clubs are due for the best deal in the set-up. "After all that's what I go there for, to see that my clubs get the best deal possible," sensationally smiled Eddie Thomas, Belleville mayor and the two schedules we find the Belleville Redmen pry off the district O.H.A. "B" tilts at home versus Peterboro' here on the 21th of December, and again on the 28th of December versus Havelock here on December 28th. "Not bad going," he suggest.

After the meeting Manager Geo. Clay took the visiting Kingston and Peterboro' clubs for a ride to see them the splendid ice surface that is in evidence at the Belleville Arena. "Why that's a better sheet of ice than we saw here last night" exploded Ernie Wales of Peterboro while "Dutch" Dougall, manager of the Kingston O.H.A. senior "B" club was left spell-bound at the sight of such a fine ice surface on a natural ice sheet.

In order to acquaint the hockey fans with the senior "B" set-up, Belleville and district have decided on a little explaining. With the completion of Queen's University schedule all clubs are playing a double schedule. Belleville plays Peterboro' and Queen's on the Eastern Ontario war was concluded, he might have been expected to refer to his readers (?). If the Pete began to finish before his name did, he'd know whether or not all games counted. As a matter of fact he doesn't want to get too cocky over the future success of his Lift-Lock City pets, they're highly touted imports might prove just about in the same calibre as some of the "home-grown" baseball imports. And then what?

Toronto—Yvon Robert 220, Montreal and Ed Don Georges 229, North Java, N. Y., drew, one fall each.

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 17.—(CP)—There's never been any doubt about Hamilton's junior football. But that played in the east, the championship is especially expected here Saturday when Regina Dales meet up with Hamilton Hale for the Canadian junior championship.

For long until the western conference became mighty powerful, eastern junior teams were the cream of their sectional rivals. But it was never that way among the juniors. Hamilton has always had a good little fellows in Moose Jaw, Regina and Winnipeg as the cities of Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and St. Thomas.

Though the east has won five of six junior finals only one has been decisive. Belleville plays Queen's in 1928 another Regina team won the two tilts but only completed when they beat St. Thomas Yellow Jackets 9-6. The last national junior title was a blank as the City University of Toronto declining Moose Jaw by default.

Both United, Unbeaten

Both teams have impressive records. They are undefeated and untied for the season and both have rolled up commanding victory margins while holding the opposition to scant scoring. Each didn't fool all year while they scored 178 points. Only 18 points were scored against them.

Recruited mostly from Hamilton high schools, Hales have no one outstanding star such as Clarence Day (Lou) Springston of Regina but as a team they mowed down the Hamilton team with almost monotonous regularity.

Springston apparently is the fellow Hales must stop. The 240-pound 18-year-old is a terror on the line both on offensive and defensive and accuracy with his specialty—the forward pass. Springston was injured four when Dales won the Saskatchewan title from Saskatoon and one was good for 45 yards and was against the wind.

Couriers of Progress

The value of the service rendered by the newspaper is greater now than at any time in history. The pace of progress has quickened; things foreign and distant yesterday are near and neighbours today. Therefore, a constant source of reliable, last-minute news has become more essential than ever before to the welfare of the individual, community and nation alike.

The daily newspapers continue to satisfy this need. They are the couriers of progress, providing intimate contact between the man in the street and all phases of human endeavour.

The newspapers interpret the scientist, the laboratory worker, the engineer. They report quickly and impartially the development of new products and services which individually and collectively bring about higher standards of living.

The news and information thus made available increase a man's ability to produce and permit a greater enjoyment of living.

Consequently, every daily newspaper is blazing trails to new heights of individual and national achievement. More than two million Canadian families keep pace with progress in all phases of international, national and local affairs every day by means of their newspapers.

MOTORIST HURT IN CAR ACCIDENT

Fred Heasman, Stirling, Suffers Bad Cuts as Car Hits Train

Bonarlaw, Dec. 17.—(Special) — Fred Heasman, Stirling, sustained severe facial lacerations and body bruises when an automobile driven by him crashed into the front end of a C.P.R. locomotive at Ivanhoe crossing yesterday. Mr. Heasman was taken by a passing motorist to Madoc where medical attention was provided. Harry Cat, a passenger in the car, escaped with minor injuries and a bad shaking up.

Mr. Heasman was proceeding southward and apparently his car got out of control in the near the Ivanhoe crossing. The motor vehicle collided with the front end of a westbound way freight in charge of Conductor W. Backus and Engineer P. Haig. The accident happened east of Ivanhoe C.P.R. station. The force of the impact resulted in the motor car turning over in the ditch.

The train was proceeding very slowly as the time, as it was about to stop at the depot. The car was also travelling quite slowly, a fact which doubtless accounted for the fact that injuries were not more serious. The cause of the accident was stated to be skidding on the slippery road.

Provincial Police authorities from Belleville investigated the accident. Mr. Heasman's face was quite badly cut and several stitches were required to close the wounds.

The very short bolero in Persian lamb, attached to a waistband for warmth, is one of the highlights of the tableaux. Worn over a dress of black wool velour with a collar of silk jersey, it is the last word in chic.

Soccer Threatened by Snow in Scotland

Glasgow, Dec. 17 (CP)—Wintry conditions prevail throughout Scotland threatening many soccer matches scheduled for tomorrow. Several grounds resemble skating rinks and postponements are likely to be more numerous than last Saturday when play was impossible in eleven Scottish League matches.

Reports indicate that all the Glasgow grounds today are unfit for play. Pir Park, home of Motherwell, is a sheet of ice while at Falkirk the pitch has been sanded in the hope that play will be possible in the match with St. Mirren.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Turning quiet and heavy, industrial and gold stocks were showing mild net recessions today while the base metals and western oils maintained a steady to strong note. Trading eased off to only 210,000 shares in the first three hours.

Narrow losses predominated in the utility, breweries and building groups and paper and senior oils mainly were firm and irregular in western oils. Royalite, Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton ruled highest and Anglo-Canadian, Dalhousie and South West Petroleum sold down.

Dome advanced to a new high for the year, holding part of the point gain and other senior golds were steady and the secondary issues off slightly.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Dec. 17—(AP)— Stocks worked at cross purposes in today's apathetic market.

While gold mines and specialties managed to accumulate small gains, leaders, on the whole, were inclined to give ground. Most losses were in minor fractions. Numerous issues were unchanged. There were a few recoveries in evidence near the final hour.

Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—The government has acquired the birthplace of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at St. Lin, Que, and created a fund for perpetual care of Sir John A. Macdonald's grave at Cataraqui, Ont., it was announced today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's birthplace will be retained as a national possession and a shrine to the memory of the French-Canadian leader who was Prime Minister from 1896 to 1911.

Sir John MacDonald, Canada's first Prime Minister after Confederation, was born in Scotland but emigrated to Kingston, Ont. as a boy. His home here, Bracadrife, is the residence of the British High Commissioner to Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie King's statement from his residence, Laurier House, where Sir Wilfrid lived for many years.

The statement:

"I am pleased to be able to announce that, with the unanimous approval of the members of the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, the government has authorized the Minister of Mines and Resources to acquire, as a national possession, the birthplace of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, located on the village of St. Lin, Quebec, and, with the approval of the Board of Directors of the Cataraqui Cemetery Company, to create a trust fund to provide perpetual care for the plot in the cemetery of the village of Cataraqui, Ontario, where Sir John A. MacDonald is buried.

"In view of their national historical importance, I am sure the people of Canada will welcome provision being made for the perpetual care of the burial place of Sir John A. MacDonald and for the preservation of the birthplace of Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

Carr Transport Company Refused to Produce Books

Toronto, Dec. 17.—(CP)—Possibility of a test case arising over the right of the Chevrier Transport Commission to demand detailed business information from Motor Transport companies was indicated at the inquiry here today.

William Judson appeared as counsel for George Carr, owner of the Carr Transport Company, Owen Sound, who yesterday refused to produce his books at the probe.

Judson told the Commission there was a possibility that the inquiry did not come within the terms of Ontario Public Inquiries Act. There was also a possible question of privilege, he said, and asked the court to defer Carr's testimony until the afternoon to enable him to have time to look into the matter further.

Has Full Power

Mr. Justice R. R. H. Chevrier, chairman of the Commission, granted postponement of Carr's testimony but declared he felt "the Commission has full power to exact all information from Motor Transport companies and will insist on having it."

Mr. Justice Chevrier said the dispute must end today, before the Commission adjourns to January 10.

"If anyone wants to use this as a test case, they are welcome to," he said, "but the Commission is of the opinion that it has power to exact all information in order to effect the purpose for which it was appointed.

"This is not an inquisition but an investigation and we want the co-operation of all parties concerned without causing undue harm to anyone.

"If you want time we will give you to-day afternoon but we want it clearly understood that we are going to get all information available."

Discuss Canadian Banking At Tweed Literary Society

Tweed—The Literary Club held a very interesting meeting on Monday evening with Mr. T. R. Moffat, B.A., presiding. The subject for discussion was "Canadian Banking." It was most ably dealt with by Mr. T. R. Allen, manager of The Royal Bank, and Mr. George Hall, accountant at The Bank of Montreal.

Mr. Allen dealt with the subject from the standpoint of Public Relations as affecting Canadian Banking. Some criticism during the past few years has been directed by the general public against Canadian banking which the speaker deemed ill-founded and unjust. Two of these criticisms are "The Money Monopoly Or" and "Combine."

Critics point to the disparity of interest and exchange rates in all banks as evidence that banks are a monopoly, yet no one suggests that any half-dozen grocers in a town are a monopoly because prices of flour or sugar in each store are the same. That is governed by conditions outside of the control of the individual merchant. The monopolistic right to print money. They have the right to issue bank bank notes only up to the amount of the cheques against them. No bank-note government inspection prevents unlawful exceeding of a bank's limitations.

The latest available figures show that on December 31st, 1932, there were 48,971 shareholders of bank stock; owning an average of 32.3 shares. Most of the shareholders are people of relatively small means and include many women, widows and estates. There are 4,807,438 depositors in Canadian chartered banks with an average deposit of $473. The greater portion of the money on deposit comes from many small depositors who may be described as the lending class, as it is their deposits which the banks loan to the borrowing public.

Mr. Allen dealt with the criticism that banks are a "Combine" in the sense that they are a joint activity contrary to the public interest. They live an association, but are so by law, not merely by choice. They are completely subject to continuous control by parliament which applies the Bank Act at ten year intervals, or at shorter periods.

In a most interesting and humorous style Mr. Elwood gave by way of introduction a description of his experience as a junior in various branches of the bank in Ireland. He entered the head office of the Ulster Bank Limited in Belfast and vividly pictured the feeling of awe in the presence of the manager, staff and inevitably were rock cakes and shiny top hats. There was considerable difficulty in distinguishing between the important Head Office officials and the inconsequential messengers.

"My first duties," said Mr. Elwood, "were not very strenuous and did not call for any great degree of intelligence. It was being individual into the first daily mail each collecting junior, nasally dumped the progress, when another enbrant made his appearance, so I proceeded to initiate him and to add my first promotion after ten minutes' experience.

Civil war was raging in Ireland at the time and a bank junior's post held no sinecure. One duty was to carry bags of cheques and currency between the Head Office and the various city branches. The system in use to thwart any attempted hold-up or robbery was quite effective. At the Head Office the bag containing the money was securely locked and fastened, and then I had to remove my coat and have a band placed around by arm from which a tag hung. I then put down through my coat sleeve, my coat put on and the other end of the tag fastened to my wrist. The trip was usually made by junior, as by law the H. O. officials had that our salary was more assured while we kept in full view of the public, but I sometimes doubted that and usually felt quite relieved when the journey was finished.

A business thrives or suffers according to its ability or luck to earn a legitimate profit, and this is true of the banking business as well as of every other type of commercial organization. The difference is in the "goods" in which a bank deals. An industrial organization buys raw materials, which it manufactures and sells to its customers. A bank deals in deposits and "sells" credit. If there were ample deposits and no credit sold a bank could not continue in business very long, for there would be no profit.

Out of the interest collected the bank must pay its own bond costs, whatever spread there remains is joyfully credited to the Head Office.

One American banker has this to say of the dangerous side of banking. "In old Ut of the Chisholm Trail" there was a song that was a man named Job, who from his commanding position in the community and judging from his remarks patience with which he endured an unfair adversity, must have been the local banker. One afternoon after banking hours, I took a nice fresh slab of wax clay inscribed it in neat cuneiform characters and sent it to the bakery to be made permanent, and today we read among the most treasured of the book of Job,the oldest literature we know—this wisdom: "Where the rest is, there are the vultures gathered together".

The bank is where the money is and the money is the least of desire. So above every bank hovers always a cloud of black worry, fearing, ready to pounce if any opportunity is given. Bandits, burglars, footpads, swindlers, cheque-kiters, short cheque men, till snatchers, forgers and rogues. They money is there and they want it.

It's hard work to be greeted every day by lining up the staff and having community singing. I am glad each collecting junior, nasally dumped the progress, when another enbrant made his appearance, so I proceeded to initiate him and to add my first promotion after ten minutes' experience.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago when the organized population of Canada was only 3,500,000 people out of every 100,000 were living in poverty and distress.

To-day in Canada, only 50 persons are living in poverty and distress out of every 100,000 people.

Fifty years ago 1,000 persons in Canada died from tuberculosis to-day there were only 70 deaths from this cause. Fifty years ago 12,000 cases were reported to the health authorities of Canada to-day there were 3,000 cases reported. Fifty years ago 1,000 babies died in Canada before they were one year old to-day 70 babies die from tuberculosis. Fifty years ago 1,000 people died from typhoid fever with practically no cure for the disease to-day there are within the province of Ontario alone 1,000 cases every year. Fifty years ago 1,000 persons died from diphtheria to-day there are less than half of those who die or now suffer from this disease. Fifty years ago 1,000 of the prime producers were struck down with pneumonia to-day 70 die from this disease. Fifty years ago 1,000 people died from typhoid fever to-day this disease has been greatly reduced. It is still a menace, but 14 out of every 15 persons admissions are found to be in the hospitals for the purpose of undergoing treatment for the benefit of their own health, their families and community.

To find the children and to give them the treatment they require, the Toronto Star and the Toronto Daily Star have joined hands and the Queen Mary Hospital Fund for Crippled Children. Their success depends largely upon the generosity of the public and upon their contributions, for which an urgent appeal is made.

INSTALMENT 19

Every day Sandra, asked about Bryant Wilson, regularly received a report from doctors and nurses, a glibly evasive answer. Dr. Coleman had given instructions that his patient was not to know of Wilson's death. The doctor meant well, of course, for Sandra's chief trouble was shaken nerves. But if he could foresee the circumstances under which his patient was to learn of Wilson's fate he would not have given such instructions.

Sandra assumed that Bryant was recuperating in another hospital. Whether Bryant was in love with her was not now important. Their friendship had been an impetuous episode—and that episode was quite definitely ended. Nothing or the confused past seemed to matter to her now—the brilliant indifference to all save her present need of real and quiet rest. Sandra was not, consciously, of thinking about anything.

Days after this brief phase of her life was locked away in memory, Sandra was to think of that week in the hospital and know how ill she had been. And knowing that, she would understand why she had taken the cowardly, instinctive way of decision—with Stephen, whom she was going to marry in the full knowledge that she did not love him—and with her mother she then had said in her last daily call, "Dr. Coleman says we may take you home, Sandra, provided you promise to be quiet. At least four hours a day and avoid all excitement are going to be necessary, dear."

Nothing had changed in the Park avenue apartment. Sandra could almost imagine she had just gone up to bed for the night. Of the past two and a half months a particularly vivid memory. She moved from room to room, drinking in the familiar scene, wondering why she had ever thought there was something she wanted more than this. She was glad to be back—to look up the old life of luxurious idleness. The atmosphere was still charged with the smouldering antagonisms of her parents, but Sandra cared about none so long as they were forever and be fed, sheltered, clothed, amused, perhaps loved a little.

This was the first stage of that long dreary—and, at times, terrible—week. Sandra's first moment alone, she strolled through the quiet, unpeopled streets of the little town that, from her Turk window, combining in the peculiar scene, wonderfully why she had chosen it—seemed there was something she wanted more than this. SAYS MEN WORK 9 TO 10 HOURS DAY

Transport Owner of Brantford States Cards Incorrect

Toronto, Dec. 16—(CP)—Driven by Martin Transport of Brantford, Ont., work nine to 10 hours a day but their time cards incorrectly show they work eight hours, the manager, said this Charles Byrne, Transport Commission today. He said he had driven the trucks himself and knew how long the trips took.

Martin said he had no machine operated when relaying wages ranging from $20 to $28 a week monthly $16. Answering Joseph Sharpe, commission counsel, he said he thought the wages fair under the conditions.

"If you've men 10 weeks a year regardless of holidays," he said, "I consider the men work hard when we are busy and it is only fair to keep them on when business is slack."

L. O. Fisher, general representative of the Automotive Transport Section of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, charged last July that Martin had not paid the men by Martin said this was because he was absent and who could not do a full day's work. He gave him the $15 more from July then, explained also.

Time Spent Waiting

Further cross-examination by Mr. Sharpe brought from Martin the information that while his drivers spend waiting hours when no job is ready, they are waiting for pack, brought time on duty up as high as 12 hours, or about 72 hours a week. But on slack seasons his men worked five or six hours a day.

Martin said his office made frequent pay advances to drivers and sometimes the drivers "came in short" using collecting themselves when cards on file dollar was charged on what drivers were short to complete the payday.

Witness said trucking rates were satisfactory before the depression, and were now slightly improved over 1936.

Ma and Pods Simkins and shorty Judge was having another meeting about what to do to find a home for Scratcher, and Sam Crow came up, saying, "Good afternoon, you found a home for that dog yet? If I was the one that found him I'd of kept him myself and saved myself all the trouble, he said.

Yes you would, you would like him, you mean you would if you was about to, me and Pods and Sam Cras said. About nothing. Well I at take him to the home and if anybody in there didn't like it I'll punch them in and see how they like it.

Him being the biggest liar hood of Bellamy Bughouse, changed the subject and said, Yes, Shorty and I will prove it, go ahead and prove it and then we'll believe it.

Okay, I'll prove it rite now, I'll take him in my house rite in front of your own, and I'll tell my mother he's my dog, and I bet her she'll let me keep it so there's no use of her arguing because that is what I'm going to do.

And we went over to his house and in a few minutes he and came rite out again, saying, I said her all rite.

I didn't take you very long to fix her, I said, she he said, I'm a quick talker.

With just then who came rite along up to us from around the corner but Scratcher, Sam Cross and me, O well, it he's as dum as guess so the back way the mother to he's got a home, the back with him, and me saying, Runs out nothing, somebody put him out.

With just then Sam's mother called from inside, saying, Hamner come in here rite away, I want to speak to you.

Shorty said, and Sam said, She wants me to taste a cake for her to see if it's good enough.

And he took two bi, making as fellow feel more ashamed then surprised.

DIVERSION PLANS AWAIT INTERNATIONAL PACT

Use of Additional Power To Be Authorized First, Hydro Chairman States

Long Lac, Ogoki And Ni-agara Plans Would Affect Lake Levels

PRESENT PLANS

International Agreement Will be First Step

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission this suspended plans for the north-waters of Canada's water diversion projects until an agreement governing the use of additional water for power generation at Niagara Falls is reached, Dr. Thomas Magg, Commission chairman, said yesterday.

The Commission had done preliminary work on the Long Lac diversion, intended to turn some water flowing northward, into the Great Lakes and thus supply additional water at Niagara Falls.

"We're going ahead with the dam on this division channel, with the idea that pulpwood can be driven down to Lake Superior by it," said Dr. Magg. "No decision will be made for power purposes until it is learned the international agreement."

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, yesterday charged the Ottawa and Washington federal governments had agreed to divert more water than permitted to divert additional water at Niagara Falls until the completion of the St. Lawrence deep waterway project.)

The Ogoki diversion project, a $5,000,000 plan in direct watery now flowing into Lake Superior, also to provide additional water for power at Niagara Falls, Chairman Magg said. Dr. Magg surveys were continuing but no work would be done until the diversion was perfected.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weatherwise it's going to be cold down of mountains and upheads in the level. It's already mostly by water. It begins with rain, which as it falls pounds into the soil, dissipating and absorbing it, and then carries it to the streams and rockcut at authoritative accounts as to whether or not Mr. Duplessis did make the statementally credited to him. The editorial was written based on the news reports available journalists, and not on the denial of a rudely awakened provincial prime minister."

PARCEL POST LIMIT RAISED TO 25 LBS.

Ottawa, Dec. 18 (CP)—The Post Office Department announced last night the weight limit on parcel post would be raised shortly from 11 to 25 pounds and that rates on parcels weighing more than the former 11-pound limit would be proportionately higher.

Officials explained the increase in the weight limit was necessary to give additional delivery facilities as parcel-post delivery is effected now by truck in urban centers and districts having rural delivery.

Ice-Laden Coping Kills Child Looking at Santa

Detroit, Dec. 18 (AP) — David Siegel, who saved here from being killed last night when a cornice of ice on a downtown building fell on him as he gazed at the figure of a store window to gaze at a bright, colorful Santa Claus. Crushed by the cornice, Siegel, 7, died. Survivors the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Siegel of River Rouge.

PAPER REPLIES TO HEPBURN

Refers to His Attacks on Veracity of Its News

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—The Globe and Mail in an editorial today replying to Premier Hepburn's charge that the newspaper carried "false news" in its Friday stories of Premier Duplessis' speech at Shawinigan Falls, Que. and of possible aid agreed upon by the Dominion government to divert additional water at Niagara Falls until the completion of the St. Lawrence deep waterway project.)

The Capital diversion project, a $5,000,000 plan in direct watery now flowing into Lake Superior, also to provide additional water for power at Niagara Falls, Premier Hepburn and Dr. Magg, surveys were continuing but no work would be done until the diversion was perfected.

"We leave it to the public to judge Mr. Hepburn's ability to aggravate and misrepresent between truth and falsehood, however, we feel that we have been treated up and down Canada during his provincial election campaign by newspapers which, notwithstanding that introduction, in which he participated, were already under way and have since been consummated.

"He states that The Globe and Mail called Mr. Duplessis a liar. Although The Globe and Mail did not call the Quebec premier a liar, the charge does seem strange coming from a man who is one of his fits of rage a little more than a year ago described Premier Duplessis' predecessor, Premier Taschereau, a liar in no uncertain terms.

"The Globe and Mail has heard frequently of politicians running to shelter under the aegis of alibis, alleging misquotation, and for this reason long ago adopted the practice of recording in writing the statement that the action of the Canadian government in refusing to grant, without consulting parliament, the policy followed by successive administrations, with regard to the granting of export licences is not in accordance with the Ottawa Agreements.

CHINESE SINK JAPANESE SHIP

Batteries Fire Upon Attacking Warship, Destroyer Sunk

Hong Kong, Dec. 18 (CP-Havas)—Chinese coastal batteries sank a Japanese warship and a destroyer in a duel with attacking warships near Amoy, Fukien Province port, it was reported today.

Chinese batteries at the Wuspan forts, down the Amoy river, opened several direct hits on the warships during the engagement, the report declared. Gravely damaged, the vessel sank as it returned to the Japanese fleet lying at anchor about five miles east of Amoy.

Amoy is about 300 miles northeast of this British Crown Colony.

PRIME MINISTER SAYS GOVERNMENT TO MAKE DECISION

Will Not Grant Licence to Ontario to Export Power Without Orders

MAKES STATEMENT

Left Unanswered Claim He Was Unfriendly to Ontario

Ottawa, Dec. 18 (CP)—Accusations from Premier Hepburn of Ontario that the federal administration had a "made-in-Washington" power policy today left Prime Minister Mackenzie King unmoved from his stand that only the Dominion government would grant no electric power export licenses without orders from parliament.

The prime minister last night declared in the House of Commons that the province's charge the federal administration's stand on the power export question resulted from United States pressure, said no negotiations had been initiated by Canada or the United States on the question, and ignored Mr. Hepburn's charge he was unfriendly to Ontario.

Statement Issued.

In a statement issued late last night Mr. King said he had received many accusations from his one-time House of Commons colleague.

Mr. Hepburn's statement on the situation said yesterday the Dominion government's "made-in-Washington" policy influenced it to allow Ogoki, from Ontario into supporting the St. Lawrence deep waterway scheme favored by President Roosevelt, in return for permission to export power and further divert the Niagara River for power.

Mr. Mackenzie King said: "There is no foundation for the press statement that the action of the Canadian government in refusing to grant, without consulting parliament, the policy followed by successive administrations with regard to the granting of export licences is not in accordance with the United States.

Chinese Planes Not Handled Properly Says Correspondent

T. Y. McDaniel Gives Impressions of Nanking City

CITY UNDEFENDED

(C. Yates McDaniel, Associated Press correspondent reached Shanghai by plane from Nanking where he had remained from early in July. Chinese-Japanese dispute until after Japanese forces occupied China's abandoned capital.)

By C. YATES McDANIEL

Shanghai, Dec. 18 (AP) — Four lines as many Chinese planes crashed from poor piloting as Japanese guns shot down. That tells the story of what happened to China's air force.

Not one North American flier took to the air in action against the Japanese. Russian airmen, who flew in 50 planes from the Soviet, were the only fighters to join the Chinese air force in action.

China's Italian air advisers ended their connection with the Nanking regime because of political co-operation between Japan and Italy.

Japan, Germany and Germany are joined in an anti-Communist agreement.

Furthermore, the Chinese were in need of gas for the Italians might sell the Japanese.

When the government moved from doomed Nanking, its air force flew off leaving the capital's defenders entirely without aerial support during the Japanese siege.

Anti-aircraft batteries, which fired hundreds of rounds every day, shot down only one enemy plane during the attack, leaving Japanese airmen sway over Nanking the freedom of the city's skies. Bombers dive and strafe at once. Russian airmen, who flew in 50 planes from the Soviet, were the

U. S. Delivers Second Note To Japan on Panay Case

Additional Representations Made to Japanese Over Report of Machine-Gunning by Launches

Tokyo, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Japan-Washington said the representations made by Grew were based on the details of the bombing as received from naval and diplomatic sources in China and relayed to him. The material supplemented the formal note sent by the state department to the Japanese government early today.

Japanese Army Investigation

Informed sources said that Vice-Admiral Hiroshi Hasegawa, commanding Japan's naval forces in the war with China, had assumed the full responsibility for the Panay case. He had ordered a resignation.

At the same time the Japanese army officially entered the investigation. Lieut.-Col. Yoshiaki Hishi was said to have left Tokyo several days ago to conduct an inquiry in China independent of the navy's investigation.

PASSENGER TRAIN LEAVES TRACKS

Toronto-North Bay Line Blocked by Wreck Near Callandar

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 18 (CP)—North Bay-Toronto line of the Canadian National Railways was blocked today as the result of a passenger train wreck last night two miles north of Callander, home of Lieutenant-Governor Colonel the Honorable William Earl, Allandale, Ont., suffered bruises and leg injuries. No passengers were injured in the crash.

The passengers received only a shaking.

The big engine, derailed, also with the tender and a buffer baggage car, was resting on its side with its nose only a few feet from the provincial highway. Less than 150 yards of track were torn up. Cause of the derailment was not known.

Passengers rushed to aid the engine crew when the train jolted to a stop. Engineer Fred Lee, of North Bay, was found on the track, hardly escaped from the overturned engine. A motorist brought the engineer here.

The passenger coaches were taken to North Bay by another engine and re-routed by Toronto and Sudbury. Wrecking crews from Allandale and Callander, Ont., were called.

Alfred Steele, Kirkland Lake, Ont., C.N.R. train passenger on the train was no pass among the passengers.

"There was nothing much to it. I only felt the train give up and there were several slight jolts when it stopped. Most of the passengers left the train and wound around to see what happened. I was about the first one to get to the engine, I guess. The engineer had an injured leg and I gave him first aid."

TO LAUNCH TEST CASES IN COURT

If Successful Control Over Operations of 'Loan Sharks' Will be Made

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—Cecil L. Snyder, Assistant Crown Attorney for Toronto, has been appointed to investigate the operations of high-charging money lenders throughout Ontario, Attorney-General Conant announced yesterday.

It was expected that after Mr. Snyder has completed his investigation, two or three test cases will be launched in the courts. If the prosecutions are successful, control over the operations of "loan sharks" will be established.

It was believed that if the test prosecutions failed, the Attorney-General would seek new provincial legislation at the next session of the legislature. In some quarters it was said it may be necessary for Ontario to seek co-operation from the Dominion government for new and more concise federal legislation.

Mr. Snyder has been Assistant Crown Attorney in Toronto for the past seven years. It was understood he planned to put before the courts some especially "hard cases" but whether these would be launched under the provincial law respecting money lenders or the Dominion Act has not yet been decided.

VICEROY LOSES MOTHER IN DEATH

Mrs. Helen Buchan, 80, Succumbs to Illness at Peebles

Peebles, Scotland, Dec. 18 (CP)—Mrs. Helen Buchan, mother of Lord Tweedsmuir, died today.

Before her marriage to Rev. John Buchan, late Governor-General's father, Mrs. Buchan was Miss Helen Masterton, daughter of John Masterton, of Broughton Green, Peebleshire.

She was 80 years of age and had been ill for only a short time. The viceroy's mother, living with her son at home, "Dusk House", where she died, was the novelist who wrote under the pen name of O. Douglas.

Lord Tweedsmuir's uncle, John Buchan travelled to Canada in June last year to visit Lord Tweedsmuir. He was a devoted worker in the cause of the Boy Scouts and a supporter of the Scottish League of Wives and Mothers. She was a member of the congregation of the local branch in twenty years last Wednesday.

She was born on her father's farm at Broughton Green and was the wife of John Buchan when in her teens. Besides Lord Tweedsmuir and Buchan, she leaves another son, J. Walter Buchan, town clerk of Peebles. Two other children, William, at one time a judge in India, and Alison, predeceased her.

SOUP KITCHENS OPEN IN ROME

Thousands of Citizens Are Forced to Leave Homes

Rome, Dec. 18 (AP)—Soup kitchens were established and temporary shelters prepared today for thousands of Romans driven from their homes by the flooded Tiber River.

The river had dropped slightly early today after causing millions of dollars damage and driving 25,000 persons from their homes.

Engineers were alarmed, however, that unseasonable warmth would cause the flood still higher. Already it was seven feet higher than it was 24 hours ago to hold the river to its course.

Thousands lined the banks to watch the swirling Tiber, whose rise of 18 feet from Friday night to yesterday, has caused more excitement than any event since the conquest of Ethiopia.

Two of the city's eleven bridges and dozens of streets and highways were closed. Whole sections of Trastevere, Testaccio and Ripetta were under water. Some families were rescued by boats from upper stories of buildings in the submerged area.

Insurgent Forces Fight in Cemetery in Snow-drifts

By CHARLES P. NUTTER
Madrid, Dec. 18 (AP)—Terucl, the southern spearhead of General Franco's Aragon line, was ringed today by besieging government forces, and a battle was progressing within the city.

Teruel's communications were cut by the government's pincer-day surprise offensive. The city, one of Franco's most important Aragon positions, about 150 miles east of Madrid, has been held by the Insurgents since the start of the civil war just seven months ago.

"Pursuing Enemy"

(An Insurgent communique reaching the French frontier denied the government claims. It said, however, it admitted "we are pursuing the enemy with success.")

SINCLAIR LEWIS ISSUES PROTEST

Appeals For Assistance in Private Censorship of Theatre

New York, Dec. 18 (CP)—Sinclair Lewis yesterday issued a call for assistance in private censorship of the theatre in reply to the announcement by the Legion of Decency of the Roman Catholic Church that Sunday, listing certain stage productions as objectionable.

"Any one who tries to censor good things is in danger of performing a great evil and I can't see it done without protest," the author of "It Can't Happen Here" said in an address to the Boston University Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Lewis said he wanted to tell the Legion of Decency, "Keep off, Mr. Malachy's Miracle". Adapted for the stage by Brian Doherty, young Toronto lawyer and categorized as partly objectionable, no movie has been contracted to join the Catholic Church.

13 HOLDS NO FEARS FOR TRANSIENTS

That old adage of "unlucky thirteen" seems to hold no fears for transients travelling through Ontario today. Some persons will hesitate to sit 13 at a table while still others will not retire with 13 going to bed. Three times this week however, 13 transients have been affected a night's lodging at the gaol in Belleville and on all occasions, have slumbered within the confines of the building one of the nights in question. The last walk in and flop down, resulted in nearly passing the time of day with some other tramp, who they had not before met. Among these are all asleep long before midnight. Provided Sergeant Scott to oblige.

No serious crime was reported locally during the past 24 hours, one man being the only arrest since the charges of vagrancy until Monday's police court proceedings.

Hitler Aims at 'People's Car' To Be Sold Cheap for Export

Large Scale Production Announced Within Few Years

ROADS IN 'CULTURE'

Berlin, Dec. 18 (CP)—Chancellor Hitler announced last night Germany would begin within a few years to export a cheap "people's car" on a large scale.

The automobile is to be produced in what is to be Germany's largest factory, of which the cornerstone is to be laid soon.

Every hundred thousand cars will be manufactured annually," he declared, "so we may soon reach the point of American motorization, namely, one automobile per five inhabitants."

Hitler made his announcement to 2,000 persons during a dinner and sightseeing tour through Berlin on the completion of 3,000 kilometres (1,341 miles) of national autoroads.

He told the workers that Prussian highways rather than a so-called liberty of press testified to the culture of a nation.

The chancellor declared German efforts now were directed at making the automobile industry independent of foreign materials. "We are producing synthetic rubber, iron, steel and while metals

BOARD WILL ASK SERVICE CLUBS FOR ASSISTANCE

Reported That Children at School Insufficiently Clothed

SOME KEPT AWAY

Last Meeting of Board is of Short Duration

Appointment of a committee to interview service clubs of the city with a view to obtaining financial assistance to obtain clothing and necessaries for underprivileged children now on the rosters of the schools of the city featured the final meeting of the 1937 Belleville Board of Education held in the board room of the Collegiate Institute last night.

The motion to appoint the committee followed mild discussion of a paragraph embodied in the report of Truant Officer F. T. Wagg, which stated that a number of children attending school were insufficiently clothed through inability of parents to provide for them, while a number were kept from classes for the same reason.

Mr. H. B. Pettersy stated that in his opinion these cases should be reported to the Board of Health and be referred to churches, societies and other organizations of the city for assistance along these lines.

"Students must attend classes," declared Mr. R. Moorcraft, and in my opinion it is up to the Board to assist them." Following further discussion, Mr. R. E. Bryan moved that a committee be appointed to act with service clubs of the city to obtain clothing and other assistance for these children. Messrs. F. C. McGregor, W. Denike and H. B. Pettersy were named as a committee to act for the Collegiate Board. The motion was carried.

Study Fee in the Discard

Requests in a letter from Principal P.O. McLaurin of the Collegiate Institute that the Board included the installation of a bell connected with the clock system in the school in Mr. Hunter's room. As there is no bell in present room and the room is located in the basement, where the bell cannot be heard, students often are late for other classes, it was pointed out. Permission was given the Belleville Study and Lecture Club, a city organization comprising some one hundred members, to use the auditorium or the library on occasions, when the club is addressed by members of the faculty of Queen's University, the extension course with which the club is affiliated.

Permission was also granted the members of the Belleville Musical Band to use the auditorium for the purpose of holding a dance on New Year night when gifts of food and Christmas cheer will be asked of the public at a reasonable fee to be given to the poor families of the city.

There is no evidence of communicable disease at present in the schools of the city, it was pointed out in the report given by the attending nurse. A few minor skin diseases had been detected, which were soon cleaned up and at present the children attending school are in a healthy condition. Five hundred and sixty-five children were examined at Queen Victoria School, 265 in number at Queen Alexandra School, 565 at Queen Mary School and 210 at King George School, the report stated.

Fire Drills Excellent.

In addition to his report on underprivileged children the Board, Mr. Wiggins stated that during the fire drills held at intervals in the various schools, pupils moved out in an orderly manner in the average time of forty seconds. Following the report of the finance committee bills amounting to $5,984.39 were ordered paid.

The retiring chairman of the Board, Mr. H. J. Allin, in a brief address, thanked the members of the staff governing body for the splendid co-operation given him during his term of office. He also expressed the many pleasant associations and good fellowship existing between the members of the Board in 1937. The Rev. L. S. Wright, in behalf of the committee of citizens added his congratulations on the fine work done during the year. The board gentlemen concluded their addresses with seasonal compliments.

TURKEYS, GEESE FEATURE DISPLAY ON CITY MARKET

Turkeys Sold at 30 Cents Pound With Geese at 23 to 25 Cents

FOWL PLENTIFUL

Vegetables, Apples, Dairy Products Close to Last Week's Close

A heavy buying public, Christmas minded, thronged the inside city market early today as barn-yard royalty in all its seasonal glamor held court for the first time this season. Khiz Turkeys short of his feathered glory but none of his royal mien as he lay in state over the eyes of a curious yet avid public. Mother Goose in various guises from two to ten pounds that far exceeded any seen this season. Ducks in close from six to about 14, "cute little ducklings" to the soirée crakers, were second only to the less colorful market Madam Hen.

There were hens in all sizes, varieties and classifications. At an early hour vendors from the outlying districts and from far away places had their quota of Christmas dinner edibles laid out for inspection. And not far behind them was a curious yet briskly buying crowd of Christmas shoppers.

Turkeys at 30 Cents

A casual survey of the birds, and queries at the majority of the booths, with some more or less reluctant social acknowledgment of the information that the Royal Bird was placed second only in jobs to his humble spouse, dominating the prices up, it can be said that the average weight of the turkey was thirty cents the pound. The various vendors were quoted as crying out for asking as high as thirty seven cents the pound, but 30 cents was the rule. Others asked thirty five and thirty six, but in the main thirty cents was the price at which sales were made.

Geese were quoted as from twenty to thirty cents the pound, and were fairly plentiful. Ducks in practically all sizes were priced at slightly over a dollar to one dollar and one half each. Chicken fanciers maintained their former high levels with fair quality birds selling at from ninety cents to $1.40.

The difference was noted in egg prices over those of a week ago, when fresh eggs were the average price of thirty five cents with medium and poorer sizes ranging between and after thirty five cents per dozen respectively.

Pantaloon poker showed no change selling at sixty and sixty five cents per pound, and in the various cooking booths, gaily bedecked with Christmas pastries and other delicacies, were doing a brisk business.

While the inside mart stole more than its share of the glory in the more than average display of winter fruits and vegetables was on exhibition in the outside market. A fine offering of winter apples again featured the fruit display with the popular McIntosh Reds selling at two dollars per hamper for pickers and Delicious were also in demand. Spranded the same prices with similar quality. Other winter apples and other less popular varieties were offered from one dollar to $1.50 per bushel.

Vegetables Firm

Carrots, onions, beets, parsnips and other staple winter vegetables were offered at the same prices that marked them a week ago. Potatoes showed no change at one dollar per bushel for the better grades.

Adding a further seasonal touch were the large quantities of Christmas Trees. Blue Spruce were offered at from fifty cents to one dollar each while balsam and other varieties of evergreen were quoted at from twenty five cents upwards. Tiny evergreens for table and home decorations were also in demand and sold at from twenty cents upwards.

Lovers of fish had plenty to entice them at the city market, five cents sliced and twenty two cents in the piece. Mudcats sold at fifteen cents per pound, while red salmon demanded the same price.

QUINTE SKATING CLUB EXTENDS ITS PREMISES

Clubroom And Skating Area Enlarged to Accommodate Members

PROFESSIONAL ENGAGED

With enlarged quarters for the accomodation of their members, the Quinte Skating Club launched upon its seventh consecutive season today and boasting of modern and up-to-date facilities at their present location at the corner of Dufferin Ave. and Queen St. Additional clubhouse quarters for the comfort of the members have been made, while the skating surface of the new Quinte Skating Club has been increased and is the finest of recent years. The ice surface was banked and flooded earlier this week on the smooth level tennis courts, that flourished so successfully the past summer.

Besides enlarging their premises and its skating facilities, the Quinte Skating Club will still further "Instruction in the graceful figure skating" in Belleville, specially among the youth of the city. They have partially engaged Gordon Davies, local skater, as the professional tutor for the club, although Mr. Davies is not actually employed by the club, but rather as a direct teacher, his proficient services will be available to the professional by those desirous of tuition.

History of Club

Commencing back in 1931, as the Belleville Skating Club and holding forth at the Belleville Arena, the club was then not incorporated nor housed at that point until 1932, when the present manager of the Quinte Skating Club was adopted, moving to other quarters, at the old curling rink on William Street, the fancy skaters have remained until the club marched their property in 1936. At which time they moved to the Tiger Hollow rink of yesteryear, later to be again rendered homeless when this premises were occupied by a manufacturing concern. Not to be outdated, the officers of the club procured a site at their present location and last winter erected a clubhouse, and will commence the re-establishment of their club, this season and will be introduced to the club and a long-wanted need was realized in the city by providing tennis courts for the younger generation.

Confident in popularity the club was forced to enlarge its clubhouse in order to accommodate the increased spectators, who have signified their interests of hand and foot ice skating this year, although it is not necessary to fancy skate, pleasure skating being permitted certain hours throughout the day. The Club was organized to increase the interest in the art of figure and fancy skating, to encourage ice skating, and provide facilities for increasing skill in such sports. Much credit is due Mr. I. K. Scott, chairman of the Board of Directors, and all other members of the board for their untiring efforts in bringing the Quinte Skating Club to its present position as the city's programme of sports, and the size of the club membership as well over the 100 mark and may have to be closed in order to accommodate the skaters who now are affiliated.

Two Groups

Two direct groups are included in the club's membership, the junior and senior groups, the latter being under the age of 16 years and who have certain hours set aside for their skating privileges. The

Warning Issued On Christmas Decorations

Warning of the potential danger to life and property from Christmas decorations such as cotton, draperies, scenery, etc., is issued to merchants and residents of the city in a communication received from Fire Chief Wm. Lynch from the Canadian Underwriters' Association today.

"Displays of this nature and the lighting arrangements connected therewith are very considerably to the ordinary risk of fire," the letter states.

It is also pointed out that should an accident involving fire occur in a crowded store or meeting, the rapid spread of flames in such flammable material is almost certain to cause a panic with attendant risks to life. A few simple precautions will greatly reduce danger in a minimum, and these should be considered essential when the members of people, particularly children are gathered.

The letter contains the following minute advice regarding the care to be taken:

"See that flammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steam pipes, stove pipes, electric light bulbs, etc.

"See that your electric circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights. An examination of your electrical installation by an Inspector of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario is recommended.

"Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are sufficient, in good order, and readily accessible.

"See that all exits are plainly marked and not obstructed.

"Have all temporary decorations removed and safely disposed of as soon as they have served their purpose.

"Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are going to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised."

SAFE AS A SHIP

It gives a great deal of pleasure to read of the end of a year or season in industry in which no human life has been lost. Everyone knows what the toll on the highways has been in every country of the world—appalling. But quite a different picture comes from the Great Lakes, according to the Port Arthur News-Chronicle which records that "one of the features of the season was that it passed as far as the upper Lake Superior region was concerned without disaster of any kind involving the loss of life. Accidents have been at a minimum. There have been no homes thrown into mourning and no missing sailors as the price of water-borne commerce.

"Of course it must be admitted that the weather factor played a large part. It generally was more favorable than usual. Then the scientific elements came in. The aids to navigation have been efficient," the newspaper says, citing the general equipment of ships with radio phones, and with wireless. Another human factor is that captains have not been taking chances and that they have shown less inclination to seeking shelter in severe weather. "It is no longer regarded as a test of seamanship to drive a ship at full speed to shave one's desire to keep to schedule or one's contempt of dangerous conditions. The wise skipper, the one who gets the job in these days is the one who will carry his ship and cargo safely," the News-Chronicle states.

From all this is given a clear indication of the highways might take a lesson and apply most of them to the highways. Roads are better than they have been, cars are more efficiently equipped. After that, the question of safety drives home the point—life must have no chances. But everyone knows he does and also knows that a good many of those who do take chances never reach home alive or prevent some others from reaching their destinations. The first requisite is to safeguard, in the safety of his crew and ship and cargo, so should the motorcar driver feel the constant passing of the need for taking no chances. No driver has a right to endanger his own life, or in such a way as to damage his own car or endanger other lives or damage property.

During the past week there have been few reports of accidents on roads .One reason is there—of course—few are using the roads. But the chief one who uses the roads seem impressed with the idea that safety is essential life the summertime or other motoring seasons it seems that many look upon motoring as a spree in which recklessness sits at the wheel and rides with the pedestrians, passengers, mocks at curves and congestion of traffic and takes every chance no reasonable man would take. If care is needed at this season when highways are less congested, much more care is needed when they are burdened with traffic, but the actions of many indicate that they do not think so.

Of course there are differences between a captain and a car-driver. There are few captains and they are not numerous. But every one is a motorist and some individuals no doubt do not react quickly enough to the urgency of emergencies. All motorists would not make good seamen,but without doubt all sailors would make good motorists.

Yet the fact must not be forgotten that on the lakes or sea, captains and their crews face awful odds when nature is aroused and angry, while the motorist has to face a slippery pavement or road. Yet the captain takes his ship to safe ports and some motorists in bringing their cars home Safety should be the all-in-all of driving.

ON THE LAST STAGE

The last stage of the pre-Christmas season has arrived with the large poultry markets, thronged shops, hurrying crowds, the loads of parcels borne in the arms of men and women, boys and girls, or piled high in motorcars or delivery trucks. Today saw the beginning of the last few days.

Meanwhile in the homes elaborate preparations go on, for the people in the home work late to bring surprises of joy to their children and to their friends or to those others who need a friend very much in these days or in any day. In churches, in societies, in firemen's organizations, workers are busy also at the community cause of planning to carry cheer to many homes. Choirs of churches have been practising for the musical services set Sunday and the Christmastide and in the studios pastors have selected a little time away from the heavy duties which bear upon them at this season, to prepare a message for their congregations on the great Christmas theme.

Business has been speeded up in the sale of Christmas trees, for decorations of the homes to give the setting which the season in the north requires. Trade in these has grown from year to year.

Everything is now moving directly to the Christmas observance on Saturday, December 25th and on Sunday December 26th.

THE MEETING-PLACE OF WAVES

This is the loud cool meeting-place of waves.
One current tides from the west, one from the east
Here in their quarreling the sunlight loves,
The glittering tide spits jewels from its mouth.
Across a battleground of snow-green sand
The water clashes with an oily snarl
No seasoned swimmer dares to flash his tanned
Arm in that brightness where cold bubbles boil.
In such a region never can be peace,
In such a meeting-place of sea and sea
Purple-green breakers battle for release
From their own weight. They fling up, almost free,
And fall back, filled and rolling through with white—
Water that nearly turned itself to light.

ANCIENT ORDER OF PANHANDLERS affiliate of the Hobos' Union, are highly elated these days because of certain happenings which have been reported in the newspapers and which the Panhandlers and Hobos generally believe will appreciate the stock of Hobos Unlimited considerably. Notable among the news reports of the week is that of Arthur Cote, of Sherbrooke, Quebec, receiving a bank cheque for fifty dollars with a letter of thanks from a young man who had been given sympathy and a meal by Mr. Cote. Another case is reported from Timmins in the gold country where a young Westerner found himself broke and hungry. A father of five children took him in; fed him and cared for him to the best of the ability of a poor family. The young man got a job in the Buffalo-Ankerite gold mine and from his first pay check sent ten dollars to his benefactor to make Christmas a bit brighter for the five children. Occasionally stories of folks receiving small or large fortunes because they grubstaked some unfortunate years before appear in the public press and make good copy. Believe it or not there are some people in this world who would rather be fooled a dozen times by unworthys than to miss helping some really deserving mortal back to self respect and good citizenship. Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall return after many days, said the prophet,—but cast it anyway, whether it returns or not in this life. There is such a thing as laying up treasure in Heaven, if we believe our Bible and religious teachers.

BUFFALO MEAT IS BEING ADVERTISED FOR SALE IN BELLEVILLE and other places in Canada as the result of 2,000 Buffalos being slaughtered at Wainwright Park, in Western Canada, by government orders. Buffalos in government parks are increasing faster than they can be cared for and an occasional round-up keeps the buffalo census down. Old Timers eating buffalo steak will find their memories wandering back to the time when vast herds of buffalo roamed the Western plains—when Bill Cody, otherwise "Buffalo Bill"-killed hundreds of buffalo to feed the workers in the railway camps as the steel rails reached ever forward daily toward the Pacific Ocean, defying all efforts of wily politicians and savage Indians to prevent the iron horse bringing law and order and peaceful civilization to the plains. Geronimo, cruel and crafty Apache chieftain, had his brief day in the sun of publicity and was whisked away as the Hoppy Hunting Grounds, and not before he saw the might of the white man, the towering wigwams of the great cities, all the wonders and miracles of modern science—and to all appearance was little impressed by them—his one consuming desire was to get back by his tribe once again take the war path against the hated whites for a few more scalps before his turn came to take the count. Sitting Bull, another fierce warrior, Chief of the mighty Sioux, killed many Buffalo on the northwestern plains and won fame among Indian tribes for his conquest of Custer at the Little Bighorn. General Custer rode against Sitting Bull and his Sioux with a small force Sitting Bull ambushed the troopers and killed them almost to a man. The Indians said it was a great victory, the whites called it a "massacre". Thus does our difference in values weigh events from our own standpoint. Buffalo steak served in the efforts East!—how the lordly monarch of the plains has fallen.

The Christmas Tree

As wagons and trucks lumber through the streets of towns and cities throughout Canada bearing huge loads of young fir, balsam and spruce trees, and trains lumber across the countryside with their burdens of evergreen, the gladdening hearts and heighten the joy of the festive season. there is brought home to citizens of the Dominion the realization that there is rapidly developing in Canada another important forest enterprise — the Christmas tree trade.

From ancient times there has been handed down to us the use of the evergreen tree in the celebration and enjoyment of Christmas celebrations, and now, more than ever before, Canada's forests and woodlots are contributing to the pleasure of these festivities in town and country, not only throughout the Dominion but over a large part of the United States.

Recent advices from Ottawa set out that while no figures based on facts can be given as to the number of trees cut annually for Christmas decorative purposes, it is estimated by the Dominion forest service of the Department of the Interior that not less than one tree, 4,000,000 young trees, of which the greater part is exported to the United States. The total annual consumption in that country amounts to about 12,000,000 trees. This estimate is called upon to supply an increasing number each year. The value of Christmas trees exported to the United States in 1933 was $340,000, and in 1934, $360,377. Some trees were cut in six of the nine provinces of the Dominion.

Opinion Vary

Then it will be seen the Christmas tree has become a very important institution in the social and economic life of Canada, and is continued growth and development of the industry bear out the fact of these trees is deserving of serious consideration. The forests in the production and distribution of Christmas trees has given rise to many differences of opinion as to its effect, beneficial or otherwise, on the forest resources of the Dominion. Some erroneous ideas as to the harmful effects of this industry have been lodged in the minds of many people who are taking a real and valuable interest in Canada's Forest welfare. In order to displace this it is necessary to set forth the actual sources of Christmas trees and to recognize the negligible part that cutting of the annual crop has on the forest economy of the Dominion.

The favorite Christmas tree is the young fir or balsam about ten feet high. Although spruce is not equally popular. Cedar, juniper, and pine are also used when the long flavored species are not readily available. The best trees for the purpose are those which grow under conditions—in pasture fields for instance, which have developed a symmetrical shape. Trees which serve no useful purpose in the pasture and field are usually injurious to the grass there can be no logical objection to their removal and sale. Another source of supply available for the holiday trade is land being cleared for agricultural purposes and the sale of such trees is manifestly a legitimate economic use.

Simply Gathered

Incidentally the sale of true forest land in Canada is sufficient to maintain an adequate supply of forest products without utilizing agricultural land for the purpose. The third source of trees for the Christmas trade is true timber land which, in the course of forest management by under forest cover. On such land a stand of young balsam fir trees may easily exceed 1,000 trees to the acre; assuming that 10 per cent of the young trees grow they increase. in size, and in the competition for light and space, 90 per cent of the standing trees are the more suitable for the Christmas trade. The remainder are suppressed and die, so that a management here may yield more than 300 or two of the former 1,000 or more trees. While trees from pasture fields and farm land are not quite as suitable for Christmas use as those grown in the open, by a thinning process it is quite feasible to remove a large number with the object in the stand. These trees, which would otherwise be lost, are thus made available for the trade with resulting profit to the owner.

Free Private Service

To a great extent the Christmas tree trade is supplied from privately owned lands and balsam private investment as to how they conduct their operations. In the settled districts, lands, while the number of trees cut for the Christmas trade is negligible in practically every case the cutting is by permit and the operations are supervised by a forest officer as to the number of trees. It will be seen from the foregoing that, if the trade is to be kept under proper lines, the Christmas tree trade must be viewed from a private view, a perfectly legitimate one and a growing source of employment and profit to many people in the Dominion.—Canadian Lumberman.

War Dates Got Mixed

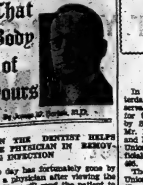
The mathematical doposter, who manipulates figures to explain the past and forist the future, is always with us. Some of his work in the other day with a most unusual lack of sales and accuracy. He said the war in 1877—and while it was not something I was at least interested in. That is the way he did it.

First of all, take the date 1880, add 3, 6 and 1 together and you have 10, the Crimean war was declared. It lasted for 1261 days, and you have 1880, the year in which the Boer war was declared. Then he went back another 3 years, add that to 1880 and you have 1883. Then again add the figures 1, 9, 0 and 2 together and total it up

Toasting the King.

Announcement the King approved the order for presenting loyal toasts without drinking healths as the King, the Queen Queen Mary and other members of the Royal family, recalls there are many regiments in the British army where the toast of "The King" is never honored.

It was after Bonny Prince Charlie's unsuccessful rising in 1745 that all officers in the army were first ordered to drink the King's health as a test of loyalty. Those with Jacobite sympathies used to pass their wine glasses over the finger bowls, and thus drink "to the King over the water."



Many cavalry and infantry regiments, however, was also a suspicion were exempted from drinking the Royal health. Thus some "The King" is never toasted.

today "The King" is never drunk in the Coldstream Guards, the Blues, the 3rd Carabiniers, the 6th Royal Inniskilling Dragoon Guards, the Royal Scots Greys, the 1st Dragoons, the 5th Queen's Royal Lancers, the 11th Hussars, 13th-18th Royal Hussars and 15th-19th King's Royal Hussars.

In the life Guards the loyal toast is drunk only on guests night, in the Royal Horse Dragoon Guards and the 7th Queen's Own Hussars on very special occasions only. In the 16th-5th Lancers only at the annual regimental dinner, and in the 9th Queen's Lancers only when a member of the Royal family is present.

In the Foot Guards only the Scots and Irish Guards drink the "health without the King." A number of infantry regiments for various reasons omit the toast.

THE PHYSICIAN IN REMOVING INFECTION

That Body of Yours

By George M. Gaylord, M.D.

The day has fortunately gone by when a physician will send the patient to the dentist to have certain teeth removed. I remember the physician in looking for the cause of rheumatism, heart disease, or stomach trouble, let the teeth XRayed first, and if there was any root abscess present he usually referred the case to the dentist to have it extracted. The dentist, considering that the physician had made a thorough examination of the entire body and found the infected teeth to be the only cause, was willing to remove the teeth at once. Unfortunately physicians now make a thorough examination for infection before referring the patient to the dentist, and are in a better position to give advice regarding the teeth.

Fortunately also the dentist does not calmly remove teeth without first consulting the physician that all other sources of infection have been investigated. Even when all other sources have been investigated the physician may advise removal of the teeth unless he feels absolutely certain that the entire body could resist the slight infection into the blood. There are no teeth in the body which the dentist naturally wants to preserve them for you.

Rheumatism is the chief believer in the removal of infected teeth. I have had rheumatic fever myself, and suffered over a period of twenty years. The pain in all three elbows disappeared in twenty-four to eight hours after removal of two teeth the dentist found to be the cause of the pain and attack, and two more teeth for the third attack. And every physician knows that where the removal of infected teeth has brought relief from rheumatism.

Fortunately the dentist of today, with his knowledge of dental infection, is equipped to discuss the problem with the physician called upon in removing can be classified under three general groups: (1) dyscrasic conditions; (2) diseases of the nervous system; (3) diseases of the heart; (4) diseases of the stomach and intestines; (5) joint conditions; (6) kidney and bladder infection."

"30"—The End

To anyone who ever worked for a newspaper the term "copy" and the letter "30" has a special meaning. At the bottom of a page of copy the editor indicates the end of the piece. But whence came the term? Writing in the Journal of the Franklin of the Utica (N.Y.) Daily Press, has compiled eight lines of explanatory theories which Editor and Publisher reports as follows:

1. In the days when stories were handwritten, "x" meant the end of the manuscript. "x" is the Roman symbol for "30".

2. In Gengal "30" means "Everything's well" or "I quit." A report of the Battle of Waterloo is supposed to have reported the figure as "30".

3. Linotype machines cast type slugs of 30 ems maximum length, hence "30" means the end of the story.

4. A telegraph operator when running out of copy played at his key sending news of a disaster long ago. When the latter of the letter "x" until death came to him.

5. Long ago in the Civil despatches were delivered by messenger from the telegraph office to the newspaper. Each was numbered, the last one set at 3 a.m.; hence the operator sent at the bottom of the last sheet "2 o'clock" which became abbreviated in turn to "3 oc." "3 o'," speed.

6. When the Associated Press was first organized each member was entitled to 30 telegrams per day; when the limit was reached he sent "30".

7. Early telegraph operators had a code for conventional asides on the wire: 1—Wait a minute. 4—Where are you? 13—Is what's the matter? 30 — End of item.

8. The 30 magistrates appointed by Julius Caesar to govern the Romanization of the Paleopennsian War were called the "30 tyrants," and were unpopular with the conquered reign. The end of the tyrants was heralded with a night of darkness, "30."

Public Accounts

In the public accounts of 1935-36 the Hepburn government revived the practice of listing officials in the Parliament Buildings who received $1,000 or more for their year's work. Their names and the particulars of their remuneration, of interest to several students of the late-book including civil servants, covered nearly twenty pages. This year the only two pages, due to the Health Department dropping from 18 to

Time Clocking The Birds

"O that I had the wings of a dove!" sighed the psalmist a few thousand years before Ben was able to make reservations in the Pullman cars, "swift as a swallow" was considered the ultimate in flying speed in the old days.

It is disheartening to those of us who cherish traditional beliefs, even when these beliefs are based on the ruthless expose of the slow-witted scientist, to find that, by the scientific American.

Mr. Aaron has appointed himself battle cry of the scientifically inclined friends, scientifically clocking their speed with the aid of a stop watch reports that few, if any, birds vie with the speed limit. Even the fastest of them, the swift, "no" correct some of the traditional assertions. Nothing daunted by the chance for miscalculation, and many oft-quoted items, Mr. Aaron has made scientific scenes indulges the very common and eagerly revelations that the migratory Canada Audubon by no means always accurate, yielded to the same handicap.

Determined that no bird should post anything over on him, Mr. Aaron established a test-flight course from Chicago to Cheyenne, to Grand Christel Bay, some five or six miles below the City of Corpus Christi, and timed the birds over the route.

The first flyer was an ayrd. Speed "a little less than twenty miles an hour we kept right along with a Chicago-bound Pullman at 55-flying overhead.—Milwaukee Journal.

Craigie, salary $3200, A. J. Reznikoff $400, J. P. Hoppe $150, A. E. Hodgetts $150, Hooper and A. J. Husband $600 each, Prof. Kerr $600, and so on. Mr. Craigie's total is $4,000. Hooper and Mr. Husband are inspectors. W. J. Gage is paid $1,000 as secretary of the Text-Book Board, and another $4,000 as manager of the publishing business. The extra remuneration brings one salary of $4,948 to $5,368, one of $4,-500 to $5,018 and another of $4,500 to $4,918. And very nice, too. There are no official vacancies and consequently no filling which means regular duties are at a stand-still and during which period these officials are not subject to call. In other words, they are evidently paid for 10 months of the year, like teachers, with two months' leave of liberty to sell spare time to the government.

KINGSTON-ON-ONTARIO

A young Canadian girl, a resident of Kingston, Ontario, while visiting among friends in Montreal, became bit-ed and a cable home, and having written it out handed it to a clerk in the telegraph office.

The clerk appeared to be rather puzzled about it, and after consulting various reference books said to the girl: "I can find Kingston-on-Hull and Kingston-on-Thames, but I cannot locate Kingston-on-Ontario."

War-torn Shanghai normally ranks as the leading industrial centre of China.

PRIME MINISTER

Held Up In Senate.

(An Act of Parliament in 1907 placed with the Governor-General-in-Council authority for issuing power export licenses. A private member's Bill in 1928 would have transferred that power to parliament. It passed through the House without debate but was held up in the Senate).

"There has been no discussion with the government of the United States which has had to do with the granting of licenses for the export of power," Mr. Mackenzie King continued. "There has been no agreement or understanding of any sort by the present administration with regard either to this matter or to the larger question of the St. Lawrence waterway."

The prime minister added that as far as he knew the United States had not sought to bring pressure on the Dominion Government to change Ontario's co-operation in the St. Lawrence project. Neither had the Dominion government brought pressure to bear on Ontario to that end.

Without Precedent Claim.

"The further allegation that an agreement exists between Ottawa and Washington that Ontario should not be allowed to develop more power at Niagara Falls until the province becomes a party to the St. Lawrence development is also wholly without foundation," he said.

Mr. Mackenzie King added the legal position regarding use of St. Lawrence waters, whether at Niagara or elsewhere, is based on provisions of the Boundary Waters Treaty concluded in 1908. "In that sense," he said, "the question of diversion and use of waters is governed by terms of the treaty between the two countries."

Assured Answer.

"The terms of the treaty," he said, "necessarily become a subject for consideration on the part of all governments concerned in any plans for modification of existing arrangements respecting boundary waters."

The last paragraph was believed to refer to a promise that Ontario spend $9,000,000 diverting the waters of Long Lake from James Bay to Lake Superior, raising the level of the Great Lakes, and providing a greater flow of waters for power development.

Mr. Hepburn said Provincial Secretary Nixon wrote Mr. Mackenzie King on the subject. Neither the prime minister nor the premier made the correspondence public, but Mr. Hepburn said: "Mr. King personally assured Washington about the Long Lac diversion. He has given us his answer."

Chatting with international water levels, the proposal called for joint approval by Canadian and United States governments, established.

Left Unanswered.

The prime minister left unanswered a declaration by his former colleague that "Mr. King is still hiding his head in the sand" despite defeats suffered in this province and he hadn't recovered "even enough for the first time in his political career this province sent him a majority of supporters in the last federal election."

He did not answer Mr. Hepburn's accusation that "Mr. King was never friendly to Ontario" beyond to know that became I was with him and watched him at Ottawa.

Thursday the prime minister reviewed steps in Mr. Hepburn's opposition to power to export power to the United States and a similar application from Universal Rayon, Ltd., and Power Consolidated. Both were refused.

No Comment On Two Points.

His reason for refusing approval on Mr. Hepburn's reported statement that Ontario and Quebec had formed an "economic alliance" to resist any possible move to realign boundary fields between the provinces and the Dominion. Nor did he comment on a statement Wednesday night in which Premier Duplessis of Quebec, once a Conservative and now standard bearer of the Union Nationale, was reported as having told a Shawinigan, Que., audience: "We in Old province and in Ontario in the Maritime provinces have decided we will not be run for the Western Provinces" and "we are in a way of concluding an alliance by which we are not going to be run by Ottawa."

The three Maritime premiers promptly denied knowledge of such a proposed alliance and Mr. Duplessis said subsequently he had been misquoted. He declared he had spoken of an alliance between Ontario and Quebec and said it would be "desirable" that the Maritime should join it.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"A Star Is Born"

All the thrills of a trip to Hollywood are provided in the glorious Technicolor production "A Star Is Born" starring Janet Gaynor and Fredric March, coming to the Capitol on Sunday midnight as a season revival showing.

For this thrilling modern story to come to the screen in color is no trifle told, so convincingly played and so brilliantly directed that you will leave the theatre feeling as if you actually paid a visit to filmland.

Janet Gaynor and Fredric March have written-to-order roles and have never turned in performances to match these.

Janet assumes a lovely, new sophisticated personality, with a rare flair for wearing clothes—Esther Blodgett, the little country girl who comes to Hollywood in search of stardom, faces the WORLD to one odds as an extra, and soars overnight to fame.

And March, as Norman Maine, the hard-drinking screen idol of the moment who helps Janet get her first break falls in love with her and marries her has a grand role which offers him plenty of opportunities for the kind of emoting at which he excels.

The story which depicts all the thrills and pathos and heartbreak of a climb to fame in Hollywood was adapted by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson.

Adolphe Menjou is at his polished best as Oliver Niles, the producer, and May Robson is grand as the fiery old dowager grandmother Lotus Esther to go to Hollywood and realize her dream of movie fame.

Others who shine in the brilliant cast are Andy Devine as an assistant director, Lionel Stander as a agent, Owen Moore, Edgar Kennedy,

"Rosalie Leaving Lady"

Exciting adventure races across the screen in "Rosalie Leaving Lady," co featuring Fay Wray and Ralph Bellamy, shown on the same program as a grand hit run hit. The film presents Miss Wray as a meeting million-dollar girl who is the devil-may-care Bellamy an aviator employed by her father. The difference in their social positions, coupled with a perverse person in both brings nothing but lovely quarrels, which finally culminate in plans for a virtually unchallenged by her father and sent Rosalie.

On the way, Bellamy discovers that Fay has stowed away in the ship to be near him. Their love is diverted by a treacherous crew intrigue, the hands of a Chinese rebel obstetahn who impresses Bellamy into his service as military treasurer.

The sequences which follow are replete with action, particularly the final scene which gives the most thrilling and spectacular escape of the principals from the rebel's camp.

The production is fast-geared and replete with action, comedy and romance.

Appointment of Minister to Rome Creates Puzzling Problem

By George Bandholtz
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 18 (CP Cable) — President Eamon de Valera has done more than supply Whitehall experts with a puzzling problem. He has raised a lively constitutional issue.

If the proposed appointment of an Irish Free State Minister to Rome receives royal approval — and the authorities here show no disposition to intervene—George VI, as King of the Irish Free State in external affairs, will in effect be recognizing the Rome King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia, while George VI, as King of Great Britai ad the other dominions, still declines to grant such recognition.

Mr. De Valera has taken the ground that in appointing a minister to Rome with credentials to the "King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia," the Free State government is not recognizing Italy's conquest but the name "taken by the sovereign, which has to be recognized by the general comity of nations."

Great Britain May Reinforce Fleet in East

London, Dec. 17 (AP)—A high diplomatic source predicted today that Great Britain would reinforce her China fleet early in January with or without parallel action by the United States.

A definite decision to this effect was expected from the cabinet meeting next Wednesday.

Sitting Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Eden were represented as convinced that reinforcements are necessary in the Far East to protect British interests.

The admiralty said today the cruiser Birmingham would leave Portsmouth for Shanghai "in about two weeks" but it was explained she merely was replacing the recently returned cruiser Danae.

Bright Eyes Need Constant Care
In World of Smoke and Grime

Rochelle Hudson
Give eyes care to keep them bright, she advises.

"America's Most Famous Beauty" ACCORDING TO Rochelle Hudson, screen actress, there are many women whose eyes look tired and old. Such appearance, she says, usually is due to neglect and carelessness.

Rochelle has a very pretty pair of eyes, and what she humanely can only to their loveliness is their clearness and brilliance. Cleanse and brighten an make even small eyes appear attractive, you know, but they are not benefitted by neglect. The eyes must be given faithful care. It is only twelve brief minutes of a woman's time, but her whole appearance profits by it.

Of course, the safest way to brighten the eyes is by making your physical health perfect. For it is youthful vitality that puts sparkle in the eyes. But cleanliness is also essential for preserving their natural clearness.

Need Help to Keep Clean

In this world of smoke and grime, it is well-nigh impossible to expect the eyes to retain their clarity without some assistance on your part. A large amount of dust and grime accumulates in them each day. Some of the particles are so minute that they do not cause actual irritation. They lodge themselves under the eyelids, and you may be totally unaware of their presence. But unless these tiny particles are washed away every evening, the eyes soon become red, inflamed and bloodshot. Indeed, serious infections may result from a grain or dust that has become lodged in the eye.

An eyewash, to be safe and effective, must be free from all germs. It should be very mild and of a soothing to the eyes. There are a number of eyewashes now on the market designed to clean and brighten the eyes, and some of them are really excellent. Be sure you use only one that is nationally recognized as being reliable and effective, however!

Of course, in a pinch, there is always that old standby, the boric acid solution. This is prepared simply by dissolving one teaspoon of boric acid in a glass of tepid, sterilized water. The best way to administer this eyewash is with an eyecup which fits right over the eye, although another method is merely to swab the eyes with cotton soaked in the solution.

In addition to proper cleansing, if the eyes are to look young and radiant, the tissues that surround them must be given sufficient nourishment. Strain, worry, fatigue, exposure and facial mannerisms all draw up the skin into a thousand wrinkles. If the skin is supple and well nourished, the wrinkles will disappear when the face is in repose.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HER

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

THE ELECTRIC GIFT for girl friend, bride, sister or mother is very popular.

A handsome coffee urn, for instance, of chrome or nickel, the woman takes a great deal of pride and pleasure in using it.

This type of urn is called a Coffee Robot, and is a graceful pattern, made of elevated glass. The glass bowl top is heat resistant. It brews the coffee automatically, and keeps it hot indefinitely, at a temperature just below boiling.

There are many other types of coffee makers and coffee services on the market and, of course, many other handsome electrical articles for gifts: toasters, grills, roasters, clocks, waffle irons, bathroom heaters, razors, curling irons, heating pads, electric fans, radios, of course, egg cookers.

Do Men Like Pie Dessert? Recipes for Two are Given

Pie is said to be men's favorite dessert. If women were not so often obsessed with the idea that it makes them fat, it would be eaten, too, and it doesn't always keep them from choosing it, as I observe from watching the lunches and tea rooms and restaurants. At this time of year pie is often chosen for its food values. It is a "hearty" dessert that particularly appeals during the cold weather. The mince pie de luxe recipe that one to keep in mind at holiday time, and the molasses raisin pie is delicious to one who has fond recollections of the syrup pie of her childhood.

Today's Recipes

MAKE MINCE PIE DE LUXE—During the holidays Virginia prepares mincemeat under mince pie way; Make mince pie as ordinarily, but add half a cup pecans to the mincemeat before baking. When pie is ready to serve spread a small glass of apple jelly that the top crust and half a pint of whipped cream over that. This dessert makes the pie as rich as one would think.

MOLASSES SECO-FLY PIE—Three-fourths cup flour, one-eighth teaspoon salt, nutmeg, ginger, and cloves, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup brown sugar, two tablespoons shortening, one and one-half teaspoons soda dissolved in three-fourths cup boiling water, one-half cup molasses, one egg yolk, well beaten, pastry. Mix flour with spices, salt and sugar. Rub in shortening and add water to molasses and mix well. Stir this mixture into flour. Line pie plate with pastry. Make alternate layers of flour mixture and molasses mixture, beginning with mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees F. for ten minutes, reduce to moderate, 350 degrees F., and bake until filling is firm, about half an hour.

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Mrs. G. Bourne and her 16-year-old daughter were overcome by coal gas fumes when the furnace in their home exploded today. The two recovered after being removed from the house by Mr. Bourne.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALISON ALDEN)

Just the thing with smart afternoon things is a bag of black suede with a wide shell frame and bunny ears of the suede at either side.

Bare heads aren't seen much these evenings, not while there are such charming evening hats in the headdresses. A charming little cabot is of black embroidered organdie and gold threads with a misty lace veil embroidered to harmonize.

You can't believe how luxurious a fur-trimmed cloth coat can be until you wear one. A beauty is in rough black woollen with a shawl collar and three bands at the ripping hem, all of silver fox.

Black interest is obvious in a black velvet wrap with an entirely plain front. In back there are four silver fox skins in the shawl collarette, spread at shoulders and hem but coming together at the waist.

Quite a uniform is the slim, long dinner suit of black crepe the jacket embroidered with sequins in flaming colours.

It's difficult to resist the charms of the new blouses designed for formal afternoon occasions. A handsome one is in silver and red silk lame with an ascot of red chiffon.

One of the most amazing of success stories is told by John Buchan in his biography of a unique president who restored the Roman Empire to peace after the troubled years of Julius Caesar. In his recent book, "Augustus", Lord Tweedsmuir has shown that this great grandnephew of Julius Caesar and his chosen heir, reconciled the classes and which has a parallel in our day. In the eyes of posterity, Augustus has far-sighted, but Augustus was aware of the realities of the moment. Called by his biographer "the least romantic of great men", he yet kept the loyalty of his friends and followers and accomplished much by prestige rather than by force. His political reconstruction of the Empire lasted for 200 years, and for the first time a government both able and honest. "Augustus", by John Buchan, is illustrated with 24 ages that resembles our own and is therefore an education in contemporary politics. Two Canadian writers have completed Lord Tweedsmuir's task. Their task began many years ago.

"The Real Plays of 1936-37 and the Yearbook of the Drama in America" is a welcome addition to the Library drama shelves. Last season on Broadway was noted chiefly for a light-hearted revival of farce with a few plays of serious thought. Among the interesting selection is "Ah, Wilderness" by Maxwell Anderson, which drew away from his usual theme with a historical tradition and writes a humorous fantasy. "Susan and God" is With You" by Hart and Kaufman mingles comedy with philosophy in an entertaining manner of the season. "The Women" by Clare Booth looks with a cynical eye into the everyday life of women of leisure. Other plays included are Tovarich, Stage Door, Mr. Hilcia, Johnny Johnson, Daughters of Atreus, Excursion and Yes, My Darling Daughter.

Katharine Hale, author of "Canadian Cities of Romance" and "Canadian Houses of Romance" has written of Ontario, old and new, in her latest book "This is Ontario". The book pales the form of a leisurely tour along the main highways of the province and describes the cities, towns, villages and country side. A chapter of particular interest describes Belleville, Trenton, Deseronto and the surrounding district. The book is attractively illustrated with photographs by "Jay" of Saturday Night. Katharine Hale (Mrs. John Garvin) will be remembered for her lectures in Belleville about two years ago.

Further anecdotes in the life of the Day family are told in "Life With Mother", by Clarence Day. The book is a good-humored record of the everyday life of an American family its home, its neighbors and the period in which it grew. "Life With Mother", like its popular predecessor "Life With Father", contains sparkle and a zest for living that make it particularly suitable for holiday reading.—E. G.

Classes In Creative Expression

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department of Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

WELL-CHOSEN, especially built of real experience, are humbug if we realize that they are secured as they put less emphasis on the mechanics of speaking and more emphasis on how the speaker keeps on the emotional atmosphere of the audience.

There has just come to my desk from a member of this column, a letter which I wish I could put into the hands of every teacher of private expression. The subject is "Classes in Creative Expression." It is addressed to the young pupils. Apparently it is what the teacher says to them. It is this psychology and point of view that appeals to me. I wish I had space for all of it. I can only hint at the matchless.

"Each one of us may have some very important quality inside that must some day come out.....

"We are all different, and we want to find out that thing that each one of us can do best. It is then spend some time each week in thinking about it and helping it to come out.....

Understanding Others

"We want to grow up to be happy and lovable people. We want lots of friends and we want our schoolmates to love to be with us and to remember us long after we leave high school. We want especially to be courteous and polite to those we meet every day. We want to be very considerate of Mother and Daddy, and I should be grateful if we could learn to be patient and gentle with younger brothers and sisters.....

"It will be wonderful to talk sometimes, and to find poems and stories and to play games about UNDERSTANDING ..... that's a very important word, too. I mean trying to think why people do things, and not getting cross and laughing at them. We shall find this easy to do if we try to put ourselves in the other person's place and say: 'How would I feel?' We shall try hard to help Mother and other people good fortune, but tell them how pleased we are.

"It will be such fun to pick out the best poems and the best stories, and to choose the best pictures and music that have been created for our enjoyment....."

Formality Is Young

This Season's Evening Mode Is in Gay and Youthful Mood Whether It's Slim or Wide Silhouette

By LESSETTE

WOMEN IN PARIS and the United States too, are dining in pencil slim frocks of silk, velvet, satin or wool. Usually they dance in dresses whose skirts are wide and swinging, especially the younger members of the set.

V necks are probably the most often seen. But there are many other styles. And shoulders are covered or left bare as a matter of taste. The full-length sleeve for any kind of formal wear is always a high style. Most women find the short, elbow length or sleeveless models more comfortable and becoming.

Simple, young and gay is the embroidered crepe dress with the detachable bolero, shown here. It has the pencil slim line and high waistband so popular this season. Flowers worn on the top of the head—another popular mode of the season—match the colors in the dress. It is from Kalmour.

The Peasant Type Aegis

The drindl or peasant styling which we have been praising about for months, is achieved in a little different guise in the other dress shown, from Stein and Blaine. It is made of soft, brocaded blue material. The hips are kept slim and smooth, and the skirt is gathered at the hips and stitched onto the bodice section. It emphasizes the slender waistline. The cowl neckline is girlish and becoming.

Smocking is a smart trick, now, and it has lost its innocent, little girl look, and has become glamorous. Sometimes it is "drawed up" with little beads.

When you choose a dinner dress, whether it be floor-length for formal dining, or street length, be very sure that the path of you that dining table is clear and distinctive. It may be so in a number of ways, so choose the one best suited to your type. But you must look charming above the waist.

Emphasize the arms very good. Little dresses with sequin or lame tops are distinctive. The glitter of the early season has become somewhat dimmer, and all-black dresses or pretty colored beads are preferred to the scintillating ones that we have been seeing. Trimmings are also being used more discreetly.

The fact that there is so much variety in the current silhouette undoubtedly makes for interest in fashions. Looking toward the spring mode, we have to do at this time of year, we have the formal dress that has a full skirt, the tucks stitched down over the hips, but released later to form a wide flare. This type of dress has a square decolletage.

Believe, which I was mentioning awhile back, are growing shorter. The briefest are the smartest. A pencil slim silhouette topped by a very short bolero, may have graduated dual ruffles at the hem, giving another variation on the silhouette theme.

Then there is the tiered skirt which extends the waistline well down on the hips. This long type top also may be attached to a very full, wide skirt, gathered at a little below the waistline.

Still another styling is the one that places fullness at the back in various effects, some bustle-like, others pleated.

CHATTERTON WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The December meeting of the Chatterton Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Rose with 10 members and 2 visitors present.

The roll call was answered by singing a verse of a favourite Christmas hymn. A "thermometer" was held for the benefit of the younger members on how to be well dressed and well groomed. Mrs. Snider gave a reading on one of our famous Christmas legends after which Mrs. Gerald Frederick gave a reading. A demonstration was held on Christmas presents being made and an exchange of presents followed. A letter of appreciation for money sent to help crippled children was read. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction after which a delightful lunch was served by the hostess.

It is considered wasteful to burn brush in farm woodland, because the piles provide good refuges for birds and small game; and because the twigs and branches, if scattered, will decay and give back needed humus to the soil.

Six-Footer Asks for Aid In Finding Girl Friend

By VIRGINIA LEE

WHAT! HS the matter with a six-foot youth who can't find the right girl?

One has written to me and wants my advice. He seems to have everything but money, supports his mother, but she is willing to make her home elsewhere if he finds a wife.

He doesn't want a gold-digger or a cheater, and she must have a good character. He says he has "been around", but his conscience is clear. "I don't claim to be perfect, but I'm not afraid to have my past brought up," he writes.

PUZZLER: Why don't you look around, choose some girl who seems to have the qualifications, and then put her under a period of "observation"? My impression is that many boys stand off and criticize girls and really don't give them a chance to make good.

I have a certain young man in mind. He had been "stung" once, and rather badly hurt. The girl he finally married and is happy with was a friend of his family, and it just happened that he was thrown with her a great deal. He found a lot of merit with her—thought she was quite unattractive at first. However, she was handy for dates and disengaged at the time and willing to go out with him, and so they gradually "discovered" each other. The criticism grew less and less, until that young man was sincerely in love, and had won the girl.

Men often past a little afraid of girls. And being afraid, they stand on the defensive and criticize without letting themselves get to really know the girl. The girl naturally feels this critical attitude and doesn't show her best side, and so it goes on. More matches have been made I believe, by circumstances which throw growing young people together so that they got to know each other well in spite of themselves than in any other way.

Open up, son, and give the girls a chance to know you and to let you know them, and you will find that most are the type I describe. Gold-diggers and cheaters are the exception, rather than the rule.

MRS. J. L. B.: I'll pass on our child psychologist's advice on the subject of the two-year-old who throws her food on the floor. He says when a child does that her meal should be ended right there. Don't scold or spank. You don't want her to associate fear and unhappiness with food taking. Simply pick it up and end the meal even if she hasn't eaten all she wants. Don't feed her between meals either.

As for her little habit of calling her daddy by his first name, all children—or almost all—do it, and they get over it in time. They think it is cute, and your small daughter knows it teases you too, and so she sticks to it. I did when I read about it. One young mother I know is being tormented by her two-year-old who calls her "Bonnie", which is her name, but few people call her that and it is a name she dislikes very much. If you pay no attention, but always speak of your husband to her as "Daddy", she will drop it, sooner or later. Don't be emotional about things like that that really don't matter, dear young mother.

Oyster Fritters

One cup milk, two eggs well beaten, flour to make drop batter, salt, one teaspoon baking powder, one or two cups oysters with juice. Mix in usual way and drop into hot deep fat.

These are nice to make out in a meal with the remains of the Christmas turkey, or as an easy luncheon dish with cole slaw or cottage cheese salad and potato chips.

After Care Treatment Necessary

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AN EXTREMELY important development in the treatment of tuberculosis has been started in England. A little village, which has been called Papworth, has been built and the entire population consists of people who have had tuberculosis, who were treated to sanitarium, and who were pronounced cured. Their lives are carefully supervised by physicians. When their condition is progressive to the place where they are able to work, they are taught handicrafts, and the products of their work are sold, which brings in about 100,000 pounds a year, all of which goes back to the workers and helps to maintain the village.

The after-care movement is startling, and we may expect to see institutions of this kind in the United States. To help out the idea we urge upon the purchase of the Christmas seals as abundantly and generously as possible.

It is, of course, a pitiable and tragic thing that people with this disease have to lead a somewhat modified life all the rest of their days. But at last the great conquest of tuberculosis has been due to the fact that we were willing to face the facts in the face, and this is one of the facts. It is a good deal better to have your life modified than to have it terminated, as it would have been by treatment or lack of treatment of other days.

Relapses High

The reason for the necessity of after care is the high percentage of relapses which occur unless patients are watched and treated for a period of years after their original cure. These relapses, when they occur, are not always as easy to terminate as the original disease. The patient who has been arrested by the physician in a sanitarium that his disease is arrested, naturally feels elated, and may undertake a program of activity which is far beyond his strength, and which spells immediately breaks down all the good that the sanitarium treatment has done. Tuberculosis patients are naturally temperamental, and their original individuals, who wish to do a good deal of work, and who probably brought about their original breakdown by such a point of view.

The after-care committee will allow the patient to go to work at the soonest possible moment and will be sent home, where he will not kapple his health. Besides this, of course, the segregation of cases of tuberculosis in one place will help to prevent the spread of the disease into the rest of the population, because the commonest form of infection is from direct contact with an "open" case. The Papworth system of After-Care committee is determined to devise means whereby the lives of consumptives may be made useful, purposeful and protective once more.

TO A LITTLE GIRL

Her eyes are like forget-me-nots,
So loving, kind and true;
Her lips are like a pink sea-shell
Just as the sun shines through;
Her hair is like the curving grain
In summer's golden light;
And best of all, her little soul
Is, like a lily, white.

Perth Crescents Score Three In Initial Frame to Defeat "Flyers" in VanHorne Series

Defeat Puts Airmen In Second Position In Loop

PERTH ON TOP

Almost Given Five Penalties, Which Hurt Their Cause

Completely out-skating and out-playing the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", especially in the first period, which they scored three goals, the Perth Crescents advanced to first position in the Ted Reeve Memorial senior series by virtue of a 4 to 3 triumph over the Air Force, the debut of Coach Carling-Kelly's pacsters dropped them into the second berth, leaving the Belleville Redmen in the third slot.

Literally skating the "Flyers" into the ice in the early stages of the Perth Crescents' full advantage of the apparent poor condition of the "Airmen" to rap home three goals in rapid succession during the initial period. The Flyers out-scored the winners one to nil in the second stanza, but could not overcome the Perth lead in the final canto, when the scoring was even, each flashing the red light for one occasion.

On a fast forward passing Lorinda combined the Airmen's initial counter. Late in the second frame Merle Mahoney clouted the hopes of the Flyers when he sank Cowley's pass past the goal tender, to tie the count to 2-2 for Perth, but the Crescents finished strongly in subsequently rapping and from that point successfully defended their advantageous lead. Throughout the remainder of the week for the Crescents and gave them their second consecutive win of the season. Two draw-wins give Perth six points, to the R.C.A.F. five, and Belville four in the league standing.

Whenever Led by White

Lead by Jimmy White, their senatorial rushing defencemen, the Perth Crescents skated to their fourth save from the outset, with Dickson and Graham starting the homers between the posts, the latter team the first period, but the latter turning in a fine effort in the last two minutes to help keep the score down. Rutherford and Healy teamed nicely for Perth and along with Wilds accounted for three of Perth's quartette of counters, the latter shooting and Rutherford combined to score the fourth Perth counter. The "Flying Men" showed the best of condition to a marked degree, their recent two weeks lay off having apparently done them no ill, although Perth was by far the much better team on the night's showing.

The penalties imposed last night was the R.C.A.F. quartette and on the other hand Perth only docked the "goose egg" on two occasions. Lahood, Lee, Scott and Cowley drew the Airmen's two minute penalties, while Perth only docked Wilds and Spalding each one minute penalty. In the matter of "Fines" Wilds and Spalding took time out for penalties for Perth, Fenwick and Lahood have in the ranks of the "Flyers."

The lineups:

R.C.A.F.—Goal, Gibson; defence, Lalonde, Jamieson; centre, Baldwin; wings, Wilds (Mahoney), Cowley; alternates, Lacombe, Eric Mahoney, Scott, Halward, Bigsby and Stewart.

Perth Crescents—Goal, Dickson; defence, R. Wilds, Spalding; centre, Rutherford; wings, O. Wilds, Healy; alternates, Mahoney, Fenwick, Healy, Bennett and Pownall.

Referee—Smith, Toronto, and Bill Slade, both of Kingston.

NO JUVENILE CHAMPION DECLARED THIS YEAR

Toronto, Dec. 18.—(CP)—Hercie Bailey, secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Union announced last night a series between Thorold Mountaineers and Toronto Malverns for the juvenile title of Ontario had been abandoned and that no juvenile champion would be declared this year.

It was announced that the Thorold home field covered with 18 inches of snow was not in condition for play for a proposed post-New Year's game and that the Malverns had decided they were through for the season.

The Mountaineers, defending the title which they won last year, defeated the Malverns 17-16 in the first game of a two-game total points series for the 1937 title in Toronto Nov. 27. The second game has several times been postponed. It had not hoped it could have been played January 8.

HIGH PARK WINS THORBURN CUP

Defending Champions of Kitchener Concede Victory After 10 Ends

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—For the first time since its presentation nine years ago, the Thorburn Memorial Trophy will spend a season as The Canada Packers Hockey Club sponsor of the annual bonspiel that is held in Ontario's curling sheets.

R. Earl Green's rink brought the trophy to High Park by trouncing Fred Hall's defending Kitchener champions in the final here last night. Hall conceded victory to the Toronto quarter after ten ends and High Park was on its way, 19-11.

The winners turned in the outstanding efforts throughout the final day of the bonspiel. Green's players eliminated Col. W. O. Morris' Toronto Vics in the quarter-finals and T. S. Graham's Toronto Vics in the semi-finals, each time by 12-4 scores.

Hall's Stanleman ousted R. I. Chisholm's Toronto club quarter 11-9 in the semi-finals after beating J. M. Rothschild's Strathcona 13-10 in their quarter-final.

W. Weller's Hamilton Thistle rink defeated R. H. Watson's Actinolite quartet 13-6 to enter the final against S. Meredith of Barrie in the consolation while Perth only descended the "goose goes" on two occasions. Lahood, Lee, Scott and Cowley drew the Airmen's two minute penalties, while Perth only docked Wilds and Spalding each one minute penalty. In the matter of "Fines" Wilds and Spalding took time out for penalties for Perth, Fenwick and Lahood have in the ranks of the "Flyers."

The lineups:

R.C.A.F.—Goal, Gibson; defence, Lalonde, Jamieson; centre, Baldwin; wings, Wilds (Mahoney), Cowley; alternates, Lacombe, Eric Mahoney, Scott, Halward, Bigsby and Stewart.

Perth Crescents—Goal, Dickson; defence, R. Wilds, Spalding; centre, Rutherford; wings, O. Wilds, Healy; alternates, Mahoney, Fenwick, Healy, Bennett and Pownall.

Referee—Smith, Toronto, and Bill Slade, both of Kingston.

TIGER INFIELD BEST IN LEAGUE

Chicago, Dec. 18.—(AP)—For the third straight year, Detroit's Hank Greenberg was selected as the all-around as efficiently as his famous "barbed-wire" batting average, Greenberg would have had to settle for a lot less than their Yankee opponent in the American League last season.

The Tigers' great team fielding honors for the third straight year, the final batch of official averages disclosed today, with Rudy York, their slugging first baseman, Billy Rogell, shortstop, and Tommy Owen, who made it possible. The Tiger team average was .978, a point better than last year and two points shy of the 1935 figure.

Greenberg, the league's most valuable player and batting champion, placed his second consecutive .970 fielding average, but Greenberg's best mark since joining the Tigers in 1933 headed the league for the third straight time with .968. Owen, when moved to Chicago White Sox this fall broke up the great combination, gained the league fielding championship, registering a .970 average.

Tommy Fozz of the gold-plated Boston Red Sox, regained the first base fielding title with a .989 mark in 1,311 chances, compiling and average of .994.

FORDHAM, PITTSBURGH PUT IN NO. 1 SPOT

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—United States college football annually supplies not only the material to segregate collection of turtle in American sport, but contributes generously to the log of bizarre freakish events.

Last year Yale's Larry Kelly pulled the prize oddity by executing a "goose step" of some kind that helped beat Navy and caused a revision of the playing rules.

This year, on the basis of a poll covering all sporots by the Associated Press, the football teams of Fordham and Pittsburg rated No. 1 distinction by placing their third successive scoreless tie.

With the demand for professional hockey players being so acute in both major and minor leagues these days the future of the Canadian winter pastime lies predominantly within the junior and juvenile ranks. More attention will have to be paid to these ranks if the game is to survive, simply because hockey players of any prominence in the future will be absorbed by the ranks of professionalism. Every major league club has its scouts, who traverse the length and breadth of the Dominion, scouring the most remote rural leagues for prospective material. With the steady medium of the exodus of good hockey players migrating to the professional ranks, the success of juvenile and minor league hockey is practically the only salvation for the future.

Juvenile hockey is being sponsored in nearly every large centre of population and many of the towns and villages of Ontario. We are informed by the secretary of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville that the Kiwanis Clubs in Belleville and in other centres recognized hockey coaches are employed to coach the juvenile and potential professionals. Up in Ontario, the one outstanding feature of the year has been the season's first call for players from the Soo, that is here are the ages of 18 years on Jan. 1st of the playing year. These are apparently the "feeder" for professional athletes and according to press reports Soo professionals will be become future Charlie Conachers or Eddie Shore's. Even in Toronto "Ox" Larry is sponsoring a juvenile hockey team and intends to enter the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association.

With a veteran professional hockey player calibre of Howie Morenz and Hapsy Holway in Belleville, what better nucleus for a juvenile team could be desired. "Toots" saw his services with the Maroons when they won the World's Championship as professional hockey and was good enough to manage the London Intermediate Club one season. We understand "Toots" is paramount-ly interested in the coaching of a kids' team in Belleville, but like numerous others, needs assistance both financially and in the business end of the sponsoring of such a hockey team. It is our true conviction, that the future of juvenile hockey throughout the province of Ontario is more brilliant than in any other province of the sport. Veteran hockey mentors have agreed that juvenile hockey will go far, that the O.H.A. was to the small centres a decade or more ago. That was when practically all talent was developed at home, however.

Of course the only correct means by which to encourage juvenile hockey in any centre is to forsake those aspiring youths to appear before the public, in minor city amusities, many larger than Belleville. The juveniles are paraded before the fans in practice games prior to regular O.H.A. schedule games, thereby obstructing the kids in appearing before the public in the developing stage right from the outset. During the past few years there has been a marked decline in local hockey material appearing in Belleville and similar centres. Year when the Redmen won the provincial title there were the only two natives of Belleville in the lineup, with a population of 14,000, including Percy Galbraith, Carlyle Gibson, Derbyshire and nearby villages, surely there should be more hockey material than that at hand apparently such is not the case, so it looks as though the only salvation is to have a group of philanthropic gentlemen sponsor a juvenile team with the hopes of developing our own hockey players for the future.

As Tommy Munro of the Globe and Mail recently pointed out, these juveniles are truly amateurs and are playing for the love of the game, thus they should be more wholly encouraged by the general public. The Arena will have to do its share in assisting by providing practice hours gratis. Of course the success of a local juvenile team would be to the mutual advantage of the local hockey set-up, so we see no reason for the Arena management not falling in line with sponsors of such a promising organization. In the juvenile O.H.A. the district winners advance into the provincial playdowns in the same manner as the O.H.A. Last season large crowds stamped their approval upon juvenile provincial play-offs in many sections of the province. Juvenile O.H.A. has graduated from juveniles to over 100 in the short space of two seasons and is steadily increasing in numbers.

Once a Hamiltonian, always a Hamiltonian, it seems to prove the point a person, Fee Bastian K. o. "Slats" Rikla, genial manager of the Capitol Theatre, is a native son of that town immediately west of Toronto and knows as Hamilton and Mr. Rikla wants us to know that Hamilton is still very much in the fashion and that the Hamilton Bombers are playing Winnipeg for the junior football championship of Canada today and they're going to win," predicted Mr. Rikla today. Right you are pal but they are still Jesters, the Tiger's are the latest and we'll be in the O.R.F.U. as we recall it.

The R.C.A.F. "Flyers" were shot from their lofty perch in the Van Horne series last night, the Perth Crescents being the marksmen. The Crescents accomplished the deed on the "airmen" and showed much more speed throughout the entire contest. The Crescents' win elevated them to first position in the series, the Flyers into second place. The Perth team literally flew over the ice during the first 20 minutes, even three of the counters, too many for Coach Carling-Kelly's goal tender Gibson. The Flyers showed the result of a two-week lay off, their condition markedly lacking throughout the game. The Crescents are a light but exceptionally speedy team.

BUDDY BAER IS KNOCKOUT VICTOR OVER ED. HOGAN

Referee Stops Fight in Third Round With Hogan on Floor

WANTS BRADDOCK

Buddy Wants to Avenge Defeat Handed Brother by Braddock

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Buddy Baer, younger and more level-headed of the California Baers, is mapping a boxing plot with revenge as its chief motive.

Asked after his three-round knockout of Eddie Hogan at Madison Square Garden last night when he would like to meet next, the 243-pound Baer didn't hesitate a moment.

"First I want to fight Jim Braddock, because he took the title away from my brother Max," he said. "Then I want Joe Louis, because he has the title."

It's a nice program as far as the confident but easy-going Baer is concerned. When it comes to manager Ancil Hoffman and promoter Mike Jacobs, the program becomes a few hitches.

"Braddock sure, Buddy's ready for him," said the plump and pleased Hoffman. "He's ready for Braddock or Tommy Farr, for Lenny-wolf, I'd rather wait a while."

Hoffman, despite the decisive fashion in which Baer Jr. slowed away Hogan, wouldn't commit himself as yet until after the Braddock-Farr bout Jan. 21," was his comment.

Buddy, against Hogan, took everything the Waterbury, Conn., heavyweight had to offer, most of it on a turtle-shell defence of elbows and shoulders, and waited for his shot.

During a harmless third-round mix-up, Hogan's left eyebrow was right dropped Hogan. He rose, stumbled back and reeled into two more knock-downs and thereafter by Referee Jimmy Cowley.

By Geo. H. Carver

Residents of Picton are all agog over the prospects of their entry into junior O.H.A. circles.... It is years and years since Picton was represented in organized shinny and with the young huskies of the district showing marked enthusiasm a banner year is looked forward to in the ballyhoo of Bon Church.

Thirty two youngsters are undergoing intensive training under the eagle eye of Billy Hughes.....Averaging 160 pounds and eighteen summers, the squad has already shown signs of being a force to be reckoned with..... They will tangle sticks and tempers with the voteless packsters of Napanee and Trenton in the forthcoming season..... A lot depends on the team this season, according to the grapevine system, for if the youths click any medium of success, a few bankrolls are going to loose from the cellars and put to use in the erection of a new rink.....

"Dudley" Queen's Hotel Airedale middleweight, fought one round a draw with "Kid Dynamite" Dudley champ, in the battle for the canine championship at Front Street yesterday..... Approximately fifty spectators formed a ring around the fighting mutts and when the bell rang twice in action..... Dudley led with a right jab to the forehead but the Kid danced out of reach and set Dud back with a sweeping left flip to the Dodd's left ear..... Both fighters exchanged growls in the centre of the ring and were seen using light snarls when the referee parted them for alleged biting below the belt.

The fighters were in the centre of the ring when the bell rang..... Dudley sent over a swinging right hook to the Lindy jaw..... Lindy went down for the count of six but came up fighting as two cats dashed out of a nearby alley and the battle ended in a scoreless tie with Lindy behind the eight-ball and Lindy crossing the goal-line at the foot of Front Street, when rival managers intervened.

Irrepressible "Mushky" Jackson, pride of the pug-nine-ring followers and public enemy No. 1 of the King's English, broke out in New York the other day with a caustic critique of his opinion of the personnel of the Jersey Joe Walcott National Sports Alliance of the U.S..... "I seen where Billy Cox and Lou Novikoff of the N.S.A. broke out Mushky, "without a single grounder between them in the entire game. Why, I'd rather have a set of fielders in his cap that all the other players in the league put out of the race. It certainly complicates Billy nicely and he should feel proud".....

"I agree," continued the irrepressible Mushky, "but he has been living doormat for a long time, and its time someone took up the cudgels in his behalf. Now a lot of matters thats been held in abeyance will be taken in hand as a live wire and he'll high pressure them true"..... "It says in the pitchers rule book" continued that they can't be no publicity, comission or what not, but I think explicitly is alright but I am in favor of some of those fines for rough ball playing if when they help some one who is financially engrossed". Mushky's remarks have already interjected a Balance..... "If this is being financially engrossed, assemblies should be forgotten and the hatchet buried," came back "Mushky"..... "I can't understand," continued he corrected the listener..... "Have it your own way," retorted Mushky "I still think there should be no amenities. Everyone should pay their own way". "Yes, but" said the listener, "you're thinking of immunities, I think you mean". "Immunities is something else. I mean sending pall bearers to funerals and pointedas Mushky left the room.

* * *

And here Mushky broke out with the prize verbal package of the season when he said "I can't understand sensatic' puke bears is a fly's graveyard but what's a guy to be expected to do to get a hamburger".

The meeting was then adjourned.

TORONTO-OSHAWA BATTLE FOR TITLE NEAR CERTAINTY

Goodyears And G-Men Win From Brantford And Kitchener

LARGE SCORES

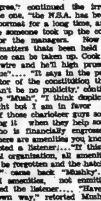
Brantford Team Weakened By Injuries To Squad

It looked like a Toronto-Oshawa battle for senior "A" honors in the Ontario Hockey Association today.

The teams were tied for first place with four points apiece but the Oshawa club had the better spot with three straight victories and no defeats against three wins and a defeat for the Habs.

Toronto's third victory came last night when Goodyears slapped a 4-3 defeat on Brantford Cordage in a thrilling record. Before the program was over seven Goodyears scored twice each. Desperate measures taken by the Redmen to stop the ever-pinging Goodyear attack. Goodyears only scored them 3-1 in the two minutes the Brantford team used a Six-Two ward offence to try and bring up their total.

While Brantior dint at Toronto the other senior "A" Western Ontario Hockey Circuit Greenshirts went down 7-1 before the onslaught of Oshawa's G-Men. Oshawa scored three times in the first period against Kitchener Greenshirts and twice in each of the remaining periods.

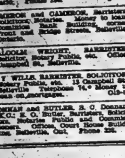


Port Colborne in Cellar.

The losses failed to disrupt the third-place tie gained by Greenshirts and Redmen when they fought to a 3-2 overtime draw earlier in the week. Down in the cellar and still without a win was the Isle Port Colborne colony. The sailors have lost to Goodyears and G-Men.

The Brantford team was weakened and disorganized when they faced off at Toronto. Red Dunn and Bobs Baird, Hamilton loomed-expected to join the club, failed to put in appearances and a delay of half an hour in starting the game was caused while Brantford tried to find them. They failed, however, and faced Goodyears with only two subs.

Benards, George Baumgart, regular goalkeeper, was out of action with a broken rib and Ray Krieger and Webster, members of the first string forward line, were missing due to injuries and ill health. Eddie King, Goodyears' doubtful starter because of an injured knee, was able to play a pair of goals for the Goodyear cause.



The other game marked the return to Kitchener of senior hockey after an absence of several years. Although strengthened by two Unitarian professionals, Roy Hooper, ex-Boston and Ned Kampman, Greenshirts failed to match the speedy play of the Oshawa club.

Quail in Oklahoma have a habit of quailing at this time of year, and here's one of the reasons, mighty Nimrod Carl Hubbell, ace of the Giants' staff is hunting near his home town, Meeker.

CATS DOGGIE WORK

A member of the United States biological survey says American cats of leafing on the job.

And to prove it he cites the fact that rats which still are supposed to exterminate, annually cause a property damage of $128,000,000.

The biological survey, apparently, expects every cat to do his or her duty.

Whether the failure of cats to live up to this expectation is due to indulgent owners stuffing them with canned salmon and other delicacies, which take the edge off their instinctive hatred, we leave to the pro-cutters and the anti-cutters to write about in the editorial columns.

The biological survey contents itself with pointing out that the cat is not a very satisfactory control to the rat situation.

Cool Before Storing

Mason first was focused that everything within sight inches of them is terribly sharp, beyond that everything is blurred. Within his range he is able to can see the pores in his skin and the holes in newsprint.

Removing his glasses, he can read the finest writing and recognize the smell sirskins in the "Anvil Chorus" from Verdi's Trovatore as recorded by Arthur Pryor's Band. He says that the path the needle takes in the disk is similar to him about the same as the track made by dragging a finger lightly over soft mud.

Mr. Mason can distinguish the impression made by Rudy Valley's voice because it is the less pronounced curve. When he sings "Stein Song" however, the record shows that loaf that the curves are more angular and sharp. Mr. Mason explains that this is due to a distinct staccato effect in the contrast with the singer's crooning style.

DIME NOVEL DAYS

Professor Albert Johannsen of the University of Chicago is going to compile a bibliography of the dime novel.

He has 4,500 of them in storage pending the start of his research soon, after his retirement March 31 from the Geological Department. For years, Professor Johannsen, now 63, has been collecting these dime novels but he has not read many of them, he explained.

"I get a kick out of trying to get a complete set of everything. When I was a kid all the fellows were reading these things."

He has found the tales of blood and thunder have some practical value.

"There was no sex immorality in them," he said. "The wicked were always punished and the good characters came out on top."

FROSTBITE

The first feeling of frost bite is numbness and the first sign is marble whiteness. Treat by rubbing the frozen area briskly with snow, ice or cold water, that is, if the frostbite has just occurred. If frozen more than 15 minutes, rub gently with cool water or kerosene. Do not rub hard or it will break frozen flesh.

George for a day will be pretty Miss Cheryl Walker, of Pasadena, who has been selected to ride with California's rose parade queen.

MAN SPOILS SHEEP

Long ago, before they had the misfortune to make man's acquaintance, sheep used to lie down, roll idly lay down to sleep, and felt all the better for it in the morning. But they slept, they lifted their feet, as self-conscious as celebrities at the movies, bought to lie down in the ground the old way but deterred from doing so by the fear that the ubiquitous camera will catch them at it. Poor, timid things are not the first to find that a high reputation can be a heavy burden. Daily, during the fall, sheepishness in the way they keep that reputation up, and if anybody casts an eye on it we can be quite sure that the elephants will not take it lying down.—London Times.

INSTALMENT 20

Fannie Roberts was a curious kind of person. Sandra's mother had brief silence. It was as if a muscle in her right cheek had suddenly gone dead. Then she suddenly relaxed again. Then Sandra was listening.

"But Bryant didn't die, Fannie. He's in hospital here in New York. He's going to get good-bye before Stephen and I leave. But I haven't had a chance to tell you, have I? Stephen Riley and I are to married tomorrow afternoon and go to Paris until September...."

To the end of her days Fannie would remember that the hour in which she had grown less intelligent than at any time in her entire life. "But I've got that kind of brain—if you want to call it a brain. Anyway, I can say as Matt Stanley...."

Sandra had said, "But Bryant didn't die, Fannie. He's in a hospital here in New York...."

So much Fannie heard...no more. She said, "Have you been reading the papers, Sandra?"

"No." Puzzled by the question, of course. "Why?"

"Then you haven't let me read the papers. I'm supposed to avoid excitement, and with Dr. Coleman in attendance I'm supposed to do as I'm told. Sandra, you're not going to tell me that Bryant Chilton is in hospital here in New York?"

"Yes, he is. He's got a bad leg wound, but it's not only dead; there's a squabble over his estate. You know, he's going to go school and the will of Wilson went down with his boat...."

Again there was that sharp twitch in Sandra's pale cheek. "Wilson? Who, Fannie—you're mistaken." But she was not looking at Fannie. She was looking into space, seeing the half dark interior of a small cruiser, hearing the voice of Wilson and that legs—seeing Bryant Wilson sitting on his bunk, nursing his left leg, his head lolling face down in the water. A seeing him drowned, not once but more, unconscious, an open gash on the side of his head. Mrs. Mason had said, "Sandra, you must vividly....And then, as all this was in the past, she was in the hospital and at home since were suddenly revealed as lies, she saw Stephen Riley.

Fannie Roberts caught her as she fell.

Stephen waited half an hour. He would have gone in but he couldn't remember the name of the hotel. When he saw Sandra coming out of the hotel door, he knew something was radically wrong when she was still a dozen paces away, by the expression on her face and said, "What is it, Sandra? And seeing that she was not looking at him: "You're ill, darling."

She was in the car then. She nodded. "Let's go home, Stephen," she sat very still. Her face was like stone. "If you don't mind, I'd rather not talk."

"All right, darling. I'm terribly sorry."

When they came to the apartment she looked up at him. "I'll come in. "I may call you—later in the day." She said, and went in and shut the door.

Enid was out, making such simple arrangements as she deemed necessary for a wedding that was to take place in forty hours, and with only the immediate family present. Sandra sat in the living room with her hat on and her coat on, very still. At intervals of ten seconds she could feel a muscle in her right cheek, tightened and relaxed.

At last she went to the telephone and called David at the office. When he heard her voice he said, "Darling, I'll be home in thirty minutes later, she was breathing as if she had run and that was coming from the French chest with her arms loaded.

"Sandra—what is all about? You sounded like a bad dream on the phone." She told him that Fannie and he asked no more questions.

"You were starting for New Hampshire when you left me," he said. "Can you get ready to start on—shop?"

Why—yes, I suppose so, but—"

He checked himself. "Oh, I see. My start's ready to go. I'll call Father and tell him—"

"No." She pointed to a larger bag than the one she was packing. "I'll need that, David. We have to go and put it in the car. You can take your own and I'll manage this one." She picked it up. "We haven't time to leave notes. Enid may come home with Fannie. I'll write a note to a scene today. Russell can give them a message and I'll write Chet and Stephen Riley a telegram."

David started from the room, turned back. "Sandra dear, you're sure you feel ok. for the trip? It's a long trek to New Hampshire.

She nodded to him, picked up the bag. She said, "You're wasting time, David."

"Right." He hurried along the hall toward the elevator, calling loudly, "H. Russell—front and center on the double...."

Whether the table was too low or the chair too high, Ronny couldn't decide. It was one or the other, though, because he wanted to cross his legs and couldn't manage it. And at the moment this was the most important consideration of a major obstacle in the path of progress, for he had promised to drive Lucille Baldwin over to Shadlake at four o'clock and it was now five minutes to four and this miserable editorial was just beginning to cross.

Lucille in the old days when he was covering sports for a Boston daily, Ronny had felt a little sorry for the paper's editorial whiters. Odd fellows and all that, but who wanted to spend his life plowing through subjects as dry as the Sahara desert when he could write about flying, colorful, dramatic happenings like baseball and football and hockey and a thousand and one other things that people could read and enjoy? Sitting there shoving cylinder words together wasn't a gift: it was a deadly dull chore. Maybe he'd be compelled to pick up the simple trick of it some day, but not while he was in possession of his normal faculties. Not, to content, before he was in his dotage.

After unbending and twisting for a full hour, he had literally cramped out two complete sentences. And having come to a dead-end, he had tried to cram his legs—and failed.

"What the heck!" he thought, irritably, "A fellow can't be crudite if he has to be carrying about his legs all the time."

He decided at last to make a fresh start. He had promised his mother to write this thing about Lucille as some sort of traffic light on the main siren and he had to do it, Lucille or no Lucille.

He rifled his pipe, held a match to the bowl and thumbed up an inch of copy paper—and saw Lucille standing in the doorway.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Editor. I wonder if I could interest you in a safety campaign. Many of our children must cross Main Street to go to school and the way the automobiles tear through town—now...."

Laughing, Ronny said, "I've just come to a decision, Lucille. Rather than bore you with a discussion of wards, I think I'll put on a uniform and go over here and cross the sands and a whistle." He rose, took his coat from the back of the chair and inserted the room in which he hat.

"But you can't leave until you've written it, Ronny," Lucille protested. "You run the paper off tonight, Mrs. Mason's birthday particularly wanted that editorial."

"It's all done, Lucille," Ronny said. "When we get back, I'll still have twelve hours before we go to press—and I'll do it in sixty hours."

Walking out to the car, Ronny looked down at her with a touch of admiration. She was wearing the tweed suit she had worn the day when she had come to his house for luncheon with the boy and girl and since then in almost days—the boy who had looked at Ronny with such open hostility that he could have forgotten a girl so definitely lovely, so unexpectedly companionable in a few hours together since he had found her standing in the rain. He had never brought into the sunlight, revealing new and unsuspected qualities he had not been sensitive before.

Lucille said as they left the town behind, "It's been a gorgeous day, hasn't it? Have you all morning, sitting there...in that dark little cubby-hole when you should have been getting your cheeks a chance to absorb some sunshine."

"Whats the matter with my complexion?" Ronny said, slightly, "I've got my voice back, haven't I?"

"Yo, Ronny, not your voice. You will get it back in time, of course, but you haven't just been used to belong to a circus barker."

"Now, Lucille, you're hurting my feelings. I'm a comfortable bed nights. Old age sloping up on me, I suppose."

"But you could have your voice back and still go on living in Maple Village. If you preferred that."

"I wonder if I could? I'm not so sure, Lucille. Once you get into the sort of game I was in, it isn't easy to break away. I suppose it's the fascination that canvas and sawdust holds fr rthe circus performer. It isn't the work or the money, but it's the life you can't get along without if you know you can have it for the asking."

They were in Shadlake more than an hour, when they came back toward Maple Village. Ronny turned his head and looked down the green full upon him, eyes in which there was patient wonder and some sympathy and a little fear and a deep leap in Ronny's veins.

Lucille said, "I'll wait awhile; there's no great rush." And with that settled in his mind, he braced himself for a long time-making. "Once upon a time I was going to be a big league baseball player and come home the first chance I had and marry you and take you down to New York to live....Do you want especially to live in New York, Lucille?"

She might have made it difficult for him, but she did not. She said, "I want especially to live where you live, Ronny—all the rest of my life."

He took her hand and held it, looking down at it, turning it over in his own. There was a fragile sweetness in this moment that required only the slightest touch of hands to weld this new-forged link between them.

"Her were driving to Maple Village, more Ironies. He's Carleton Kitts Macaulay, K. J. Inveptor...whose genius has produced 200 original paintings on which he has patents. The world's new type of lacquer said to approach the "perfect paint," but his inventive power's greatest field from dog biscuits to the materials used in spring aeroplanes—feminine—from incendiary bullets.

David Brooke," Ronny said, pleased, "and a girl."

You'll like this kid Lucille," Ronny had her in he parked the car. "She name is David Brooke and though he's as big as I am, he hasn't outgrown his father is one of the really first-rank lawyers in New York. They live in one of the smartest hives on Park avenue, but you won't find David terribly stuffy—not than any other six-footers." He thought, but did not say. "You'll like Mrs. Brooke, too. Gray-haired and handsome and lovely contemptuous eyes who married a man very much her age and probably would most any man who'd ever learned it up again if I hadn't learned something about Lucille."

As they started across the street, Lucille said, "Where's the girl?"

The reflected glare on the windshield blurred the face of Ronny not who sat behind it. Before Ronny could answer, David turned his head, saw them and came skipping toward them wearing the broadest of grins.

"Hi, Editor!"

"No imposition, you gadabout. Been waiting long?"

David was introduced Jo Lucille. A faint smile quivered on Sandra's face and she said, very quietly, "Hello, Ronny....Could you show me where to wash? I'm a bit tired of riding in this car, I think."

Ronny stared, stupidly. This wasn't Sandra. It couldn't be. Good God, what was the matter with? He took her hand at last, smiled mechanically and managed to Lucille.

"Bring David along in my car, will you, Lucille?" He spoke to that girl that he neglected to introduce them.

Hating David's car, Ronny said, "The nearest thing to a hotel in this town is on the first corner as you come—about a quarter of a mile down. My mother runs it."

Sandra was gone during the short ride. As they got out of the car Sandra said, "I'm sorry to bear about your mother's fall, Ronny. She's much improved, I hope."

"She's good and more than any of us thought possible a few weeks ago," Sandra. He said a moment later, "You aren't a stranger to her, Sandra." And realized a little resentfully that there was an implication he had not intended, a the words were welcome in this house. But a moment later he decided that he was wrong. Sandra's manner was welcome in this house. But a moment later he decided that he was wrong. Sandra's manner was welcome in this house.

"I might get to bed as quickly as possible, Ronny. Will you explain to your mother that I'm frightfully tired and that I'll see her in the morning?"

Ronny said, "Will you explain to your mother that I'm frightfully tired and that I'll see her in the morning?"

I'm tired. I'm—not very well."

Ronny's first thought when they were driving away from The Guardian office had been that she was pregnant, and that should never have been permitted to happen in the beneficial.

"Lucille is a trained nurse," he said. "She's staying for a while after Mom and she'll take you under her wing without waiting to be asked. I hope you'll like her, definitely, Sandra. This place is good but it's a dead one, too."

"Oh, but I can't—as much as I'd like to. We'll have to leave some time tomorrow."

But when David went back to New York a week later, he went alone. Sandra remained in bed the first four days. She was incredibly tired, and she slept and slept very little.

On the afternoon of the fourth day Ronny was sitting by the bed pretending to read, though actually because Lucille insisted Sandra should not be left alone. Whatever was troubling her whatever Sandra began to talk to him—about himself, Wilson and how they had deceived her at the hospital.

The world's No. 1 gadget-maker has caught Lucille Ball in one of his gadgeting moods, and from his efforts will probably emerge a gadget to make every-day life more livable. From the United States' "famed escape-proof" prison (top) on rocky Alcatraz Island off the coast of California, the two last-term convicts pictured below fled eluding both the guards which, patrol the walls and natural barriers of Mission, rocky shores and swift ocean currents which flow between Alcatraz and the mainland. The two are Theodore Cole (LEFT), and Ralph Roe, (RIGHT), both Oklahomans and both reputed as desperate criminals. An extensive manhunt was organized along the Pacific coast in an effort to track the men and coastguard and prison boats patrolled the waters of San Francisco Bay. It was not known whether the pair were aided by a boat, swam to the mainland, remained on the island or were swept out to sea by the ocean currents, and drowned. It was the first escape recorded from the grim federal prison which houses the nations most hardened criminals.

With the American flag flying over this new territory at the "Bottom of the world" congress passed a special act awarding him the medal.

To the north and the east lies the first area of Jap aggression in China, Korea in 1910, and Manchoukuo in 1931. The gradual, but steady advance of Jap forces in the newest theatre of war is thoroughly pictured.

They are the U.S. destroyer Mayrant (DD), McDougal (258), Balch (363) and Winslow (360), latest additions to Uncle Sam's first line of defence in the Pacific. These destroyers have the appearance of small cruisers. Capable of a speed of better than 35 knots, they have terrific hitting power. Note the twin turrets fo'ard, which house 5-inch guns. They also carry eight torpedo tubes. They are considered the most formidable craft afloat of their size.

Although the Alabama Crimson Tide, which meets California's Golden Bears in the annual Rose Bowl football classic at Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day, is the lightest yet the strongest team they've had. Offensively the 1936 team was a better aggregation, but the defensive ability of this year's football team more than atones for whatever they lack offensively. In Hershel Mosley, 154-pound sophomore, the Tide has a great star backfield performer. His strong right arm will be counted on heavily to do some of the passing in the East-West classic. He is pictured here ready to heave one of the Crimson Tide is Hal Hughes, 167-pound quarterback, who will be called upon to do some of the kicking. He is also pictured here, as he gets away a long kick.

CLUB NOTES

A new club called the Christmas Club was started around the lam jose Saturday morning, the idea being for all the members to give each other a Christmas present and the main rule being that everybody has to know what they are going to get from everybody else so they can agree to it in advance and save hard feelings. Among those joining was Benny Potts, Sid Hunt, Sam Cross, Glasses Magee, Shorty Judge and Fuds Simkins.

FAVORITE SOUNDS OF PROMINENT PEOPLE

Fuds Simkins. The wind whistling while he is nice and warm in bed.

Benny Potts. The reens goin Sam Cross. His fat uncle eating celery.

Skinny Martin. Himself gargeling.

Ed Wernick. Pennies rattleing in his pants pocket when he runs.

ODD INFORMATION

Cows never drink milk, shemsells, proberly believing it's more noble to give than what it is to receive.

Christmas takes exactly a year from the last Chrismas to come around again, seeming about 3 years to those expecting to receive most of the presents and only seeming about 2 months to those expecting to give most of them.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 11.—(CP)—Following an early upward movement in the golds, base metals and western oils, gains were reduced and profit-taking before the close of trading left the tone of the Toronto exchange. Mining shares and the western oils finished the day however with the margin on the up side. Trading was about as active in the previous sessions of the week.

Dome again featured the golds by pressing forward to a new high for more than a year at 36 1-2, trading actively. Around 3,000 shares changed hands in the short session and last at the day's high. Golds despite the last hour liquidation Buffalo-Ankerite marked a new all-time high.

International Nickel tightened up again to 46 1-4 at fractional gain and the close was higher for Noranda, Shattuck, Hudson Bay, Falconbridge, Coast Copper and Aldermac. Silver issues were steady.

Minor issues predominated in the industrial section. Banks, foods and papers were quiet and steady, steels sold higher and the utilities were irregularly lower. Ford A. C. P. R., Walker's common and Dominion Steel B posted gains.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 10 (CP)—Steels led the stock market in a selective rally today and many issues pushed up fractions to 2 points.

While closing prices were under the best in numerous instances, late profit and tax selling was well absorbed. Government concern over the critical Japanese situation involving bombing of the Panay, involving bombing of the Panay, program which would benefit especially steel and aircraft makers as well as other lines, also gave the issues a sharp drop in steel production was forecast for the next week due to shutdowns for Christmas.

Wall Street apparently was cheered by the side-tracking of the Wares and Hoare Bill in the United States Congress and possibility other so-called reform legislation may be postponed for the regular session. The shelved measure was particularly criticized in the financial district.

Dealings were slow from the start but picked up a bit in the final hour. Transfers were around 500,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT

The majority of traders are of the opinion that the market is in a healthy shape but are not making commitments at the moment for the reasons that the holidays are pending. Consequently it would not be at all surprising if a good demand developed for the better grade issues shortly after the turn of the year. The mere ease consistent decline of the past eight months has brought the majority of securities down to a level where the risk involved in purchasing them is small.

Drury & Thompson in their Market Letter, state that a stock with considerable speculative appeal at present prices is Massey-Harris: 5 per cent. preferred—now around 66. Income for the year ended November 30th, when released is likely to make a handsome showing as the company has officially announced that sales for the year were approximately 40 per cent ahead of the previous year. Outlook for the future is also promising. Income from domestic business which usually runs somewhat under 50 per cent. of total has been good in recent years due to drought conditions in the Canadian West. Sub-soil moisture conditions out there this year are better than for many years past and it appears likely that there is better than an even chance of a good crop next year.

A stock that is well liked in the Street at the present time is Royalite Oil. It is the informed opinion that the company boats large earning power, on which basis the issue appears attractive. Royalite could easily prove the feature of the next upward swing.

Gold is Being Purchased for Foreign Accounts Through The Canadian Banks.

A heavy demand for gold coins has been in evidence for some little time for the account of Amsterdam, Brussels and other European centres. The leading Canadian Chartered Banks have been purchasers in this connection. Just where this gold is eventually going is hard to say but interesting development may be in the making here.

INDEPENDENT CANNERS PAY OUT LARGE SUM

Two independent canning factories of Prince Edward County paid out $185,000.00 to their growers during the past season figures released yesterday disclosed. These figures are approximately double the total amount of the taxes of the entire county. One million dollars for canning factory produce was left by independent and other canning concerns with the growers of the county during 1927 which stone likes of the value of the industry to the rural and urban residents of the county.

Christmas Concerts

ST. MICHAEL'S ACADEMY

Christmas plays, Christmas music by a choir of eighty children, and by the Junior Band made an interesting feature of the annual concert held last evening in St. Michael's Academy auditorium.

A large audience was present and heartily enjoyed the entertainment whose excellence reflected credit on the careful training in dramatics and music by the Sisters of the school.

"Merry Christmas" in song welcomed the visitors to the school. This choir, a choir of girls, provided music throughout the evening and were heard in a series of Christmas carols. "No Room Within the City Gates," "They Came with Gifts for the Christ Child", "Sleep Holy Babe" and others.

Scenes from the "Christmas Carol" were presented in a splendid manner by senior boys. Those taking part were:

Reader—Terry McCabe.
Scrooge—Patrick Leary.
Scrooge's nephew—John O'Connor
Scrooge's Clerk—Fred Doyle.
Marley's Ghost—Francis Robertson.

Among the special numbers on the program, given between acts of the dramas were a vocal duet, Robert Fluery and Carol Kiser; song and dance by Catherine and Mildred Grant and Catherine Barrett; recitation by Gordon Baird; piano duet by Anna Mober and Catherine Harris; piano duet by James Jenkins and Jack Allen and a dance by Catherine Grant.

The play of Christmas was beautifully told in a play "The Star of Bethlehem" which took the audience in fancy to Bethlehem. The scenes depicted the exhaustion of the weary journey of St. Joseph and the Blessed Virgin, the shepherds, Balthazar and the tablets about the crib. The settings were beautifully done and the Nativity and girls taking part performed their roles in a delightful manner. The final scene was especially well done and made a picture that will long be remembered. The cast included:

The Blessed Virgin—Anna Mohamed.
St. Joseph—Edward Buckley.
The Prophet Izaiah—Donald Dell.
Second Angel—Carl Healey
Second Angel—Bernice Bennett.

Third Angel—Mary Dolan.
Shepherds—Francis Buckley, Gerald Healy, Harry Taylor.
Shepherd Boys—Roger Whyte, Joseph Barrett.
Kings—Thomas Haslip, James Sheridan, Douglas Johnson.
Pages—Eugene Brennan, Robert Rolland, Joseph Hunter, Donald Baird.
Herod—George Whalen.
Counsellor—Lauder Portier.
Herald—Hubert Mahon.
Dancers—Barbara Fluery, Alice Bennett, Lorraine Bell, Gertrude Wilkinson, Catherina Mober, Shirley Johnson.

Recitation before the Crib—Jas. Dell.

The Junior Band was heard in a number of selections and the increasing efficiency of the young musicians, especially those using the larger instruments is very noticeable. The work of the soloists is to be praised, particularly as the skill of the tiny players is amazing. The numbers, accompanied by a small orchestra, Wendy Boyle, included "Moonlight and Roses" with Bobby Young and Agnes Marie O'Connor as soloists; "Silent Night" with Bobby Young and Edward Barrett taking the solo parts and Col Jory March with John Briand, Edward Barrett, Bobby Mober and Agnes Marie O'Connor featured.

Adding a touch of comedy to the evening was the amusing sketch, "Mother Goose Land" which, those in this play were Ellen Doyle, Joan Fahey, Mary Dolan, Wendy Boyle and Mary Agnes Wilkinson.

The best wishes of the Academy and the Christmas season to friends were expressed by Joseph Hunter and were followed by the National Anthem.

After receiving an injured back in the semi-final rugby game of the season with Sarnia Imperials, Annis Stukus, of Toronto Argonauts, Dominion rugby champions of 1927, had to be content with listening to the east-west title game, between Argos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers, via the air waves. He is pictured here listening to the game over the radio, and from the expression on his face, is delighted with the great showing of his teammates. Before his injury, "Big Stuke" shared the quarter-back duties with his younger brother, Bill.

Cobsdenons, left fullback of the Mamual high school soccer team, heads the ball and kicks at the same time in the game with Evander Childs at New York. His kick almost made a casualty of his teammate Hasmar, but the latter stepped away in time. After two extra scoreless periods the battle wound up in a 1-1 tie.

CHEAP HORSES BEST WINNERS

(By Alan Randal)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 10.—(CP) Man O' War set the racing tradition that the cheapest often are the best when they put up 1927 winnings alongside cost prices of 1936's auction-sale gallopers 18 months after the former champion was right as usual.

Play Boy cost $5,000 in the Saratoga auction ring in 1918. In two seasons of showing Nellie— and the other competitors—he has earned the sizeable fortune of $249,465.7.

And the purchasers showed today that many bargains among the $19 yearlings auctioned at Saratoga and Lexington, Kentucky, track in 1936 were fastest down the pay-off stretch in 1927.

Contrariwise, many colts and fillies who looked like a million under the auctioneer's hammer and brought fancy prices proved to be "cats" because they left leaving the barrier.

Feminine Sheepers Good

A brown filly with dancing feet and no respect for the starting gate "Sheepskin" proved to be the season's best bargain, while two more fillies proved the truth of the adage, that feminine sheepers are the best bargains. Queen of the two-year-old fillies who cost Mrs. Edward Kennedy $1,000, won $21,713 in 1927, on percentage that was the bargain of yearlings.

Tiger won Mrs. Ethel V. Mars $54,795 but he cost $4,500 at auction. The Mistress of the Milky Way Farms plucked another plum in sky larking. The long-railed colt broke a leg at Belmont and had to be destroyed, but not before he had earned $41,135 against his cost of $13,500.

The Milky Way Farms enjoyed no "walkover" in their 1936 purchases however, Mrs. Mars paid $18,000 each for Warbridge and Parrish. Warbridge remains a maiden, unplaced in six starts while Parrish earned no by finishing 3rd in one of three starts.

COMPLAINT REACHES BROADCASTING COM.

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP)—The Canadian Radio Corporation said last night it had received a number of complaints regarding a broadcast last Sunday through its Toronto station CFRB of a sermon by Rev. Canon Mac West and actor Don Ameche reciting passages from the scriptures of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden.

An official said he did not believe the complaints would necessitate action by the Corporation as the National Broadcasting Company whose service the program originated already had tendered an apology.

The Corporation, he added, picked up the feature in Toronto only and had no control over the script.

MISTLETOE BANNED

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 13 (AP)—Two spots of mistletoe hanging over the University of Illinois campus created so much excitement among the students as the attendant of the university health officer, J. Howard Beard, learned.

Beard, he said, had traced colds and other disease to mistletoe. Mistletoe, he added, is "a public menace" and should be banned. "Mistletoe would be has a grande of at least 'D' in bacteriology."

The shrub is gone.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—Select hogs were steady at reported points today.

Liverpool: Hull $7.75 (no sales); Leeds $7.75 (no sales); Peterborough ; $7.90; Chatham $7.85.

Deadweight: Hull $18.60 (no sales); Kitchener $18.25; Leeds $18.25 (no sales); Peterboro $18.60; Chatham $18.

Here is pictured an exciting sprint for the ball in the international soccer match between England and Germany, won by England, 9 to 3. Hall (England) and Czyrosky (Czech.) are the sprinters and the play happened just in the front of the European eleven's goal. The game was played at Highbury, North London, before a large crowd.

THIRD GRANDSON FOR MUSSOLINI

East London, South Africa, Dec. 13 (CP-Havas)—Fifteen passengers and crew of 89 made their safely during a raging storm today as the 21,861-ton British liner Stuart Star, headed on the rocks near Shed Point Lighthouse, lay helpless and apparently doomed. Passengers and crew were taken off by a tug.

Rome, Dec. 13 (AP)—Countess Edda Mussolini Ciano, daughter of the Italian Premier, today gave birth to her third son, He was named Marzio.

The father, Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano, immediately informed Mussolini, who was overjoyed at the news.

PORT STANLEY DAM COLLAPSES; EIGHT KILLED

Thirteen "Muckers" at Work at Bottom of Dam But Five Escape

CAUSE IS UNKNOWN

Divers Being Sent Down in Mass of Wreckage to Recover Bodies

Port Stanley, Ont., Dec. 20—(CP)—Divers descended into 30 feet of murky water and worked through the tangled steel pilings and debris of the collapsed coffer dam here today in search of the dam engineer who lost their lives last night when the dam caved in.

Three bodies were recovered and brought to the surface. They were Douglas Beatty or Union, George Sealey of St. Thomas and C. Ellsley of St. Thomas.

Thirteen "muckers" were at work on the bottom of Kettle Creek when the protecting walls or interlocking piles of the dam collapsed and settled warning last night. The five who escaped death were injured. Even others, working on top of the 45-foot-long structure, were thrown into the water and rescued.

Cause is Unknown

Cause of the collapse was unknown. At 9:30 p.m.—10 minutes after an engineer of the Ontario Department of Highways had climbed the only stairway from the dam to report the work progressing satisfactorily—a crash resounded through the darkness, Lake Erie port seven miles south of St. Thomas. Within seconds, steel, timbers and water poured down on the trapped workers.

Timbers Folded Like Accordion Says Worker

Held Down by Water in Hip Boots; Buoyed by Water Rushing in From Dam

Editor's note: The following account of the collapse of a coffer dam at Port Stanley, Ont., was written for the Canadian Press by William Hume, 24, St. Thomas resident and veteran miner who survived the tragedy which took eight lives.

By WILLIAM HUME

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 20—(CP)—I was working on the abutment with George Beatty and his younger brother, George, was killed and the brother, James, trapped when I noticed the timbers. A split second later the whole thing collapsed and I started warning but I did not pay much attention to them.

I kept on working for another few minutes and had just knocked off when I noticed the timbers were bending like matchwood over my head. I never saw anything like it. I jumped to get away from one piece when the water hit me.

Struck by Ice

I tried to paddle about with my head, but my hip boots filled with water and held me down. I was struck by several pieces of ice. I started upward to try and reach the ladder when something hit me and knocked me to the bottom.

I gave up the ghost then and said goodbye to everything. Then the water began to churn and began to rise. I grabbed a cable and before I knew it I was at the top.

I coughed up the water I had swallowed and looked around. Some men were standing on the bridge. I could hear the screams of the poor fellows about me and then someone called me out of the water.

If I hadn't had those hip boots on I would have reached the surface in no time.

Water From Bottom

The water came in from the bottom and the ladder was first. If it had poured in from the top, the way it gushed from underneath, we would all have been dead.

We could have been out of the place if we'd just wanted. Timber kept cagged. Jim Sealey laughed at it, however, and jokingly told the men to get back to work.

When the crash did come, the 13 by 13 oak timbers folded up like an accordion. I shouted "come on boys. Get out," but it was too late.

GEN. LUDENDORFF COMMANDER IN GREAT WAR, DIES

Recovering From Bladder Ailment Heart Fails

AGED - 72 YEARS

Arch Enemy of Catholicism Dies in a Catholic Hospital

Munich, Dec. 20—(AP)—General Erich Ludendorff, 72-year-old hero of the German army in the World War, died today.

The Great War commander reportedly was conscious when death came.

Not on an infected bladder ailment but on his heart failed.

Ludendorff, the idol of more than three weeks, the aged soldier followed the same Spartan self-discipline that had made him a symbol to Germany's army, when he lost to Germany's Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg during the war.

By a strange coincidence, this arch enemy of Catholicism and ardent apostle of a new, Aryan Anti-Christian religion spent the final hours of his life attended by nuns in a Catholic hospital.

The choice of this hospital was dictated by Professor Ludwig Kleiluethner, who operated.

General Ludendorff would attend clients at no other institution.

Dressed in Translucent

The sudden relapse last night, however, shortly after the weekend consultation was unequal to absorbing transfused blood.

Chancellor Hitler and Marshal Werner von Blomberg, war minister of the Reich, attended Mme. Ludendorff condolences to Ludendorff's widow, Matilda, who had come to Munich made to be with her husband.

General Ludendorff died at 4 o'clock Hitler and colleagues with the thought that the last great beliefs of his life had been won—protection of his Germanic faith movement.

For a decade last May 31, Ludendorff's new religion, approaching Neo-Paganism, was put on an equal basis with the Catholic and Protestant faiths of which he was a bitter foe.

Official cognizance of the new faith, sponsored by Chancellor Hitler had ended years of misunderstanding and the start of a peace with Ludendorff's incisive pen and tongue had attacked Nazism as well as Catholicism and Protestantism.

Reconciliation Sealed Publicly

Reconciliation was sealed publicly during the Nazi's annual celebration of the beer cellar putsch in 1923, when Ludendorff's body was ailing and had undergone surgery.

"On the occasion of today's anniversary," telegraphed the chief to the leader who had marched with him at the head of the brown shirted columns in 1923, "I think with reverence and thankfulness to that hour of consecration, in the midst of our ranks for the rebuilding of the German Nation."

Ludendorff replied that of Von Hindenburg, who became the President of the republic, asked question of how far a popular hero's own burial wishes would be respected.

Ludendorff had written in his last days that he wished to be buried "at the holy source of German

Hepburn Makes Public Confidential Correspondence

PRIME MINISTER WILLING TO TABLE LETTERS IN HOUSE

Proviso Made That Premier Hepburn do Same in Legislature

DENIES STATEMENTS

Both Bixley And Dunning Take Part in Controversy Waging

Ottawa, Dec. 20—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his erstwhile supporter and co-worker in the Liberal Party, Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario faced each other today over a yawning gulf of discord which may further accentuate the question of power export, made wider by week-end exchanges.

Replying to political and personal charges voiced Saturday by Mr. Hepburn, claiming United States influence was dominant, Mr. Mackenzie King made a power policy and protesting alleged federal designs upon Ontario's sovereignty duty administration, the Prime Minister and two of his colleagues publicly denied last night.

Mr. Mackenzie King denied he had ever attempted to persuade Mr. Hepburn to change his views conceding with the St. Lawrence development, adding that he had formulated retreat of Ontario to support the project and that he had not used State trade barriers in retaliation.

Willing to Table Letters

The Prime Minister did not refer to Mr. Hepburn's declaration that Mr. Mackenzie King had exercised "his usual cunning" in inserting "conditional" letters that would

Waterways Documents Are Given to Newspapers As Two Premiers Confer

Hepburn Says Prime Minister Sought Assurance of Support

DIVERSION OF WATER

Premier Asked if Ontario is to be Dominated by Washington And Ottawa

Toronto, Dec. 20—(CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn today made public correspondence, marked confidential, between the Ontario and Dominion governments, relating to the St. Lawrence waterways project. Ontario's plan to divert water into the Great Lakes system.

The correspondence, which Prime Minister Mackenzie King said yesterday at Ottawa, would be tabled in the House of Commons during its coming session, was given to reporters at Mr. Hepburn's Premier-Maidrox Duplessis of Quebec went into conference at a downtown hotel.

Why Keep Public in Doubt?

Premier Hepburn accompanied the release with the following statement, detailed to reporters:

"In going to release the correspondence, Mr. King says he is going to release it in the House. Why keep the public in doubt a day longer?

"Mr. King now has a right to ask the impression that there has been no correspondence or conferences between himself and the government of the United States regarding the St. Lawrence waterway, and no correspondence between me and him, but in a letter dated November 13, 1937, he makes reference to both conferences and correspondence.

Public to Judge

"Mr. King refers specifically to a conference with me when he was on his way to the White House to be a guest of President Roosevelt and when he sought to secure from me assurance of support on the waterways plan and other matters to be discussed between himself and Mr. Roosevelt.

"The public can judge for itself as to which of us is nearer the truth.

"I wish to emphasize the seriousness of the situation created by Mr. King's refusal to attempt to secure declarations from the Leader of Loyal Lee and other waters. Not only would it be an aid to transportation but it would be a help to Canada's development and by increasing flow from the Detroit, Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers help handle the increasing problem of pollution by industrial wastes. Within the next few days 500,000,000 cfh has been killed in the waters of Buffalo, N.Y.

Ontario's Stand on Diversion

"Apart from the great areas of timber and pulpwood lands will stay inaccessible for development and power for which it will not be available. If the unauthorized Chicago diversion canal can lower the level of the lakes without international agreement, surely Ontario has the right to divert more water into the same chain of

Hepburn, Duplessis Resume Parley on Provincial Revenues

W. H. Moore, M. P., Joins Premiers at Toronto Conference

Toronto, Dec. 20 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, linked up on racial alleged federal encroachments on provincial revenues, today renewed their hotel-room conference started a week ago in Ottawa.

The two premiers, with cabinet members and officials were joined by W. H. Moore, M.P., Peterborough riding, former chairman of the Tariff Board, and known to be a close adviser of Premier Hepburn on economic problems.

Present Day Problems.

At the conclusion of the Montreal conference it was announced agreement had been reached in principle on matters being discussed and decisions were to be attended to at the Toronto meeting. Mr. Hepburn announced no statement would be made today. There might be one tomorrow night when the conference ends.

Mr. Duplessis had little to say to the press before going into the conference. Asked what results might flow from it, he said:

"We are dealing with present day problems. We intended to the future when we reach it."

To Resist Federal Efforts.

It was understood that in so saying his remarks applied to efforts of the federal government to obtain succession duty revenues now accruing to the provinces. It was understood also, the present meeting would agree on the submission of the two provinces to the two provinces to the Rowell-Sirois provincial relations.

Also on the agenda was Quebec's proposal Ontario should again prohibit the export of pulpwood cut from crown lands. It was argued that prohibition of export would prevent the rule in Quebec, would result in busier Canadian newsprint mills.

Ontario formerly had such a prohibition but it was removed by the present government.

King-Hepburn Letters On Issue of Waterways

Toronto, Dec. 20 (CP)—Ontario's refusal to support Dominion inland waterways project, subject of correspondence between premiers of the Dominion and United States governments, was set forth in letters published today, correspondence made public by Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario.

In a letter addressed Nov. 25 to President Roosevelt, Premier King at Ottawa, Mr. Hepburn details Ontario's regarding the St. Lawrence project. In three concise paragraphs.

"Having finally arrived at a tentative arrangement with respect to a satisfactory solution of problems with Quebec companies, I am advised by the Hydro Commissioners and technicians that Ontario's power requirements have been taken care of for many, many years to come.

"We are, therefore, not in need of power now in my opinion, having in mind our acute railway problem, any additional avenue of transportation.

Hepburn's View.

"In my judgment the purchasing power of European and Asiatic countries will collapse with the continued dissipation of gold reserves for armament purposes and this investment will, as a consequence, witness an era of depression comparable to the one through which we have just passed."

Premier Hepburn's letter was in reply to a letter from Prime Minister King dated July 15, 1937. King said the Dominion government had been asked by the United States government if it was prepared to take up anew the St. Lawrence matter "and allied matters among which were mentioned the Niagara position and the possible diversion in Northern Ontario affecting the Great Lakes levels."

First Planned in 1934

The correspondence showed Ontario first planned diversion of Kenogami and Ogoki river water into Lake Superior in 1934. The federal government decided in 1935 that water so diverted would be considered as belonging to Canada and not to Ontario, as the province had asked.

On July 31, 1937, Provincial Secretary Harry C. Nixon wrote to Hon. Ferdinand Rinfret, Secretary of State, asking (1) permission to divert water into the Great Lakes system and (2) an agreement for the protection of Canada of the benefits of the diversion.

Prime Minister King set forth the Dominion government's position in a reply to Mr. Nixon, on Sept. 7. He said the suggested Long Lac diversion in Northwestern Ontario "would apparently require a formal agreement to be submitted direct to the United States Senate and to parliamentary approval here."

Mr. King's Letter

In discussing what he called the "practical chances" of obtaining a new treaty to replace international rules governing boundary waters, Mr. King wrote:

"The United States administration would be unwilling to sidetrack the St. Lawrence treaty for such an object. Even if negotiated, such a treaty would have less chance in the United States Senate than the International provisions now in effect in the St. Lawrence Treaty since practically it would be for Canada's benefit only so far as power is concerned.

"And while such a diversion into boundary waters would help both countries to be benefited, I cannot but feel it difficult to separate from the St. Lawrence Treaty provisions regarding the Chicago diversion and the compensation works questions."

KING TO RECEIVE ANTHONY EDEN

Report on Far Eastern Situation Will be Given

By PAUL-LOUIS BRET

London, Dec. 20 (CP-Havas)—The king will receive Foreign Secretary Eden at Buckingham Palace today to receive a report on the Far East situation.

It was suggested in some quarters that Mr. Eden's visit to the king might be in connection with the possibility of the dispatch of naval reinforcements to Singapore in the event the threat to Hong Kong and the defenses of the colonist has to be made when it meets Wednesday.

Assurance to interpellation in parliamentary circles, the dispatch of naval units to the Far East is a subject of dispute within the cabinet itself. The majority of the ministers are said to be opposed. Naval men take the same view, holding such a move would weaken British naval forces in other zones.

Prime Minister Chamberlain is said to favor the sending of ships because Australia is indicting upon it and because it is believed this would provide any needed naval support in the Singapore area.

In any case, reinforcements would be sent to Singapore and not farther east, it was learned on the coast, informed quarters believed.

Why the Weather?

Air conditioning referred! Everyone has heard of the "Black Hole" in Calcutta where 180 persons were confined in a space of 18 feet square and only 5 lived to see the morn. Modern experiments prove that if the contained air were circulated, the prisoners would have been released. They did not die of suffocation but of heat stroke—the air in their bodies was so warm it could not take off more heat. This shows the importance of even a slight breeze in summer. An air conditioner helps in winter to equalize the heat in a room. If the temperature may be 90 degrees at the ceiling and 61 degrees at the floor. The best room temperature is 68 degrees with 40 per cent. humidity.

THE WEATHER

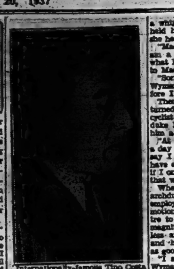
She Upbraided an Archduke

By AD SCHUSTER
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Mrs. Wyman Wyman got her newspaper folded quietly and crossed the room to her mirror. Then she walked back and forth fingering her rings nervously. Her secretary, had they been present, would have said she was really distressed. Mrs. Wyman Wyman knew that she was jealous and that her position as social leader in Bogleville was threatened.



"There is but one thing to do," she decided at last. "I will go abroad and that will give me some notice. Then, if things go right, I will return with a title. They tell me there are a lot of dukes, and counts in Europe who are not averse to marriage, dollars. Yes, I shall go to Europe, select a quiet and presentable title and simply wither that Mrs. Wentcotte."

That is how it happened that the society editor of the newspaper was informed of the plans for a European trip.

Mrs. Wyman Wyman lingered over her departure long enough to be the guest at farewell parties, and when at last she stood on the platform of an observation car, waving a gloved hand at Bogleville's finest, she felt she was on her way to triumph.

"But it would be just like that Wentcotte woman to try to undermine me while I am gone," she said.

It was in Vienna that Mrs. Wyman Wyman took up the search for Internationally-famous Tino Costa may be a great artist, but to Flora Angela Wolfe cop he was just a "pain in the neck," according to the latter's testimony when she charged Costa with battery and resisting an officer after he refused to hand him a parking ticket. The artist declared the officer was "very rude" while delivering the ticket to him. While the case proceeded Costa, seen in court, sketched the trial judge.

possessors of titles who might be interested in acquiring her charms and realty in Bogleville. For all of her confidence she felt a bit nervous as the ship city and what specimens of the nobility that she saw did not impress her. She went from house, viewing the stationery of various hotels, described the sleeping accommodations which she had attended and threw out hints concerning the sufficient incomes of those who had lost their crowns and sceptors in the shifting that came with peace after the war. But she did not catch her title.

One day Mrs. Wyman Wyman picked her way across a street holding her parasol in front of her. A motor cycle, coming furiously up the street, hit the parasol, reversed, covered against Bogleville's social leader, and forced her, gently and indignantly, to sit down. Mrs. Wyman Wyman gasped and turned purple. She had never seen anything so reckless and outrageous.

The motor cyclist apologized, but the lady would not listen. She told him what she thought of young men who endangered the safety of women and made tourists fear the streets. She called him a snip and a whippersnap and then, while she held her breath for a fresh start, she heard a bit of his apology.

"Madame," said he, "I am sorry." "Madame," said my lady, as soon as a gentleman. I will forgive you for the damage to Madam's costume, I am sorry." "Sorry—Middlebrook!" said Mrs. Wyman Wyman. "How go away before I have you arrested."

Then she looked at the card and turned a yellow green. The motor cyclist was none other than Archduke Leolin! And she had called him a snip!

"Archduke!" she gasped after a while. "Archduke! Why, I can say I have met an archduke and have even conversed with him. And if I only knew what an opportunity that would have been."

Then she discovered that the archduke was penniless and was employed as a manager to learn motion picture films from one theater to another. He saw again the magnitude of her mistake. A penniless archduke before her money! Surely he would have been as good as captured.

"I am going home," said Mrs. Wyman Wyman. "I have failed in the great social scheme I could not keep my temper. I serves me right for ballyragging the man on the middle of the street that way. Well, I suppose Mrs. Wentcotte will get me out in the end this time and I must be content with second place."

So the chastened hunter of title went back to Bogleville prepared to make a quiet entry into the old life. She only hoped she was not entirely forgotten, that some of her dear ones in her own group would remain loyal. But she was afraid. The Wentcotte woman had had the opportunity and she was shrewd.

Bogleville's best were at the station to meet her. Cameras clicked and invitations were extended. Mrs. Wyman Wyman held her poise but this greeting was so much better than any she had expected, she could not help but wonder. Did they think she was bringing back a title? There must be some mistake. The Wentcotte woman must have given away the secret and it was the music to Mrs. Wyman Wyman's ears.

"My dear," the rival said, "we were afraid you might marry one of those foreigners and be lost to us. But when reports of that insolent archduke proved your splendid democracy I knew that you would 'come' again in all the papers, cabled over the world, we knew that you were coming back. You are really quite famous, you know."

"Oh, well," said Mrs. Wyman Wyman, "it was no more than the man deserved."

After all, it isn't everyone who can tell an archduke what she thinks of him.

The suspense and thrills are sustained at a terrific tempo, relieving now and then for a well-timed laugh. Particularly exciting are the spectacular battle scenes wherein hordes of Chinese bandits-rebels are attacked from the air by a fleet of planes diving meteor-like and spraying machine gun bullets! The climactic escape by armored car and plane, is certainly one of the most exciting and action-filled sequences ever filmed.

"A Star Is Born"

A real gala Hollywood premiere, complete with screaming throngs, searchlights, radio announcer and celebrities is one of the thrilling highlights of "A Star Is Born," technicolor production co-starring Janet Gaynor and Fredric March now playing s a grand revival hit at the Capitol.

William A. Wellman directed this glamorous story of Hollywood's "inside", which casts Janet as a little country girl who came to Hollywood in search of fame, faced the crushing odds of 100,000 to one and made good.

Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander are prominently featured in the the first up to the minute story to be filmed in technicolor, while others playing important roles are Owen Moore, Peggy Wood, Elizabeth Jenns and Edgar Kennedy.

Such world-famous Hollywood landmarks as the Trocadero, Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the Brown Derby and the Hillmore Bowl as it looks during the annual banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, are shown in natural color for the first time.

THE SPIRIT OF THE SEASON

This is Christmas week and the greatest festival of the year is at hand. Commemorating the noblest story of the world's history, that of the birth of One who the Christian Church and Christendom and most men and women who have heard of the life that was spent in Palestine, claim has more than any other influenced mankind, Christmas is considered the greatest gift humanity has received, in man's recognition of this goes man's increasing kindness to his fellowmen. It is the source of the gift-bringing of today, when a spirit which thinks of others dominates in good measure the lives and actions of millions. Through personal gifts, and through the gifts of organizations, presents to help to cheer and make others catch the glow of brotherhood which ought to rule human relations.

There are those who give personally and those who give through the great philanthropic and religious and social agencies. Some one has investigated the cases of those "others" and has included them in the list to be remembered at Christmas. It is a noble thing to have this mixture of personal and social giving. Those who make gifts at "white Christmas festivals" present their gifts indirectly and the receivers do not know the donors. In this case except the agency whether it be church, social club, fraternal bodies or such group as the firemen's association. But it is well that they feel how a kindly spirit has prompted these organizations with the welfare of others at heart to undertake these projects and to feel how every organization endeavors to carry out the will of Him whom Christians call Master.

Then there are those "others" who receive their gifts directly from the giver. There are many of these, the public does not know their number nor the number of the givers. Workers who take this personal interest gain a blessing and bestow a blessing.

The spirit of Christmas tends to forgetfulness of self, a principle which may well be carried out to the entire year. To observe Christmas properly of course would require that the spirit manifested at this season should mark the entire year.

FOR ECONOMIC KNOWLEDGE

Benefactions are made for many purposes, the latest one of great importance being that of ten million dollars for the investigation of economic problems.

Hamilton Spectator referring to the gift from Mr. Alfred Sloan for the increase and diffusion of economic knowledge "by such agencies as already exist" says it will undoubtedly serve a very useful purpose. "If it could be used to bring about some sort of uniformity in the thinking of economists themselves it would perhaps be even more valuable," says the Spectator.

"In the multitude of counsellors there is wisdom; but in the multitude of counsellors there is also confusion, unfortunately. The complaint of Professor Copeland, made recently at a meeting of the National Associatio nof Manufacturers in New York, for instance, to the effect that stumpage must be accepter as inevitable, and the only thing that can be done about it is to make a sort of Joseph-in-Egypt preparation for them, is not very encouraging.

"Then there are the multiplicity of theories and experiment which complicate, instead of simplifying the situation. So, we think, while fully admitting the need for popular instruction on economics, the benefits of the endowment should be extended also to some of the self-appointed experts whose power for mischief is so great. Or is it too much to hope that, when economic knowledge become general, the danger of false guides and false doctrine will be eliminated?"

Pleasures, riches, honor, and joy are sure to have care, disgrace, adversity, and affliction in their train. There is no pleasure without pain, no joy without sorrow. O, the folly of expecting lasting felicity in this vale of tears, or a paradise in a ruined world.—Gotthold.

The purest pleasures lie within the circle of useful occupation. Mere pleasure, sought outside usefulness is fraught with poison.—Henry Ward Beecher.

We all live in the hope of pleasing somebody; and the pleasure of pleasing ought to be greatest, and always will be greatest when our endeavors are exerted in consequence of our duty.—Johnson.

If you wish to please people, you must begin by understanding them.— Charles Reade.

ROMANCE

The country-side is glinting gold,
Decked in Autumn's tracery;
And o'er the lanes and meadows glow
The mystery of romance.

The bodding fields of ripening grain
In robes of golden-tan,
Surpassing rich in harvest yield,
Join Autumn's caravan.

The snow-white breast of homing dove,
The Autumn-scented trees,
The twilight brook down by the lane,
Are steeped in reveries.

And now, the full-beamed harvest-moon,
Young "Lovers' Lantern" bright,
Whose mystery heals my lonely heart,
Brings memories tonight!

—Mabel Black Myers.

THIS IS THE SEASON WHEN THE EYE IS OFTEN OFFENDED BY THE USE OF the abbreviation XMAS for Christmas. To use X for Christ is offensive and incorrect as has been frequently pointed out in the press. Oshawa Times refers editorially to this practise as follows:

"With the pre-Christmas announcements occupying a prominent place in the pages of the press these days, we are reminded that the abbreviating of the word Christmas is not good practice, is incorrect, is irreverent and should not be permitted in well-ordered newspaper offices.

"In this modern age of hurry and speed all of us are prone to take short cuts in our daily work, but the shortening of the word Christmas spells the appearance of one of the finest words in the whole English language. There is no occasion for abbreviating the word Christ, nor why abbreviate the longer word Christmas.

"Christmas is an event that appeals to nearly all, both non-believers as well as believers and signalizes much more than a religious observance. The word may take a fraction of a second longer to write; may take more space in an advertisement, but if you want to hold the respect of all your customers and friends, please spell it in full, Christmas."

ROUYN, QUEBEC, ONE OF CANADA'S NEWEST TOWNS, IS FEELING ITS GROWTH, so to speak. The Rouyn Chamber of Commerce has sponsored a Civic Centre for that community to include a market, public hall and skating rink. Right up to the minute is Rouyn. Most cities are now in the throes of providing every thing in the line of parks and so forth, but generally talk upon anything like a skating rink which might possibly prove a profitable venture besides providing social centres for good health and exercise and exchange of amenities. Quebec may or may not be going to Rouyn but it is sure that one little skating rink is not going to be sure that one little skating rink will not ruin Egypt any more than the building of many millions of dollars worth of precious minerals—stored it, did we say—Just sort of left it lying around loose for the first daredevil adventurer to take possession. Daredevil is right, for the hardy pioneers who brave the fly pests in summer, the ever-present danger of getting lost in the bush of being drowned in the white waters, or being frozen to death amid the snows of sub-zero winters, are entitled to every good thing which they can turn up.

FOLKS WHO GO ON WORLD CRUISES generally see what they are expected to see, follow the program mapped out for them and, generally speaking, have a grand time in a floating hotel, equipped with swimming pool bar, etc.—particularly bar—with the sea air as a guaranteed specific against headaches, or the morning-after blues. That Dollar Line cruiser which added an extra thrill to the program by slamming into a monsoon and being swept on a reef will give material for many tales of "When I was shipwrecked". Five hundred passengers taken off and herded upon a small tropical island must Pompeii sure provided thrills, with the added good fortune that plenty of help was near at hand, thanks to radio, and the weather moderated quickly. Shipwrecked on a tropical island during a world cruise —gee what a thrill! Lucky for the steamship companies that the thrill provided no fatalities or the world cruise business might experience a severe headache.

A Bookman Passes

Dr. Wilberforce Eames, for more than forty years connected with the New York Public Library, who died last Monday at the age of 82, was recognized as America's leading authority on books. Although he never reached high school he became highly educated, because he loved books, and eventually was honored by, scholars in many quarters. He was the author of several noted works on American bibliography. In obtaining his life story from the New York Times we find his life-long devotion to learning was as unselfseeking as that of a medieval monk working on his illuminated manuscripts in his cloister cell. He was little known to the public, but the world of scholars honored him as a master.

Mr. Eames once confessed that his career as bibliographer began when he was only 12 years old by his reading of Edward Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." He was so impressed by the hundreds of references given that he copied them all down with a view to further reading. The interest aroused continued strong enough so that a few years later he saved from his government salary as a mail carrier enough money to buy a set of the volume set of Universal History.

His love of books and his knowledge of them attracted the attention of a bookseller who offered him a job as a clerk in his book store.

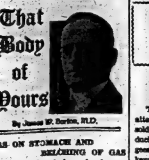
Young Eames was only 18 years old, but his fame quickly spread among other book lovers and he was sought out by scholars for advice and guidance. In 1885 when Mr. Eames was 30 he had attained such a reputation for knowledge of books and authors that Dr. George Henry Moore, head of the Lenox Library, invited him to become his personal assistant.

To a man of Mr. Eames's intellectual bent this was a golden opportunity. He did it capably, beginning his association which was to continue through his life. His position gave agent at the library, first as assistant to Dr. Moore, then librarian and bibliographer, gave him unrivaled opportunities to extend his knowledge of book lore and to make contacts with scholars in all parts of the world. This experience was him many friends.

Dr. Eames's home, where he lived alone, was so littered with books in every nook and corner that visitors often expressed surprise that the building did not collapse under the weight of them. In fact, Dr. Eames himself became worried on this subject and had the floors reinforced with concrete props.

As an authority he was looked to by friends of Dr. Eames of the time he found himself so crowded with books that he was unable to move about in comfort the volumes he desired. For a long time one of the rooms of his home was so cluttered with manuscripts that it was impossible for him to walk about or sit down in the room. The other rooms were also packed with books, and he could move any volumes to other parts of the house. He finally solved the problem by stringing a hammock from wall to wall about the books, and swinging to and fro, he consulted his ancient volumes to his heart's content.

Dr. Eames devoted much of the latter part of his life to corresponding with other learned men in all parts of the world in almost every language and on almost any literary subject. Although he had never travelled he had knowledge of many foreign tongues, including Chinese and Japanese and many of the Bantu dialects of Africa.



Few relaxation Dr. Eames loved to spend a day each week at the New York Historical Society, where he translated cuneiform inscriptions from Assyrian slabs. In 1931 the society bestowed upon him its highest honor, its gold medal, "in recognition of his scholarship and his unselfish devotion to the interests of all researchers in the field of American historical literature.

Dr. Eames was born in Newark on October 12, 1855. Soon after his birth his father moved his family to Jersey City, residence of an enthusiastic work began earlier by Josiah Quincy, Dublin called "Dictionary of Books Relating to America." In 1892, Dr. Eames was appointed librarian and in 1916 the part of official bibliographer of the New York Public Library was created for him by for him.

As bibliographer, Dr. Eames unearthed so many valuable historical facts that he was nicknamed "the Herodotus" of history. Others "Brown University, Harvard and the University of Michigan paid tribute to his amazing knowledge of books and general learning by conferring honorary degrees upon him. Learned societies have presented him with some of their most coveted honors.— Montreal Gazette.

When 300 passengers were turned away from the S.S. Monarch of Bermuda, 32 honeymoon couples were left high and dry. Epitomizing all 32 are Mr. and Mrs. Phillip J. Banning (BENWOO), of New York city, who are pictured in the midst of all their luggage. The line declined to carry the passengers on the cruise to the West Indies, after 350 members of the crew came down with influenza. Left out. With but a skeleton crew aboard, the ship sailed to fulfil schedules.
